RHODES SCHOLARS WON BELGIAN GIRLS

OXFORD, Oct. 20.—Many Americans at Oxford are wearing American flags or the insignia of the Belgian Relief Commission of the American Red Cross Corps since a correspondent of the 'Varsity Magazine mistook a group of them for "slackers," and wrote in criticism of Oxford patriotism. The Oxford roll of service includes more than 9,000 names. Of these men from 800 to 900 already have been killed, while virtually complete registration figures show 600 against a normal count of 4,000 undergraduates in residence, these 600 being to a man training for commissions, foreigners, or men unfit for military service.

The present year is one in which normally no American Rhodes scholars are elected, but about thirty of them who spent last year doing some form of war work now are beginning their first year of Oxford. A rather unexpected result of the work of these young Americans in Belgium and their role of heroes in Belgian eyes has been the announcement of a number of engagements to Belgian girls.

C. H. Carstairs of Philadelphia and London will shortly marry a girl living near Mons. T. R. Kittredge, who now is teaching history in the University of California, will return next summer and marry a girl of the Province of Limburg whom he met when bringing into Limburg the first cargo of American food to reach that part of Belgium.

Rhodes scholars now returning to Oxford have been in nearly every theatre of the war, sometimes facing one another from opposite sides of the lines. F. H. Gailor of Tennessee and Dorsey Stephens of California were in charge of relief work behind the German lines in Northern France only a few miles from where two classmates, Preston Lockwood of St. Louis and E. F. Hollman of California, were driving field ambulances behind the French trenches.

"Oh, no, to his uncle's will-power. He left everything to Marks."

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

What They Have Done

I suffered a great many years with kidney trouble; tried several remedies, and also doctors' medicine, with no result.

Two years ago I read an ad. in a newspaper of "GIN PILLS FOR THE KIDNEYS," and sent for two boxes. They did me more good than all the medicine I had ever taken. After I used the first two I sent for two more boxes, and I am satisfied, and also know, that Gin Pills are the best kidney remedy made.

I used to have to rise three or four times in the night; now I can sleep and don't like to get up at all, thanks to GIN PILLS. I am seventy-two years old. 24

Austro-Germans Preparing New Offensive Toward Suez Canal

RUSSIANS ARE ON OFFENSIVE ON THE NIEMEN-DVINSK

Force Moving Up Jnador Valley Appears at Milianovac—Austrian Army Unheralded Drives Wedge into Central Serbia

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Unheralded, practically ignored, in the kaleidoscopic changes in the Balkan theatre, a new force is bearing down rapidly on the main Serbian army and is closing to a narrow gap the only avenue of escape from the Austrian, German and Bulgarian columns pressing on all sides. This force is almost wholly Austrian and appeared Sunday at Milanovac at about the hour the town was occupied by German troops. Since crossing the Drina River near the mouth of the Jadar three days after the Teutonic invasion of Serbia began, the Austrians, about 60,000 strong, were swallowed up in the mountains which were the scene of their rout in midwinter. They have not appeared except early in their advance, in the official communiques, and the news despatches have ignored them. Opposed by a small Serb force, however, they moved swiftly up the valley of the Jadar, swept the adjacent mountains and, maintaining a general southeasterly direction, occupied Valjevo. From Valjevo they crossed the plateau at the headwaters of the Jadar and timed their appearance at Milanovac to coincide with the arrival of German columns which had advanced across the hills from Belgrade, forty miles to the north.

COLUMNS MAY DIVIDE.

Military observers believe the unction of the Austrian and German forces is not to continue as a joint movement. It is believed the Germans will swing to the east, southeast, through the Serb-Morava Valley and attempt to strike the Belgrade-Nish railroad near Djunis, eighteen miles north of Nish, while the Austrians will drive on south across the central mountains and the Jelica plateau to the Thar Valley and thus cut Serbia in two effectually preventing the retreat of the army in the Morava Valley to the west and its consequent escape into the Montenegrin fastnesses.

The Germans at Milanovac are less than twenty miles due west of Kragujevaatz, where the Serbian arsenal is situated. The main Austro-German army, under the direct command of Field Marshal von Mackensen, is on a front less than eight miles north and east of the town, and its occupation is regarded as a matter of only a few days. The Serbs are expected to utilize to the full its defensive facilities, but little hope is entertained that they will be able to hold out for long. They already have dismantled he arsenal plants and destroyed all the military stores they have been unable to send further to the rear, so the capture of the position will mean nothing but the surmounting of a well fortified, strongly situated point from which further operations can be directed.

OPENS MINERAL FIELDS.

The advance of the Germans east of the Morava has placed very valuable mineral deposits at the disposal of the great arms and ammunition factories of Austria-Hungary and Germany. This is particularly true of the occupancy of the Zejecar region by the Bulgars, who further to the north are in union with the Germans. For in the vicinity of Zajecar are rich deposits of copper and iron and highly important antimony. The field has not been extensively worked but the minerals are there ready to be taken out and transported in large quantities to the Central Empires. There is coal in abundance all through the mountains and a slightly further advance will lay open large zinc and lead mines to the German engineers.

The allied fleet in the Aegean Sea resumed its bombardment of the Bulgarian coast Sunday, but the official reports do not tell of a concentration at any one point which would be the prelude to landing operations. The Russian squadron, which shelled Varna and Burges on the Black Sea coast early last week, has not reappeared, but rumours, principally from German sources, continue to tell of a Russian fleet of transports bound for Varna. These rumours are not seriously regarded in authoritative quarters, due to the extreme difficulty of setting a force ashore at a point where the defences are as formidable as those of this Bulgar port.

VARNA'S IMPORTANCE TO RUSSIA.

The importance of Varna to any Russian expeditionary force lies in the fact that a canal has recently been constructed from the roadstead of the port to Lake Devno. This canal, is about one mile long and of sufficient depth to admit to the landlocked water of Devna Lake large steamers. Quays and modern dock facilities have lately been constructed, and vessels can now discharge, it is said, right from the quay to towns alongside. From Varna there is direct railroad connection to the Danube. This same railway line leads by a branch route to Plevna and thence to Sofia, and a Russian advance along this railroad would interfere effectively against a Teuton drive along the main Orient line toward Constantinople.

In military circles the opinion is entertained that the Allied forces may elect to block the advance of the Germans in much the same manner as the Turks did when opposing the advance of the Russians in the Russo-Turkish war. The Germans now possess the advantages of the Danube as a means of transport as far as Brza-Palanke. Between Orsova the terminus of the railway in Hungary and Brza-Palanke, the Danube traverses the Iron Gate. A canal has been cut on the Serbian side of the river, which now passes steamboat and barges around this dangerous portion of the river. The Iron Gate's stretch is now held by the Germans.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Abandonment of lightning-rod cable on street car lines, so that the copper may be obtained for war purposes, has been ordered by the municipality of Kiel, Germany, according to a Reuter dispatch from Copenhagen, which says that the work of tearing up three streets for this purpose has begun, and that about 3,000 yards of cable, weighing approximately seven tons, will thus be available.

Women Have The "Stirring" Habit.

Women have found it necessary to stir so many things when cooking, that they have acquired the stirring habit and seemingly want to stir everything. Dr. Jackson, the inventor of Roman Meal, says that he has a hard time in trying to persuade women not to stir Roman Meal. The directions plainly state that Roman Meal porridge is spoiled if stirred, but women soon forget about the directions and fall into the stirring habit. The doctor thinks he may possibly have to ask grocers to distribute to their customers big cards for hanging in kitchens. These cards would have "Please Do Not Stir Roman Meal" printed in large letters.

Ladies, are you really going to make the doctor do this?

TIEPOLO'S FRESCO WHOLLY RUINED.

ROME, via Paris, Oct. 28.—An examination of the famous Scalzi Church in Venice, which suffered in the recent raid on the city, at first shows that the first bomb fell in the left nave. It demolished two beams and pierced the ceiling, which was entirely destroyed by the second bomb. Not a fog of Tiepolo's magnificent fresco remains intact, and it is considered virtually impossible to restore even a small part of the master piece.

MONEY AND A MAID

And a Financial Deal That Had a Curious Climax.

AN EXPERIMENT IN SAVING.

It Looked as Though the Plan Proposed by Papa Was Doomed to Failure, but the Little Lassie Had a Big Surprise For Her Fond Parent.

It is not necessary to mention her name, but it is of interest to note that she is the daughter of one of "the first families of Virginia," and one characteristic of these same first families is apt to be an utter carelessness of that which pays for your daily bread and mine and which keeps us all out of the poorhouse—money.

She was just rising eleven, this little maid, two years ago when her father first noted her lack of interest in things financial. Starting as a barefoot boy because of the prodigality of his progenitors, he had drifted north, worked for a scant living at whatever he could get to do, developed an ability, studied, worked and climbed until at last he found himself a success and was able to spend about $10,000 a year for the maintenance of himself and the wife and child he had accumulated. Then said the wise papa to himself, remembering his days of poverty and stress, "I must teach her to save."

He tried several plans, all of which failed to have any good effect. Just a year ago he hit upon a scheme which seemed to have merit.

"Here, Boots," he said, "I want to make a proposition to you. This is what I propose: I will give you a brand new dollar bill every Saturday night, and I will write the date upon each one. At the end of the year I want you to show me how many of those actual dollar bills you have, and for every one you can show me I will give you two. Do you think you can make money that way?"

The child thought she could and repeated the conditions as well as her mind grasped them, but her father thought she did not get them accurately.

"Wait," he said; "I'll write it out so that there cannot be any error."

So he wrote:

"I will give you a new one dollar bill every Saturday night. I will write the date on each one as I give it to you. For every such bill that you can show me at the end of the year I will give you two others." Then he signed it.

There was a dearth of childish funds for awhile in that household and not a few efforts on the part of the daughter to extort money from her mother, who was wise and refused accommodation. But some way, it did not then transpire how, the little girl dug herself out of penury and into comparative affluence and that without meaning to exercise guile. She seemed to have money in her purse and was quite able to hold up her end at the soda fountain or wherever else her little friends gathered, and her parents, who said nothing at all about it to her, wondered and speculated, finally agreeing that Boots was spending at least a large part of her allowance.

The dollar bill came every week, duly inscribed with the date of the gift, and was accepted by the little maiden with appropriate thanks. Then came the Christmas holidays, and the parents wondered if she would save her money or remember them. She remembered them, but not with much expenditure. Then came the last of the fiscal year, and the father inscribed another note and turned it over to her.

"Now, Boots," he said, "I have given you fifty-two of these, and I promised you two for every one you could show me at the end of the year. How many have you?"

"I'll get them for you," said the innocent child and ran away.

The old folks had a laugh between themselves while she was gone, thinking that she would exhibit two or three bills and fully believing that the experiment had failed. Then in came the daughter. She laid a sheaf of bills down before her father.

He counted them—fifty-two! All unused and bearing his indorsement of the date of gift. Among them was the agreement written by her father.

"Now, how much do you owe me?" she asked.

"I reckon I owe you $104," he said, "but I cannot see how you managed to save every one of these bills and yet had all the money you have spent."

"Well, pop," she answered, "it's this way. I told Joe one time that I couldn't spend any money, although I had it, and he asked me why. I told him and showed him what you had written. Then he made me what you call a proposition.

"He has an allowance of $2 a week. He said he would give me 70 cents a week if I would keep all the bills and give them to him at the end of the year after showing them to you. It's a perfectly fair agreement. I have had my 70 cents a week, I show the bills, you give me $104 and I turn over to him the $52. He makes $15.00, and I make $104. And I don't have to be poor or broke."

Let those who would affect singularity with success first determine to be very virtuous, and they will be sure to be very singular.—Walter Colton.

Advantage of Credit.

"My big sister has a beau."

"So's mine, but I don't like him."

"Know what my sister 'd do if I didn't like her beau?"

"No. What'd she do?"

"She'd send him back and get him changed, 'cause we've got a charge account at the store he comes from."

Nautical Information.

"By the way, captain," said the sweet young thing on the second day out, with a smiling attempt to be chummy, "where does Mother Carey feed her chickens?"

"In the trough of the sea, young woman," replied the captain of the ocean liner, with solemn dignity.

How To Make the Quickest, Simplest Cough Remedy

Much Better than the Ready-Made Kind and You Save $2. Fully Guaranteed

This home-made cough syrup is now used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Its promptness, ease and certainty in conquering distressing coughs, chest and throat colds is really remarkable. You can actually feel it take hold. A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough—relieves even whooping cough quickly. Splendid, too, for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, bronchial asthma and winter coughs.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you, at a cost of only 54 cents, 16 ounces of better cough syrup than you could buy for $2.50. Takes but a few minutes to prepare. Full directions with Pinex. Tastes good and never spoils.

You will be pleasantly surprised to note how quickly it loosens dry, hoarse or tight coughs, and heals the inflamed membranes in a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, which is so healing to the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, be sure and ask your druggist for "2½ ounces Pinex," and don't accept anything else.

KING AND PRINCESS MARY ON HORSEBACK — King George photographed recently on horseback riding with Princess Mary. The King's accident, while reviewing the troops in France, is deplorable.

MEAT SUBSTITUTES.

Cheese Rarebit.—One - fourth pound grated Canadian cheese, two tablespoonfuls of butter; place butter in pan over slow fire; when melted turn in cheese, stir, until all is melted, slowly. Salt and pepper to taste (use cayenne pepper). Have four eggs beaten very light; then whip them into the cheese. Cook until mixture will hold its shape when dropped from a spoon. Drop on greased pan, garnish with breadcrumbs, dot with butter, set in oven to brown. Serve with tomato sauce.

Cheese Canapes.—To two tablespoonfuls of melted butter add one teaspoonful each of salt, paprika, and mustard; stir in two cupfuls of grated cheese, half a cupful of soft breadcrumbs, and one cupful of milk. Let all cook together for five minutes and then add two well-beaten eggs. Do not cook long after the eggs are added. This is a very rich and highly concentrated food, and one must serve with it plenty of good toast of whole wheat bread in order to give sufficient bulk.

Cheese Balls.—One cupful of grated cheese, one-half cupful of fine breadcrumbs, five drops of Worcestershire sauce, egg well beaten. Mix together, roll into small balls and just before time to serve plunge into hot fat. Fry delicate brown. To be served hot with salad.

Qualities of Guncotton.

If someone should place a wad of guncotton on the palm of your hand and threaten to touch it off with a lighted match, you would be frightened. Yet you need not be, although guncotton is one of the most powerful of ordinary explosives, it would not hurt you.

When dry guncotton is exposed to the air it does not explode when ignited, but burns with great rapidity. So rapidly does the burning take place that if a loose wad of the material be held in the hand and touched with fire, there is a sudden flash, and an instant later not a trace of smoke or a mark on the hand remains to indicate what has taken place. Guncotton does not detonate unless it is confined, as in the barrel of a gun.

When dry, however, guncotton can be made to explode with great violence by being struck sharply between two hard surfaces. Detonation, as such an explosion is called, is quite a different phenomenon from burning. It seems to consist in the instantaneous disintegration of the molecules of the exploding substance. It is as though all the bricks in a great building were in a fraction of a second to be scattered about.

Tactful.

A musical conductor was trying the voice of a young woman who wished to secure a place in an opera troupe. The manager was standing by. The candidate was frail and timid. She finished her song with an air of distress.

"How is it?" asked the manager unceremoniously.

The conductor caught the pleading eyes of the girl, but he had his duty to perform. He struck three notes on the piano and left the rest to the manager.

The three notes were B A D.

NEGLECTED COLDS VERY OFTEN TURN TO CONSUMPTION.

Never neglect what at first seems to be but a slight cold. Your head becomes stuffed up; you start to cough; an irritation in the throat follows; it gets lower down; settles on the lungs; you start to raise phlegm of a greenish, yellowish color sometimes streaked with blood, and you cough persistently.

You think perhaps you are strong enough to fight off this trouble, but colds are not easily fought off in this northern climate. Colds if not attended to will sooner or later develop into some serious lung trouble.

Mrs. Willis H. Monk, Lower Ship Harbor, N.S., writes: "Last winter I took a severe cold on my lungs, and I would cough and spit up phlegm and blood. I had the cough for nearly a month, and I got medicine from the doctor, but it did me no good. I thought I had consumption. My friends advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I did, and it gave me great relief. I am the mother of ten children, and I always keep a bottle of 'Dr. Wood's' in the house. I will highly recommend it to all, especially to all who have little ones to care for."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the best cure for coughs and colds. It has been on the market for the past twenty-five years. It is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

Seized With Paralysis Could Not Walk

Most Extraordinary Cure Effected by the Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

To have the nervous system paralyzed, to be unable to walk and scarcely able to talk, and then to be completely cured, is not a usual experience, but Mr. Hyatt tells in this letter what he passed through. Doctors told him that his case was hopeless, and when they gave up he turned to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and obtained complete cure.

Mr. Avery Hyatt, blacksmith, St. Anns, Lincoln Co., Ont., writes: "I am a blacksmith by trade and ten years ago became afflicted with paralysis. I could not walk or read or write, and could talk with difficulty, so that it was a hard matter to understand anything that I would say. Being only a young man I was nearly discouraged. Two doctors told me it was brought on by overwork, and that my case was hopeless.

"One day my father read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and advised me to try it. I bought 12 boxes, and when the fifth was used I saw that I was getting better. By the time the 12 boxes were used I was cured. I am well and strong and working every day, thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Elmon J. Hodgkins, J.P.

No ailment is more dreaded than paralysis. And yet how few people realize that paralysis of the nerves is only the natural result of neglected nervous troubles.

At first you do not sleep well, have nervous headaches or indigestion, find yourself easily irritated and annoyed, can hear noises which in good health you would never notice. You do not consider yourself sick, and yet you lack the usual energy and vigour and feel out of sorts.

Restore the nerves by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Criticism.

Many an unpleasant thing needs to be done in a pleasant way. Teachers and parents and people in business life who are responsible for the work of others must from time to time speak in criticism or point out how an improvement can be made in the way of doing things. Such a word of criticism or correction or of suggested improvement can have the effect of being either a shove down or a lift up. The word can be spoken with a disarming smile of reassurance or a hard and discouraging look of condemnation. And the heartening, lifting, smiling word of admonition or suggestion brings a hundred per cent. better response than the other sort. It gets the very results that we are after, while the world that antagonizes is liable to defeat the whole thing.—Exchange.

Squashed the Gossip.

Residing in a little village is a lawyer who is famous for drawing wills, in which branch of business he has long enjoyed a monopoly of the country for miles around.

A few months since a wealthy man died. There was much speculation as to the value of the property, and the town gossip set about to find out the fact. He hunted up the lawyer, and, after a few preliminary remarks about the deceased, he said, rather bluntly:

"I suppose you made Brown's will?"

"Yes."

"Then you probably know how much he left. Would you mind telling me?"

Time Yet.

She was a poor lone widow once more, for she had just buried a husband for the third time

Calling to condole with the bereaved parishioner, the minister touched on the many gifts and graces of her dear departed, and said, by way of parting word:

"Be comforted, then, dear madam, in your great affliction It is doubtless a heavy burden to bear, but it must be a sources of great consolation to you that you do not sorrow as one who has no hope."

"Deed it is, minister," said the bereaved lady, drying her eyes. "He was a guid man, was John; but I'm not that auld yet, an', as you say, I've aye the hopes o' gettin' another one."

GREAT IDEA.

No, the youngster replied "take a peep in there.

"What in the world are you going to do with them?" asked the old gent.

So, I understand, replied the old gent.

"Well," said the boy, "I'm fooling a few of them

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S TUNIC SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

Double and triple skirts are the rage of the moment, and they are specially suited to soft materials which belong to the present season. Such a model as the one illustrated is a compelling illustration of these truly up to date fashions. Added to this feature it has possibilities in the way of changes which may be rung on the two designs in a single pattern.

As a foundation there is a three gore petticoat, and this may be made with either the raised or the regulation waistline, the higher waist being generally preferred in any draped garment. The tunic is gathered at the top and may be attached to the top of the waistband or cut off and perforated and set on the skirt when done. Above it the material may be left with only the underskirt showing, or yokes, which are provided in the pattern, may be applied.

The idea of the applied yokes is particularly good when taffetas is used either alone or with voile, for the yokes and drop skirt may be of taffetas and the softer fabric used for the tunic. Again it is possible to make the yokes of a striped or figured material, while the underskirt is plain, and still a third fabric is employed for the tunic.

Taffetas is so popular and is now made so soft and uncrushable that it is suitable for the tunic as well as for the underskirt, while the many cotton voiles and similar weaves furnish ample field for selection for a thin dress.

The skirt pattern, No. 7276, is cut in sizes 22 to 32 inches waist measure. Medium size requires for tunic, with or without yokes, 3⅞ yards of 40 inch bordered material; for underskirt 2⅝ yards of either 36 or 40 inch width.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c

FLED FROM BELGIUM IN PEASANT'S DRESS

Mrs. Malcolm Carter Escaped in the disguise of cheese Buyer's Assistant.

MISSING THOUGHT HER A SPY

NEW YORK, October 30.—Mrs. Malcolm Carter, a British subject, who arrived from Liverpool on the White Star liner Adriatic told an interesting story of her escape from Belgium into Holland disguised as a peasant woman after her passport had been torn up by the orders of General von Bissing, the German Military Governor. She wore a decoration consisting of a gold crown with the initial "B" in diamonds and the Belgian colours, which had been given to her by King Albert for her services to his army.

Mrs. Carter says that she is the Assistant secretary to the Asiles des Soldats Invalides, an institution recently established in Belgium to aid disabled soldiers.

In an interview with a reporter, while the Adriatic was coming up the harbour, Mrs. Carter said she went to Brussels early in the summer to visit her father, who was suffering from cancer, and was held by the Germans in that city. She got into Belgium with an American passport, obtained through the Embassy in London as a special messenger to the United States Legation in Brussels. When she visited her father there before he was to undergo an operation, her passport was taken away and torn up.

"Because of my Belgian birth," Mrs Carter went on to say, "and my being married to an Englishman, I was suspected of being a spy, and was detained three months in Brussels by the German authorities. Through the influence of relatives I managed to obtain a passport to leave Belgium for Holland from General von der Goltz, but that was declared to be of no use and was torn up like the first one.

"Finally, I became nervous at being shadowed everywhere I went and decided that the only way to escape was to disguise myself as a Flemish peasant. I was acquainted with a travelling cheese buyer, who was starting from Antwerp with his cart towards Salvliet, where I knew there were some Dutch smugglers always to be found, who would see me to the frontier.

"The cheese merchant gave me a seat beside him in his cart and I passed as his daughter when we were stopped by the German sentries at the different posts along the road. My friend had to stop five miles from Salvliet, and I walked the rest of the distance with an old basket over my arm half filled with straw to disarm suspicion. On arriving at the small town through which was my only way into Holland I met some of the Dutch smugglers, who were very kind, and hid me in a stable until it was dark, and then we started to tramp to Ossenbrecht, the first town in Holland, which I reached in 11 hours, thoroughly worn out.

"I shall never forget that experience as long as I live. Sometimes we had to crawl on all fours through the dame long grass like Indians, and at others wade through swamps full of reeds, where the water and the mud were knee deep. At last when I was almost exhausted we reached the barbed wire entanglements, and that was the most difficult of all, as the smugglers could not cut the wires. By the aid of stout poles we managed to twist them wide enough apart to drag me through. When I reached Ossenbrecht and realised that I was safe at last, I had some bread and milk and slept for twenty hours."

Mrs. Carter said that she could never have escaped from Belgium if she had not been able to speak Flemish fluently; it was the only thing that enabled her to pass the German sentries.

"The Germans," she said, "have undermined the Palace of Justice, and the North South, and Luxembourg railway stations in Brussels, and the majority of the hotels and restaurants formerly patronized by the Americans, are closed

Colds & Common Sense

You have a cold, or your child has a cold: a cough, a tight feeling across the chest, a soreness in the breathing tubes.

In the past how have you treated such? You have bought some cough mixture, and swallowed this down into your stomach. Now, why? Your stomach was not ailing; and there is no direct connection between your chest (where the trouble is) and your stomach! Then why swallow into your stomach any mixture when the trouble is in your lungs and bronchial tubes?

It's a mistake: a. Peps is the remedy provided to correct this un-commonsense treatment. Peps are little tablets, which contain highly beneficial Pine essences, combined with other medicinal extracts. These healing extracts are so prepared that as soon as you put a Pep into your mouth they are liberated in the form of healing vapors. You breathe these vapors down to the throat and lungs, and thus treat the organs that are inflamed, direct. In a way, it is like breathing from a vaporizer or bronchitis kettle, except that there is no apparatus needed, the little Peps providing everything needful for the treatment! The very small portion of Peps which you swallow has a slightly tonic effect upon the stomach and does you good, but the use of Peps is not for stomach troubles, but for lung, throat and bronchial troubles. Peps cure these as no ordinary treatment can.

Children like Peps and they are best for the little ones because Peps contain no morphine, laudanum or other poison found in so many of the old cough mixtures

Druggists and stores everywhere sell Peps 50c. box or from Peps Co., Toronto, for price. Remember the name—four letters only:

ONLY M. P.'S CAN TREAT.

LONDON, Oct. 29. The House of Commons bar, being exempt from all licensing regulations and restrictions is the only one in London where the new no-treating ordinance may be ignored. Members of Parliament therefore can treat one another for the full round of the clock, so long as they keep within the precincts of their official headquarters.

Some of the new-papers, however, urge that, "at a time like the present" it would seem a matter of good taste for the members not to take advantage of their exceptional privileges.

"When the whole nation is curbing its appetites and stinting itself," suggests the Pall Mall Gazette, "we look to the lawmakers to stand behind their laws and to come into line with the rest of the community in observing them."

"How" asked the old gent

"I'm going to send them up the telegraph pole," insisted the boy

MOTHER! DON'T TAKE CHANCES IF CHILD'S TONGUE IS COATED

A laxative today saves a sick child to-morrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue. Mother! If coated or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, won't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs" which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company"

CARSON IN THE CABINET.

New York World: Sir Edward Carson was out of place even in a coalition British Cabinet. His resignation rectifies a mistake in appointment whatever else may be said of or meant by it. In the Government of an Empire fighting for its life against exterior foes, the presence of those who had been organizing rebellion from within, and so encouraged attack from without, is not singularly in harmony with the fitness of things. If Secretary Seward had realized his thought of a foreign war to unite the American nation against the existing Civil War, the organizers of the Southern rebellion might have found places in Mr. Lincoln's Cabinet. But their presence there would not have been tremendously impressive to the outside world or greatly productive of enthusiasm at home

TIMES TO, BUT CAN'T BE A MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY

A right to liberty is being made in the courts by Alfred Liebmann, who lost to Oscar was arranging a circuit of a number of moving picture places in London and any other English cities, known as the Electric theatres

At the outbreak of the war he was interned as a prisoner of war, but he became released on the ground that he, although of German birth, now has no nationality at all. Mr. Liebmann is being represented in the courts by three of the best known lawyers in London, but so far his fight has been unsuccessful. Other actors to be made free on the last day, part which was heard this week and on which decision was reserved.

In 1899 he applied for and obtained a certificate of discharge from German nationality, and by that certificate he lost all his rights as a German subject. In August, 1914, when war broke out, he registered himself as an enemy alien at Vine street, because, as he could not find his certificate of discharge he thought he had better register as being a man of no nationality. This request was refused, and an appeal to the registration officer also failed.

The solicitor-general laid emphasis on the fact that Mr. Liebmann had never made the slightest attempt to become a naturalized Englishman. The court was not, in his opinion, bound to take any notice of what the German authorities thought of the certificate of discharge. "Your Lordships can see," he added, "what a great danger this country would be placed in if Germany a nation full of ingenious devices sent over before the war a large number of its citizens armed with these certificates, who could not be arrested unless the prerogative of the crown were sufficient because they held these documents

Justice Low "It comes to this: Is the German government to be allowed to grant a dispensation to some of its citizens to go about the world without a nationality, under such circumstances that they can at any time easily resume their German nationality"

The Solicitor-General agreed.

T M. Healy, K. C., for Liebmann, said that this was the first time in 30 years that a law officer of the crown had admittedly alleged against an innocent person that the Government, not merely by a state of war, had the inherent right to arrest him and keep him a prisoner.—New York Sun.

CANADIAN FALL LEAGUE IS IN BAD FINANCIAL STATE.

HAMILTON, Ont., Oct 29.—Besides facing a financial loss of $2,000 this season, the Hamilton Baseball Club appears to be due for another kick in the slats.

Ex-Manager Billy Cristall's suit for back salary is now in the hands of the National Board, and it is hinted that Cristall will win.

It will be remembered that Cristall when released claimed that his contract was one of those iron-clad frame ups, and that he could not be let out unless paid for the entire season.

"INS AND OUTS" OF FRENCH CABINET.—The resignation of the René Viviani (1) Cabinet, resulted in a former Premier, Aristide Briand, (2) being asked to form a Cabinet. In the Gen. THE USE OF THE MOTOR HORSE

To horn or not to horn, is the subject of a large number of letters now being published in the New York Times pertaining to the useless noisy methods pursued by many of those who drive motor cars. And it would be well if our Canadian centres also undertakes to suppress the horn when it is actually not necessary to use it. In London, England, as every traveller knows it is against the police regulations to use the horn on the motor car unless absolutely necessary, just as the London newsboys are not allowed to burst one's ear drums with their shrill cries, but are provided instead with posters which they carry in front of them, thus calling attention to their wares.

Unthinking motorists, mainly of the inexperienced class are given to hooting, tooting, at every crossing and in between times as well. This can and should be stopped. It is not only an unnecessary noise, but its constant repetition lends danger to the situation inasmuch as the pedestrian, becoming accustomed to the sounding of the horn is that much the more inclined to disregard it when there is real danger.

Toronto's most capable medical health officer, Dr. Hastings, maybe will give this some attention, as it certainly can be classed, nine time in ten, as an unnecessary nuisance, and certainly injurious to every nose, and certainly injurious to health, and therefore in his domain.

A motor horn serves its legitimate purpose when it is sounded to warn a careless child which has heedlessly run into the centre of the street. Its sounding is not legitimate at a street crossing where the pedestrian has upon the signal of the traffic officer the right of way, and too many motorists are inclined to forget that that the pedestrian has rights at these crossings. It is not the function of those on foot to look out for the motorist, but for the motorist to look out for the pedestrian. Saturday Night

ANECDOTES FROM THE ARMY HOSPITALS

Sir James Kingston Fowler, speaking at the opening of the winter session of the medical school at Middlesex Hospital, London, related some interesting stories of life in a military hospital.

It was, he said, almost a doctor's ideal to see plenty of empty beds, and in one case in France a medical director went around the hospital and saw a man who looked very well. "How are you?" he asked. "Quite well, thank you," replied the soldier. "Well, would you like to go home?" "Yes, sir." "All right, I will have your boots fetched and will see how you get on." "All right, sir, but you need only bring one, because I had a leg off day before yesterday."

Sir James also referred to what he called almost a common practice in military hospitals that of asking what a man's "Army age" was and what his "ordinary age" was. One man in a hospital had been through the first Zulu War and the South African War, and the speaker asked the nurse how old the soldier was. "Well," she replied, "his Army age is 44, but his ordinary age is 50."

He expressed the opinion that after the war there would be a new spirit in the universities. They would feel the necessity of men keeping in condition to serve their country. From that hospital they had sent 298 men to the war. Some men of the profession had made great sacrifices, and he knew of one man who had given up an income of £3000 a year and was now receiving 14s 6d a day. The work of the Royal Army Medical Corps had been magnificent.

"Pessimism, declared Sir James, "means nothing short of sin. I venture to say that I would rather die as an optimist and be wrong than live as a pessimist and be right. The man who goes about talking pessimism weakens the force of the country, and no one has a right to do that."

A FRANK STATEMENT FROM PREMIER ASQUITH

Tells Commons Of The Conduct Of The War

THE FINANCIAL BURDENS OF BRITAIN MAY OUTWEIGH MILITARY PROBLEMS

Premier Asquith Intimates that there May be Change in the Dardanelles Campaign---Large Requisitions of Men Will Be Needed For The Eastern Theatre of War The House is Informed---Germans Have Made No Gains in France Since April.

ACTIVITIES OF BRITISH SUBS IS DETAILED

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Intimating that the Dardanelles campaign may be abandoned, and declaring England's financial situation to be "serious," Premier Asquith this afternoon answered the demands of the British nation for a frank statement regarding the conduct of the war.

For the first time since the war began, Asquith hinted that the financial burdens imposed by the war may outweigh military considerations.

"Our financial situation is serious," said the Prime Minister. "Though rich and resourceful, we cannot sustain the present burdens unless both Government and individuals exercise the strictest economy."

Premier Asquith strongly defended the Dardanelles enterprise. He called the attention of the critics of the Dardanelles campaign to the fact that the British troops engaged there were holding up 200,000 Turks, who otherwise might be aggressive against the Allies in other fields.

"The Dardanelles situation is receiving anxious consideration in connection with large requisitions of men for the Eastern theatre of war."

"When the Allies are reproached for being too late in helping Serbia, it must be remembered that at the last moment we had reason to believe that Greece would acknowledge her treaty obligations and act accordingly," he said.

"The Germans have not gained a foot of ground in France and Flanders since April," Premier Asquith told the House. He admitted that the British casualties in France and Flanders totalled 337,000.

"Two German or Turkish battleships, five gunboats, one torpedo boat, eight transports and 197 supply ships were sunk or damaged by British submarines in the Sea of Marmora up to October 20th," said Asquith.

Asquith's third important statement bore on conscription, hinting that the Government would adopt conscription if the present recruiting measures fail. "I have not the least fear that it will be necessary to proceed beyond Lord Derby's voluntary recruiting scheme," said the Premier, "but I am determined to stick at nothing."

PARIS, Nov. 2.—(French Official).—The situation on the Western fighting front is unchanged, the War Office announced to-day.

ATHENS, Nov. 2.—The Serbian situation was so critical that their retreat into Montenegro and Albania was looked for to-day, where it was thought they would concentrate with a view to obtaining supplies by way of the Adriatic Sea.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—According to last night's Petrograd statement, a new German attack on Riga from the west of Shlok was "fruitless." A German seaplane was brought down in the Gulf of Riga and the aviators were captured.

In the southern theatre, on the Styr River, in the Czartorysk region, the Teutons' offensive was repulsed, four hundred Austrians being captured. West of Konarow the enemy was ejected from long disputed trenches. In Galicia, the Russians occupied parts of the enemy's trenches on the Stripa last Saturday.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 2.—The following official statement was issued by the Turkish War Office to-day:

"On the Dardanelles front there were violent artillery duels, near Sedd-al Bahr. Two enemy cruisers shelled several places ineffectually.

"On the Caucasus front we repulsed two enemy attacks."

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Sir Edward Carson is expected to follow Premier Asquith in an important debate in the House of Commons to-day with a speech explanatory of his resignation as Attorney-General, and in a large measure critical of the Government's policy, although his friends repudiate on his behalf any desire to act as leader or even a member of an opposition party in the House.

Sir Edward holds very definite views both on the machinery of the Government and on the Balkan situation. If the Dardanelles expedition comes up for debate, some important explanations are expected from Winston Spencer Churchill, formerly the First Lord of the Admiralty.

ZURICH, Switzerland, Nov. 2.—That unofficial conferences looking toward peace will be held shortly at Lucerne was asserted positively by several Swiss Socialist newspapers to-day, despite all inspired denials.

Representatives of two other belligerent powers are reported to have arrived at Geneva.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—In official Greek circles an attitude more favourable to the Entente Allies apparently has been assumed.

Notwithstanding the drift of opinion, it is maintained that the neutrality of Greece will be adhered to as long as possible. Any attempt to change the policy of the Government would result in the fall of the Cabinet.

YOUNG GIRL IS TERRIBLY INJURED AT C.P.R. STATION

HER ARM SEVERED

A serious accident occurred yesterday afternoon upon the arrival of the 3.43 train from the east, when Edith Arnold, a passenger, attempted to alight before the train came to a standstill. She fell between the platform and the moving train. Her left arm was completely severed above the elbow and a number of fingers on the right hand so badly mangled as to necessitate amputation. She also suffered a number of severe scalp wounds.

Dr. Halliday, who happened to be at the station at the time, rendered first aid. Bleeding was stopped by means of a tourniquet. The Comstock ambulance was summoned and the unfortunate girl removed to Nicholls Hospital. To-day her condition is said to be satisfactory considering the nature of the injuries.

On a Holiday.

The injured girl, who gave her age as seventeen, said she got on at Central Ontario Junction, and was coming to spend a few days' holidays at the Margaret Cox Home for Girls, of which she was a ward. Trains from the east usually run to the west end of the platform so as to enable the engines to take on a supply of water. The girl was not aware of this procedure and undertook to alight when the coach reached a point opposite the baggage room. As she afterwards explained, she was afraid the train was going right through without stopping. The accident happened in the presence of a large number of people who were at the station and who were horrified to see the girl carried under the train. That she was not crushed to death is a miracle. She was picked up and carefully cared for until the arrival of the ambulance. The severed arm lay on the track and was recovered later by Adjutant McElhiney, who communicated with the proper authorities concerning the matter.

Dr. Halliday and Mrs. McElhiney accompanied the injured girl to the hospital. She never lost consciousness and chatted quite freely with those around her.

93rd BATTALION HAS NOW REACHED THREE HUNDRED MARK

Recruits Coming in Well and Organization of Second Company Will Be Pushed Ahead as Rapidly as Possible ---Little Recruiting Sergeant Reports For Duty Again To-day's Military News.

The 93rd Battalion is now practically at the 300 mark, and in the next few days it is expected that the first platoon of the new company will receive a large number of recruits. No. 5 platoon was on parade this morning for the first time as a platoon, with Sergt. Jones in charge. It is thought that recruiting will be brisk in the next couple of weeks, especially in the rural districts.

Military news

In the list of promotions in the 93rd Battalion published in yesterday's Examiner it was stated that Pte. Brown had been promoted lance-corporal. This was an error, as Pte. Brown who, up to the present, has been a member of No. 4 platoon, has been made a full corporal and has been attached to No. 1 platoon.

Lt.-Col. Johnston, who is acting commanding officer of the 93rd Battalion, left last night for Cobourg and Kingston on matters in connection with the battalion. While at Cobourg he will take up the organization of the Cobourg company of the 93rd and at Kingston he will consult with Col. Hemming, the officer commanding the division.

Yesterday the members of No. 1 platoon of the 93rd presented Platoon Sergt. Sam Calladine who is leaving the platoon to take a higher position on the regimental roster, with a handsome cane, a pair of gloves and a whistle as a mark of appreciation of his services. Sergt. Calladine has had charge of the men in No. 1 since they enlisted and has been most popular with them.

Ten recruits came on the strength of the 93rd yesterday and a number of others passed the medical examination. All the recruits enlisted so far have been provided with uniforms. Another supply will be needed shortly judging by the number of new Tommies coming in.

Pte. A. W. Phipps, his wife and mother, and Pte. A. Spiller of the 50th Battalion, who enlisted on the day news was received of Pte. Phipps being wounded, occupied a box at the Grand Opera House last night.

Word comes from far-off Vancouver of another former Peterborough boy who is doing his bit for the Empire. Mr. F. E. "Jerry" Carew has enlisted with the 72nd Seaforth Highlanders in the western city. He was employed here as bookkeeper for the Davis-Thompson Company, removing to British Columbia in November, 1913, following his parents who had left earlier in the year. He was not long in Vancouver until he secured a position with the Vancouver branch of the Canadian General Electric Company, where he was employed as assistant accountant until the time of his enlistment.

The following programme has been arranged by the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club for Victoria Hall on Tuesday evening, Nov. 9th. The 93rd band will be present by permission of Lt.-Col. Johnston:

March, "Hippodrome"—Band
Song—Mr. C. Coleman.
Instrumental duet—Mrs. Foster and Mrs. Fenwick.
Selection, "H.M.S. Pinafore"—Band
Song—Miss Fenwick.
Recitation—Mrs. Thomas.
Selection, "Gaiety Girl"—Band
Song—Mrs. Wand.
Recitation—Mrs. Nichols.
March, "Trombonium"—Band
Song—Mrs. Scully.
Recitation—Mr. Johns.
God Save the King.

The 9th Battalion have not lost their little recruiting sergeant, Master Percy Luther, after all. The little fellow returned to the Armouries this morning and brought with him a recruit in the shape of his father, Mr. J. M. Luther, who was successful in passing the medical examination. Mr. Luther pays the Peterborough soldiers a very high compliment. He and his family arrived in Montreal yesterday morning, but the conditions did not suit them, and rather than have the little recruiting sergeant mixed up with some of the soldiers the family saw yesterday, it was decided to return to Peterborough. "The men of the 93rd are all gentlemen," Mr. Luther remarked this morning.

Sergt. R. G. Cottrell, who for nineteen years has been connected with the 57th Regiment, has joined the 93rd Battalion. It is understood that he will act in the capacity of regimental quartermaster - sergeant. Among the other recruits yesterday and this morning were the following:

Albert Wilkins, Camphellford.
Percy Schweier, 491 Sherbrooke St.
W. G. Chandler, Millbrook.
Thos. King, 499 Sherbrooke St.
J. M. Luther, Lansdowne St.

A change has been made in the staff of the recruiting depot over which Major Hounsel is now presiding. Lance-Corp. A. Tobin, Pte. McKinlay, Pte. Clappinson and Pte. Foster are now on duty at the recruiting office, while Ptes. Watson, Sheppard, Jay and Clarke, have returned to their platoons.

EXHIBITION GROUNDS PURCHASE TO BE CONSIDERED BY COUNCIL

Upon the suggestion of Ald. Stratton the Council last night decided to arrange a conference of the Finance Committee with representatives of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. This is with a view to considering the advisability of the city's acquiring it. Ald. Stratton said that the Government proposes to hold a winter fair between Toronto and Ottawa, and the city offering the best building facilities will likely be selected. This, besides the other reasons referred to before, is regarded as an inducement to the city to secure an Exhibition park and buildings.

"They Should Be Up Here in the Armouries Getting Their Uniforms"—Fold Wounded Peterboro' Soldier in Replying to Addresses of Welcome Last Night

GIVEN A RECEPTION

"I'd like to see some of the slackers around the street come along and do their bit," was the emphatic declaration of Pte. Arthur Phipps of the Peterborough detachment, 93rd Battalion, when he arose to reply to the addresses of welcome tendered him at the armouries last night. "I have seen six or seven on each corner smoking their pipes and loafing around. They should be up here in the armouries getting their uniforms."

The wounded soldier, with his mother, his wife and sister, and his "pal", Pte. Spiller of the 50th Battalion, who resided at Pte. Phipps' home, and who vowed that if the latter was wounded he would enlist and did so on the day the news came, were taken to the armouries in motor cars draped with Union Jacks and accompanied by Mayor Buller and other officials. At the armouries a procession was formed, headed by the band of the 93rd Battalion. The men of the 93rd formed the escort and the wounded hero was the central figure in a procession through the down town streets.

A large crowd gathered in the drill hall to take part in the reception to Pte. Phipps, which followed the procession. Mayor Buller acted as chairman and he and the other speakers emphasized the gratitude of the people of Peterborough for what Pte. Phipps had done and their deep appreciation of the sacrifices he had made.

Hon. Major Davidson, chaplain of the 57th Regiment, opened the meeting by offering a prayer of thanksgiving for the safe return of Pte. Phipps, after which the audience united in repeating the Lord's Prayer.

Mayor Buller, who was the first speaker, extended a cordial welcome to Pte. Phipps on behalf of the city. Every citizen was proud of Pte. Phipps, and of what he had done. Peterborough was proud of her men who had gone to the front, and those who were getting ready to go. She would be proud, too, of the men who would be offering themselves in the near future. There was a big task before the city in the coming months, but the people of Peterborough were, he was sure, determined not to rest on their oars until the conflict was over.

Lt.-Col. Johnston, speaking on behalf of the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the 93rd Battalion as well as for the militia organizations of Peterborough, said that he wished to extend the heartiest welcome to Pte. Phipps. They were proud of the record that Pte. Phipps and his comrades had made at the front, and the high standard the Canadian militia had gained as a result. "As for the 93rd," remarked Lt.-Col. Johnston, "I can only say, in the words of our marching song 'We'll Never Let the old Flag Fall.'"

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., was the next speaker. "We are proud of the work you and your comrades have done," he remarked to Pte. Phipps. "We realize the sacrifices you have made, while we have been enjoying the leisure and safety of the peaceful life of Canada. We have watched your record since you left Peterborough, and we are all prouder that we live in Canada than we were before we sent you and your comrades to fight the battle for us."

In conclusion Mr. Gillespie hoped that Pte. Phipps would soon be restored to health.

Adjutant McElhiney said that if there was ever a time he wished to conscript people it was on an occasion like last night's. "Every citizen, every boy, every girl in the city should be out to welcome men such as Pte. Phipps," remarked the speaker. "I feel towards men like him, in some respects, as I do towards the Christ I serve. They have been wounded for me, they have been bruised for me. God bless you for what you have done."

Adj. McElhiney referred to the experiences Pte. Phipps had gone through and pointed out the duty that lay before the people of Peterborough. "It is our duty to see to it in our city that we do our bit to bring victory to the Allies and the cause of righteousness."

Mr. J. J. Hartley, President of the Trades and Labour Council, represented that body at the reception. It was a pleasure, he said, to be present to welcome Pte. Phipps who had almost given his life that we might enjoy liberty. Pte. Phipps, before enlisting for overseas, had been

CANADIAN CHICLE COMPANY FACTORY VISITED BY BLAZE

Fire Broke Out Shortly Before 9 O'clock and Had a Good Start When Brigade Arrived—Building Not Badly Damaged

INJURY TO THE STOCK

Shortly after eight o'clock last evening fire was discovered in the premises of the Canadian Chicle Company, Limited, 83 George Street. When the firemen arrived flames were issuing from the south west section of the building. The heat was sufficient to burst the windows. A couple of lines of hose were operated on the first floor and by careful handling the fire was confined to a very limited area. The actual damage to the building is not expected to exceed one thousand dollars, while the damage to the stock through smoke may run anywhere from ten to twenty thousand dollars. It will be some days before the actual loss can be estimated. The fire was first discovered about 8:30 by a number of boys who notified a couple of policemen. The alarm was turned in both by telephone and by box. The fire was rung out at 11:15.

Covered by Insurance.

Chief Howard stated this morning that seldom in his experience has a fire of such serious proportions been handled with such a small loss by water. Instead of flooding the building the firemen directed their attention to the source of the trouble and by means of a couple of branches were able to extinguish the fire. The water that was poured into the first floor found its way into the cellar by means of a hole that was chopped in the floor. The result was that very little damage was done by water, and the firm will be able to continue manufacturing operations. Both building and stock are covered by insurance.

CANADA.

While Canada is winning war victories in the East she is winning peaceful victories in the West. "Canada Day" at the Panama Pacific Exposition was a great success. It is conceded that the exhibit of Canada — the samples of her resources — is among the best at the Exposition. This shows that Canada even in the throes of a most sanguinary war that engrosses as much energy is able to display trophies and triumphs of the arts of peace concurrently conducted. It is some reward for the sacrifices we have made in this war, to know that Canada has had the opportunity to show what she could do, and has taken a new place of prominence among the nations of the world. Her resourcefulness as well as her resources, have been well vindicated. In a year of the greatest war of history, with a contribution to the activities of war unparalleled in the history of any country similarly situated, Canada has sown and reaped the greatest crop in her history. We have splendidly responded to the call —"patriotism and production." We have still to meet the call; and there is no doubt that we shall respond as gallantly in the immediate future as we have done in the past. The clouds show signs of lifting over the war seas, and the sun of prosperity is breaking through the clouds at home. Trade and commerce, which have been so severely disjointed by the war are improving. Railway earnings are increasing, and business generally, if not reviving markedly, is splendidly holding its own.

THE SPIRIT MUST BE LAID.

Germany has learned with great thoroughness the lesson of thoroughness. But she has yet to learn that there is a limit to her potentialities for evil. She made war with arrogant, self-sufficiency—made war of her own initiative of conquest lust. She has failed utterly in her objective of world domination, or even European domination. After the first few days of surprise assault in Belgium, she has been going backward. She has been wasting her resources in men and munitions and money with spendthrift prodigality, and like the spendthrift she sees, or we see, the end of her resources. She is fighting with her back to the wall, at bay—instead of leading a victorious and irresistible onslaught as she planned in the beginning. Untaught by the lesson of her mistake in launching war of her own devising, she is now attempting to lead in the cause of peace. But she fails here, and will fail as she has failed, and is increasingly failing, in the monstrous bringing on of the war. It was hers to declare and precipitate war. It is her enemies that will have to do with bringing peace. The Entente Allies are all of one mind in the matter of the conditions of peace; they are all agreed and decided that there can be no peace, nor even talk of peace, till Germany is beaten, and the spirit and power of militarism crushed; not even talk of peace till the menace to the world's tranquility and prosperity and happiness, is removed utterly. The Allies will talk of peace only when Germany is deprived of the power of dictating its terms.

ART OF LONG LIVING.

The long life of Sir Charles Tupper helps us to contemplate the possibility of long life—of prolonging life even beyond the limits set by the Psalmist. Sir Charles Tupper was born with a strong physical, as well as mental constitution, showing that his ancestors from whom he inherited them must have studied the art of long living to enable them to bequeath its results to their son. That Sir Charles Tupper carried into nearly a full quarter of a century, beyond the average limit of human life, both his physical and mental vigor, was due to the fact that he exercised, and at the same time, developed and conserved both. He lived a simple life; yet he lived a strenuous life, using temperately but fully, the physical and mental faculties with which he was endowed. By using both in a rational way he kept both in good condition. Sir Charles is an example of the way in which we can live long — by keeping busy and using both body and mind temperately, and living much in the open. He died as few men die in these latter days, from sheer old age; the physical and mental machinery were out pastured of rusting out. Thus he not only lived long, but was longer a factor in the work of benefaction to his country and age. In these modern times we do not practice the art of long living. We do not evenly exercise our bodies and minds; and it is possible that in a few generations we may not know how to walk, one of the provisions of nature to keep the body in good condition; in training for the race of life. Walking involves both the necessary exercise to keep our muscles and vital organs in good condition; but also involves spending time in the open with its contribution to bodily vigor and mental clearness. Our boys and girls, our men and women, use the auto car, the bicycle, the motor cycle, and the street cars much more than is good for them. They thus shorten the journey to business or pleasure; but they also shorten the journey of life. There come within the observation of all of us, instances of men and women who are hopeless invalids, who have themselves contributed to their condition by lack of physical exercise and by one-sidedly concentrating mental activity upon business or other occupation, till the mental machinery collapses—according to the principle of a sound mind in a sound body—with the decay of physical fitness. To have old age, and a hale old age, we must keep both mind and body "in training," as have done men like Tupper, Gladstone, Laurier, Brougham and others, who have kept physically fit, and mentally alert, far beyond the age when usually men and women become physical wrecks, or senile weaklings. If we live right we shall, baring accident, live long, and shall fall like ripe sheaves instead of being cut down by our own disregard of the laws of health and life, like cumberers of the ground.

CANADA'S CAPACITY.

The Toronto News has the following interesting comment upon molybdenum as an ally of nickel in the production of steel for shipbuilding and similar purposes:

Armour plate is made of nickel-steel. Ontario produces the bulk of the nickel used, and therefore has a most important industrial position in the Empire and in the world. We do not hear so much about molybdenum as about nickel, and yet there is reason to believe that this Province, or at least this country, is likely to become the primary source. Molybdenum is a silver-white metal occurring generally in a flaky ore resembling graphite and called molybdenite. It is used in the manufacture of the higher forms of tool steel, particularly that required for the manufacture of guns, rifle-barrels and shells. Sometimes it is combined with nickel to make a steel alloy of exceptional hardness and tensile strength.

Modern rolling mill practice demands molybdenum and it is clear that a perpetual market awaits our ore. At present the main object, not only of the owners of the new deposits but of the Government, is to prevent Germany getting any. It is said that an embargo placed on the ore shortly after the outbreak of the war did not prove to be a practical method of ensuring the conservation of the supply and the development of the mines. In all probability the visible supply has been commandeered by the Government, though no official statement to that effect has been made.

During 1913 half the world's supply of molybdenite came from Australia. The output was only 66 tons, valued at about $95,000. The ore is not infrequent in its occurrences in other parts of the world, but in general it is not found in paying quantities. The new mine in Ontario, which is not from from Ottawa, has an abundance of ore, and there is talk of a smelter being erected at Pembroke. With Australia and Canada holding the bulk of the molybdenum and nickel supply naval construction in future should proceed by favour of British people and British Ministers.

Here the optimist bests the pessimist, and our contemporary among the number. The News was, and still is, among the number of little Canadians who assumed to believe, and clamourely argued, that Canada could not build warships, as Australia has done. If Australia has the raw materials, and the patriotic enterprise to enable her according to the statement of the News, to build warships, cannot Canada with, according to the same authority, an equally good and better supply of nickel and steel, do the same? Little-faith Canadians, have hard work to justify their existence in these days of great Canadian possibilities, and great Canadian accomplishments.

BRITAIN'S EXTREMITY HAS SPLENDIDLY VINDICATED THE LOYALTY OF INDIA

In the course of an important speech concluding the autumn session of the Legislative Council at Simla, Lord Hardinge, the Viceroy, said that he was very pleased that the Hindu University Bill, which had been discussed for four years, had that day become law.

Reviewing the war, the Viceroy emphasized the fact that British sea power was the decisive factor, and he paid a special tribute to the Russians' magnificent courage and tenacity. In India tranquility had prevailed, and the measures taken under the Defence of India Act had succeeded in restoring order in the Punjab, which had been disturbed by emigrants returning from Canada and the United States imbued with revolutionary ideas. Sir Michael O'Dwyer, the Lieutenant-Governor, had used his powers with great care, and he believed that the loyal people of the Punjab were thoroughly satisfied with the working of the special tribunals. The Viceroy expressed appreciation of the loyal attitude of the people of the Punjab in the assistance given to the hunting down of dangerous desperadoes and admiration of the fearless and courageous devotion of all ranks of the Punjab police. On the frontier our posts had been often attacked by ignorant and fanatical tribesmen, but the latter had always been driven back with considerable losses. The tribesmen in our own border were absolutely staunch and loyal.

The Amir of Afghanistan, since the beginning of the war, had observed an attitude of strict neutrality which, Lord Hardinge had every reason to believe, would be rigidly maintained. In Persia the situation was disturbed. Roving bands armed with Austrian and German rifles had wandered through the country endeavoring to make trouble and provoke the country against the Allies. Our troops were now occupying Bushire, and with the consent of the Persian Government would remain there until steps were taken by the latter to restore internal peace and order.

Nobody could look back on the last fourteen months and the part which India had played in the war with greater pride than he, and nobody could be more appreciative of the deep-seated patriotism and whole-hearted loyalty of the people of India, which would ever shine as a beacon and illumine the history of the land, but as the war progressed he presumed that it would be felt more and more, and there might be times of anxiety and depression in store for them. If such a time came they must show the world that India was united. The blood of Englishmen and Indians would not be shed on the battlefields in vain, and all attempts to create trouble and sedition in India would be vain and fruitless.—Reuter.

WE SHALL TALK PEACE ONLY WHEN GERMANY IS BEATEN

The article in the New York Tribune, "Germany Is Beaten," which was reproduced in yesterday's issue of the Free Press, is in substantial agreement with the estimate of the situation which the Free Press has made.

Germany during the past season has shown amazing strength, both defensive and offensive; yet it is still true that the net result of these operations has been to bring Germany a long step nearer defeat.

Defeat is indeed certain, provided the Allied nations have the resolution and determination to "stay with" the war until a final decision is forced.

Germany has made reckless drafts upon her capital, in men, money, and resources, in the expectation of overwhelming her less ready foes and forcing a surrender. She still has the capacity to hit hard and do damage; but the shadow of a fear is beginning to fall over Berlin that the exhaustion of her forces will still find the Allies unconquered and determined to avenge their earlier defeats.

Thus, looking forward to a possible day of reckoning, Germany begins to find something attractive in the contemplation of peace. In her present frame of mind it is, of course, peace with a margin of advantage to herself; but when she finds no possibility of this being accepted, the Allies will be tempted with a proposal of peace with a return to the ante-war conditions. We can look for a skillful world-wide agitation for peace, engineered and financed from Berlin, but wearing many "neutral" disguises.

Then will come the real testing-time for the Allies; for there will be no end of weak-kneed and spineless people, who, hugging the delusion that Germany has had her lesson and will never again aspire to world domination, will be in favour of patching up a peace on the lines of "as you were." Such a peace, with its commitments in the matter of military preparations would be almost as bad as war, and it would lead inevitably to another war.

There can be no permanent peace until Germany has been so thoroughly beaten that there will not be a German, in Germany or out of it, who will know that the issue of the war has been definitely decided against the Kaiser and his allies. Once that stage in the war is reached it will be possible to have a peace which will be something better than a state of armed neutrality.

It would be idle to speculate upon the time when this turn of the tide in the war will come. It may be nearer than we hope; it may be two years distant. One thing we know: the more power we throw into the war the quicker it will come to an end. Therefore, let us tie up and doing to the extent of our strength, leaving to Time and Fate the settlement of the great issue. Meanwhile to talk peace is to talk treason.—Manitoba Free Press.

WORSE THAN MEXICO.

The Belgian Government at Havre is said to have information that more than 5000 civilians have been shot by the German authorities since they have been occupying Belgian territory. The most disturbed parts of barbarous Mexico would be a better place to live than Belgium has been under the highly organized rule of the usurping military autocracy.—Buffalo Express.

NO FORTUNES OUT OF WAR PROFITS.

The Ottawa Citizen says, in effect, that huge and excessive profits are being made out of the manufacture of shells in Canada. It says also that some members of the Dominion Shell Committee are interested in the manufacture of shells—interested as members of manufacturing concerns which will receive these huge profits.

That matter ought to be cleared up. The Shell Committee ought to be an absolutely unbiased, disinterested body. No manufacturer of shells, no person having any interest in such an industry, ought to be a member of the committee.

The committee ought to have only one interest—to supply good shells, to supply them quickly, and to supply them at a moderate price. The men employed in the industry should have a living wage, and their employers ought to be content with small profits. In fact, a man ought to be very well satisfied if he comes out of any duty connected with the war with any profit at all. What profit comes to the soldier who loses a leg, an eye, or an arm? If one man gives life or limb, why should not another man, safe at home, be glad to relinquish all his profits? At all events he should be limited to such a figure as will pay his overhead charges and give him reasonable remuneration for his services.

The Minister of Militia and the Government ought to inquire into this matter. They ought to satisfy the public that everything possible is being done to make Canada contribute to the supply of munitions. They ought to remove all ground of fair criticism. They ought to see that the composition of the Shell Committee is above reproach. They ought to see that no fortunes shall be built upon the supply of munitions by Canada; that no one shall grow rich by the agony through which humanity is passing.—Toronto Star.

Something New.

Many advertisers are constantly trying to think up "Something New" or "Different" and the results are startling to be sure, but certainly not convincing nor conducive to increase in the business of the advertiser.

The craze for originality is a mistake. People do not care for stunts or mental gymnastics. They do want to know the facts in regard to your business and whether you can offer better prices or better quality than your competitors.

Tell the facts in a straightforward, unassuming manner. You will gain the confidence of your patrons, and you will find that advertising pays abundantly.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

HOBOES AS HEROES.

IT SELDOM PAYS, HOWEVER.

Some Experiences of the Dilapidated Gentleman Prove That There Is Little Profit in Being a Hero—Why He Gave It Up.

[Copyright, 1915, by T. C. McClure.]

"So far as my experience goes," said the dilapidated gentleman as he assumed a careless pose on a park bench, "there is very little cash money in being a hero, but the men who sigh for the title can't win it quicker than to go on the tramp for a couple of months. When I first started in the profession I used to be a bit puffed up over making a hero of myself, but the thing grew stale after awhile. As a usual thing there are drawbacks to the heroic business. You go up like a rocket and come down like a barrel of sand.

"One day six or seven years ago as I was taking in the scenery along an Indiana highway I saw a horse and buggy approaching on the gallop. There were a man and woman in the buggy, and the woman was screaming and the man laying the whip on the horse. It was Don Quixote to the rescue. I saw that the female was being abducted, and when the outfit came along I sprang for the horse, caught the bridle, and after being dragged twenty rods I brought him to a halt. The man at once leaped out and disappeared in the woods, and the woman fainted away.

"Don Quixote brought water and revived her and bade her look upon herself as rescued and then drove her to her home, three miles away. She didn't say much en route. She didn't praise my heroism or declare my gallantry. On the contrary, she was no sooner home than she turned on me and gave me fits and threatened me with all manner of calamities. I was driven away in disgrace, and it was only when I reached the next farmhouse that the mystery was solved. The female was a widow—a romantic widow. She had vowed that she wouldn't marry the man with her unless abducted. He came and abducted her. She wanted him to. Her yelling was simply pretense. In making a hero of myself I had interrupted a marriage, and she was as mad as a wet hen about it. The man who had escaped from the buggy sent a constable after me, charging me with an attempted holdup, and I was arrested and given three months in jail as a suspicious character.

"Again in Connecticut about 4 o'clock one afternoon I came along to a farm to hear a woman's screams and to see a girl flying across a field with a bull in chase. Over the highway fence went Don Quixote, with a rock in his hand, and as I cut in between the girl and the bovine I threw the rock and knocked a horn off and checked the pursuit. Then several things resulted. The bull turned out to be an amiable ox. The girl screamed for help. Her father and a hired man came running, and I was set upon and given an old fashioned lambasting. Just as it was finished a young man came running up, and then the girl fell upon his shoulder with an 'Oh, Dick!'

How He Figured It Out.

"I figured it out that night as I lay under a haystack three miles away. The girl put up a job for the old ox to chase her. She wanted her lover to rescue her. He was slow in catching on, and I cut in ahead of him. I not only spoiled her plot, but knocked a horn off the pursuer, and the father naturally looked upon me as a villain instead of a hero. I carried two black eyes for a month, but felt that I deserved them.

"I got into a Maryland village one day to find the people all agog over the mysterious disappearance of a young lady from her home. She had gone out for a walk the day before and had failed to return. I had no sooner appeared than suspicion was fastened upon me as a matter of course. Fortunately I had been at work for a farmer for the last three days, and upon his being communicated with by telephone he cleared me of any charge. I was then ordered to move on, and I went. Two miles away I turned into the woods to take a nap, but had not fallen asleep when a man came along and dug a grave not five rods away. He had a big bundle with him and buried it. It was the body of the missing girl, of course.

"When the man had smoothed the grave over and departed I made a bolt back to the village and told the news. I could give a pretty good description of him, and two hours later they had him under arrest, and nothing was too good for me in that village. Tramp that I was, the sheriff invited me home to supper with him and fitted me out with a fairly good suit of clothes. The murderer was a farmer. At first he seemed stunned. Then he began to grin and chuckle. Then he broke into laughter. The others said that he had gone insane, but I had an uneasy feeling that I was to come down with a dull thud.

"After supper we took him to the woods, and I pointed out the grave of the missing girl. It was opened amid solemn silence. We found a big bundle of clothes and held our noses. A skunk had made its way into his house the day before and odorized many garments, and the man had buried them to take away the taint. I got away before they could hang me, but it was a close shave. As a matter of fact, that sheriff hunted for me for the next four weeks, though the missing girl had returned home all right.

"One summer's day when I had pushed up into northern New York I passed a camp of people on the shores of a lake. A mile beyond and just around a wooded point I saw a young lady in a canoe. About the time I saw her the canoe turned over, and she went into the lake and began screaming. There was a young chap fishing from another canoe a quarter of a mile away, but I didn't notice him. Off came my old jacket and shoes, and in I went to save human life. The first thing I discovered was that the water was not over three feet deep; the next, that the girl was in no danger whatever. She had only to wade ashore and draw the canoe after her. Did she do it? Not a great deal. She was looking toward the other canoe and uttering delightful little shrieks, and she didn't notice me until I was close at hand and had cried out:

"'Hang on tight for your life, miss, and I will save you!'

"'Go back, you idiot!' she answered.

"'But I have come to save you!'

"'Go back or I will have you hunted out of the woods!'

All He Got Was a Wetting.

"I went back, and as I climbed on to dry land the young man in the canoe reached the perishing girl and saved her. He also shook his paddle at me and said he would have me in state prison. Beautifully worked, eh? A marriage probably resulted from the romance, and all I got out of it was a wetting.

"One more case. I was at Watkins Glen to view the scenery. Make no mistake on the dilapidated gentleman. He fairly dotes on scenery. I had penetrated to a wild spot when I heard those same female shrieks and broke into a run to reach the scene. Presently I found a good looking young girl perched on a rock and at its base a little striped snake about a foot long. It was harmless and tender hearted. It could have been put to bed with a baby.

"'The viper! The viper!' shrieked the girl as I looked around for the cause of alarm.

"I picked up a branch to kill it, but she protested:

"'No, no! Go away, bad man!'

"'But the viper, miss.'

"'Go away or I'll scream for help!'

"I turned and went down the path, and presently a young man passed me on the fly and destroyed that poor little snake and saved a human life. There I was, ready to perish in that girl's behalf, and she never gave me the slightest show. I met the pair two hours later as they were walking arm in arm, and while she hung back the young fellow came up to me as bold as a sheep and shook his fist under my nose and warned me to begone from thence or suffer such consequences as would paralyse my physical system for the next hundred years. You people that stick here in the cities get bumped by a street car now and then or lose your money by some con game, but if you want real excitement and romance mixed together you must take to the road and become a dilapidated gentleman."

COULD NOT STAND ON FEET

Mrs. Baker Is Weak—Could Not Do Her Work—Found Relief in Novel Way.

Adrian, Mich. — "I suffered terribly with female weakness and backache and got so weak that I could hardly do my work. When I washed my clothes I had to sit down and when I would sweep the floor I would get so weak that I would have to get a drink every four minutes, and before I did my dusting I would have to lie down. I got so poorly that my folks thought I was going into consumption. One day I found a piece of paper blowing around the yard and I picked it up and read it. It said 'Saved from the Grave,' and told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women. I thought I would try it, and I said to my husband, 'Why don't you try it?' So I did, and after I had taken two bottles I felt better and I said to my husband, 'I don't need any more,' and he said 'You had better take it a little longer anyway.' So I took it for three months and got well and strong."—Mrs. ALONZO E. BAKER, 9 Tecumseh St., Adrian, Mich.

Would Wake Up With Smothering Spells.

There is nothing that brings with it such a fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The terrible smothering, choking up and sinking feeling is caused by the heart and nerves being in a deranged condition, and calls for prompt relief.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in all cases of such severity.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, tone up the nervous system, and the trouble which is the cause of so much fear and anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs. Wm. McElwain, Temperance Vale, N.B., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I must say Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are all right. Some years ago I was troubled with smothering spells. In the night I would be sound asleep, but would wake up with my breath all gone, and think I would never get it back again. I was telling a friend of my trouble, and he advised me to use Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. He also gave me a box which I tried, and I had only taken a few of them when I could sleep all night without any trouble. I did not finish the box until some years later, when I felt my trouble coming back. I took the rest and they have cured me entirely."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

'IT SAVED MY HAND'

"I am a blacksmith. I contracted a sore finger, which led to blood-poisoning. After three months of doctoring, the finger had to be cut off.

It was too late! The poison had spread to my hand and arm. My hand was opened and the bone scraped. No use! Doctors said hand would have to be taken off.

I refused, and began to use Zam-Buk. I used it regularly and freely for a few weeks. It subdued the blood-poisoning and by the time I had used 7 boxes of Zam-Buk my hand was quite healed.

Zam-Buk surely saved my hand, and I firmly believe it would have saved my finger too had I used it at first."

These facts were sworn to by Mr John Evans of 87 Lawrence St., Halifax, N.S., before Supreme Court Commissioner O'Hearn, and the sworn statement may be seen by any person so desirous.

Consumers Should Learn of the Methods Employed To Standardize Canadian Eggs

From present indications it would appear that one of the most important developments to date in the improvement of the Canadian Egg Trade was the action taken by the Canadian Produce Association last winter in adopting definite standards for Canadian Eggs.

Hitherto each market and in most markets each dealer had a system of grading peculiar to his own trade. This resulted in endless confusion to the consumer and great difficulty was experienced at times on the part of the producer in finding a satisfactory market for his product.

Realizing the importance of having definite standards for all live stock products the Live Stock Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture has endeavoured by means of pamphlets, placards, and other means to give the standards for eggs as much publicity as possible. The co-operation of exhibition associations has also been secured, prominent among which has been that of the Canadian National Exhibition Association at whose exhibition in Toronto this year in response to prizes offered, probably the largest collection of eggs ever brought together in one exhibition of the American Continent was displayed. Some 7,000 dozen in all were on exhibition. The prize list for eggs was prepared in accordance with the standard and the judges made their awards according to the accuracy of the interpretation, on the part of the exhibitors, of the definitions of the various grades.

At a number of exhibitions where no extensive classes for eggs have been offered, the Live Stock Branch has made a display of eggs graded in accordance with the standards and in each instance has supplemented the display with actual demonstrations, in a candling booth specially designed for the purpose, of the way in which eggs of the various grades appear when candled.

In order that the consumers and producers generally may become more familiar with the various classes and grades the following explanation is given.

The Grades.

Three general classes for eggs are provided under the standards viz.:—"Fresh gathered," "Storage," and Cracked and Dirties". Four grades are provided in the first class, three in the second, and two in the third.

The grades in the "Fresh Gathered" class are "Specials," "Extras," "No. 1's," and "No. 2's". The grade "Specials" is omitted from the "Storage" class, and both specials and extras from the class for "racked and Dirties,,.

"Specials" according to the standards are eggs of uniform size weighing over 24 ounces to the dozen or over 45 pounds net to the 30 dozen case; absolutely clean, strong and sound in shell; air cell small, not over 3-16 of an inch in depth; white of egg firm and clear and yolk dimly visible; free from blood clots.

"Extras" are eggs of good size, weighing at least 24 ounces to the dozen or 45 pounds net to the 30 dozen case; clean, sound in shell; air cell less than ⅛ of an inch in depth; with white of egg firm, and yolk slightly visible.

"No. 1's" are eggs weighing at least 23 ounces to the dozen or 43 pounds net to the 30 dozen case; clean, sound in shell; air cell less than ½ inch in depth; white of egg reasonably firm; yolk visible but mobile, not stuck to the shell or seriously out of place.

"No. 2's" are eggs clean; sound in shell; may contain weak watery eggs, and eggs with heavy yolks, and all other eggs sound in shell and fit for food.

Consumers in order to protect themselves in the matter of purchasing eggs should acquaint themselves with these standards and the above definitions of the grades. Only by creating a demand for certain grades of eggs will the supply be forthcoming, and the demand can come only with a thorough knowledge on the part of the consumer as to what constitutes the various grades. It has also been frequently suggested that since the adoption of the standard consumers generally, in order to safeguard themselves, would do well to insist that all eggs as offered for sale be labelled in accordance with their proper grade.

Producers too, would do well to more systematically grade their eggs before marketing, and knowing definitely what they have in hand thereby be in a better position to demand a price commensurate with the quality supplied.

Calm Heroism in Face of Death

The calm heroism with which English men face death at the front is described by Corporal W. Buckland, of the Meerut Division, Indian Expeditionary Force, in a letter to a friend in the South Notts Hussars. He tells how his comrade by falling over a German trip wire near one of the enemy's listening posts in Flanders brought a fusilade upon them both, the comrade being mortally wounded.

"I'm handing in my checks, old man," said the wounded man, as they regained the British lines, "and all the doctors in the world can't save me."

"After I had made him as comfortable as I could on an old overcoat, and lit a cigarette for him," says Corporal Buckland's letter, "he started to talk over the times we had together in different parts of the world. He did not last very long though.

"Just as the gray dawn was breaking he asked me to lay his rifle by him and after I had done so, he pulled me down by his side, and I just managed to hear him say, 'Bill, I am on the road now. I can hear someone sounding the great challenge. Halt! who comes here?' With a tremendous effort, he staggered up, and in a terrible voice, shouted, with almost superhuman strength, 'An Englishman who did his duty.' Shall I ever forget that scene? The great dawn breaking in the east, and over all an ineffable peace seemed to reign. The only sound to be heard was an aeroplane that was just going over our lines, and the drone of its propeller.

"That is how an English soldier meets his death. Similar scenes take place day after day, all along the line."

The annual product of bricks in the United States is 25,000,000,000. This is enough to lay a five-foot sidewalk eight times around the world.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will soon act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it is no longer irritated, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

German-Americans Out Against Wilson

Massachusetts Hyphenated Convention "Firmly Opposed" to His Re-election as President.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 2.—A convention described as representing forty-six organizations of German-Americans, with a membership of 20,000 in this State, to-day adopted a resolution "firmly opposing" the re-election of President Wilson.

The meeting was called by John Albrecht Walz, Professor of German Literature at Harvard University, and State Chairman of the German National Alliance. The purpose was said to be largely to induce Americans of German descent to take a more active interest in political affairs, and no permanent organization was attempted. Announcement had been made previously that the gathering probably would endorse one of the candidates for Governor at the State election next month, but it was decided not to take such a step.

The resolution, which was adopted after considerable debate, follows:

"Resolved, That we, American citizens, assembled at Worcester, do not desire as an organization to endorse any candidate for Governor, but we believe in the desirability of unitedly discussing the question of the Gubernatorial candidates. We are, however, firmly opposed to the re-election of Woodrow Wilson as President of the United States."

ATTACKS METHODS OF THE DARDANELLES EXPEDITION

Ashmead Bartlett Does Not Blame Originators of the Enterprise--Thinks Fault is in Diplomacy—Expresses View That the Turks Are Too Numerous and Skilful

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Trenchant criticisms of the manner in which the Dardanelles expedition was conducted and Great Britain's diplomatic handling of the Balkan situation were delivered by Ellis Ashmead Bartlett, British press representative, in a lecture at the Queen's Hall, last night.

"There is no doubt," Mr. Bartlett said, "that a scheme to force the Dardanelles was a great conception, for to have an open road to Constantinople opened out great possibilities, and, therefore, I do not think anyone can blame the originators of the enterprise, whoever they were."

The parents of the enterprise were a little doubtful, Mr. Bartlett remarked, but a great deal of criticism might be made against the methods in which the expedition had been carried out up to the present. He did not think the British entered upon it with any real knowledge of the Turkish Empire at all. They judged from the Balkan wars that the Turks were on their last legs, and altogether underestimated their forces, but he believed that at the very least there were 800,000 Turks now under arms.

Thought Force Small.

"I have every reason to believe that the originators of the expedition supposed that, as we had a large surplus of pre-dreadnought battleships it would not matter very much if we lost some of them in getting through to Constantinople—at least, not so much as if we had to land an army, because then we should become engaged in a great war from which it would be difficult to withdraw."

Referring to the arrangements which were made for the operation after the failure of the naval attack, Mr. Bartlett said that after the Turks had been warned that Great Britain's intentions were serious, that country undertook land operations with far too small a force. With this force she started this desperate attack on the Turkish Empire, supposing they had practically no troops available to defend the Gallipoli Peninsula.

Bulair appeared to be the most desirable place at which a landing could be affected, and Mr. Bartlett said he was told by those who took part in a naval demonstration there that no one was in occupation of the coast at that point. The discussion went against a landing at Bulair, but he argued that it was a mistake to have landed troops at Anzac, because, as it turned out, they could only just hold their own against the Turkish counter-attacks at Cape Helles.

Mr. Bartlett's opinion was that if the Australians had been landed at Cape Helles also the British would have had enough men to capture the Achi Baba position, which would have been a very decided success and useful for future operations.

The landing, Mr. Bartlett said, had been a complete success, but it was after that the real troubles and difficulties of the British began. The attack which followed on the position of Achi Baba was another failure and it was at this point early in May that they should have decided whetehr they were going to withdraw or send an immense force there to carry the thing through. For some time they did neither one thing nor the other. The French divisions which arrived were used in various local attacks which led practically to no results at all.

No Hope of Getting Through

"The Turks are too numerous and skilful," said Mr. Bartlett, "Despite their losses, there are now not less than 800,000 Turks under arms, and the longer they fight the more formidable and experienced they become in the methods of defence. With the participation of Bulgaria, we can no longer hope to get through to Constantinople."

Discussing the work of the British diplomats in Turkey and the Balkans, the lecturer, using an expressive British slang phrase, said the nation had been badly "let down" by its diplomacy in the Near East.

Winter is a Hindrance.

"The Turks," Mr. Bartlett continued, "were most kindly disposed toward us until a year and a half ago. It would have been important and easy to get Bulgaria on our side at a certain stage when we had not suffered any severe losses."

Referring to the Serb-Bulgarian situation, the lecturer said: "Nothing is more deplorable than inability to redeem a pledge solemnly made, but at the present we cannot redeem the pledge made to Serbia, for we are not in a position to save Serbia this year. Serbia will be forced to give in or to make the best terms possible.

"To say we are going to hinder the march to Germany through Bulgaria is absolute nonsense. We cannot get into Bulgaria this year, for there are only three or four weeks more in which operations are practicable on account of winter. But there is no reason why we should not continue to hold Salonika and keep our troops in Greece.

"Instead of ridiculous promises, we should have had an army in Macedonia long ago. This would have absolutely stopped any nonsense from Bulgaria and probably brought her in on our side."

In conclusion, Mr. Bartlett said he was no pessimist, and that he believed firmly that as soon as there was the proper co-ordination and concentration on the part of the British forces, Government and nation the right way would be found to achieve a permanent success against Great Britain's enemies."

Takes Hopeless View.

A hopeless view of the position of the Allies in the Dardanelles is taken by Captain Granville Fortescue in his forthcoming book, "Whit of the Dardanelles?" from which preliminary extracts are quoted in the Daily News this morning, and others are given in the current issue of the British Weekly.

Captain Fortescue, formerly of the United States cavalry, saw the Gallipoli campaign from the Turkish side as an American correspondent, and the fact that his book has been passed by the censor is declared to be the most significant piece of news received for a long time from the Dardanelles.

"The Balkan crisis came at an opportune time," says Captain Fortescue. "Evacuation of the Dardanelles can now be excused as a military necessity. He who pushed the plan can escape indictment of his folly in the east. What would have been a blow to British prestige can be explained away. The gigantic failure and its costs, 100,000 casualties, will become history."

Threat of Disaster.

"But the position is not without a threat of disaster to the Germans. It can be accepted as certain that the German General Staff know the whole truth about the situation in the Dardanelles. They know that the Mediterranean expeditionary force must withdraw or it will be exterminated. If it is withdrawn it returns to the western battle line. At the present moment Germany has her hands full in that zone. She must prevent this completely disorganized army from reinforcing Sir John French.

"Once already the Allies have been distracted from the theatre of main operations. The German General Staff ask themselves: "Cannot this manoeuvre be repleated with success? King Ferdinand is paid his price, and the experiment is made. The Germans push into Serbia has for one of its main objects the mobilizing of a large British force concentrated at the Dardanelles base. By the attack on Serbia Germany hopes to draw these troops into the Balkan theatre of war and so destroy their usefulness against the main objective.

"If this war is to end in something more than an inconclusive draw, Germany will have to be beaten in France and Flanders. Wherever pressure is brought to bear in this zone far flung German corps fly back to it like springs suddenly released, but if the Teuton staff can induce its opponents to exhaust their energies in other fields the lost section of France and Belgium will never be recovered."

THE MARRIAGE YOKE.

The dull boy in the class unexpectedly distinguished himself in a recent history examinations. The question ran: "How and when was slavery introduced into America?" To this he replied:

"No women had come over to the early Virginia colony. The planters wanted wives to help with the work. In 1619 the London Company sent over a shipload of girls. The planters gladly married them, and slavery was introduced into America." — Youths' Companion.

No Material Change Along The Canadian Front Last Week

"During the period Oct. 23 to 29 the general situation on our front underwent no material change. Heavy rains have fallen. In intervals of sunshine the enemy's artillery displayed considerable activity, and our artillery replied by shelling the enemy's billets and trenches. With exception of occasional outbursts of bombing the enemy was unusually quiet. There was little hostile rifle or machine gun fire. Our bombers and patrols maintained their activity. Whenever possible our working parties were actively employed. Several enemy working parties were dispersed by our fire.

"Early on the morning of Oct. 21st Private K. J. Donoghue, 4th battalion volunteered to go out in search of one of our men who had been wounded the previous night on patrol close to the German trenches. Donoghue found this man hiding in a clump of bushes. After dressing his wounds, Donoghue succeeded in bringing him in. On Oct. 22nd a mine was exploded under a German gallery in front of us. An enemy mining party is believed to have been blown up.

Exploded German Mine.

"On Oct. 23rd scouts of our 9th (Winnipeg) battalion discovered and exploded a land mine concealed in a small hole and covered over with leaves and grass. The crater formed was four feet deep and eight feet in diameter. In another locality a grenade was found with a trip wire attached.

"On the night of Oct 25th a patrol of our 2nd Eastern Ontario battalion crept to within twenty yards of a German working party. Three bombs were thrown among the enemy, causing several casualties.

"On the morning of Oct. 26th a hostile aeroplane of the Albatross type was attached by a British airman and brought to earth 200 yards behind our front line trenches, in the area of our 14th Montreal battalion. The pilot was killed. The observer, who was slightly wounded, was taken prisoner. The enemy endeavored to destroy the machine by artillery fire as it lay on the ground, but completely failed, over one hundred shells being fired, but only two taking effect, slightly damaging one wing. The aeroplane was armed with a Colt machine gun. Examination proved this gun to be the property of our 14th battalion.

"During the Ypres battle in April it had been temporarily loaned to our 13th battalion when relieving our 14th battalion in the trenches. In subsequent fighting it had been abandoned on April 23rd. Thus, after six calendar months and three days of grace allowed by Canadian law, the gun was returned by the enemy to its rightful owners.

"On the same day another hostile aeroplane, was attacked over our lines by a British airman and brought to earth in a crippled condition, a few hundred yards behind the German front line trenches. It was heavily fired upon by our artillery. Thousands of our men witnessed these two air duels, in which the British airman completely outfought and outmanoeuvred the Germans.

"On the night of October 26-27, a reconnaissance was undertaken by Lieut. Owen Sergt. Meyerstein, Corp. Weir and Privates Layovitch and Royce of our 7th British Columbia battalion. Various enemy listening posts were visited, but found empty. The party then crawled through a breach in the wire up to the German parapet and threw bombs into the trenches, causing great confusion among the enemy. Our party returned safely. Special reconnaissances were also carried out by Col. de Pree, Col. Kerr and Major Parsons. Valuable information was gained and the three officers were congratulated by Gen. Alderson.

Inspection by the King.

"On October 27, his Majesty the King inspected the Canadian troops. Every infantry unit was represented by a detachment of fifty men, and our cavalry brigade, 1st and 2nd C.M.R. Brigades, artillery brigades and other units by proportionate contingents. About 2,000 of our men marched past his Majesty and about 8,000 more lined the roads. The weather cleared for the occasion and our men presented a splendid appearance. His Majesty was accompanied by the Prince of Wales, and received a hearty welcome as he passed to and from the reviewing grounds.

"Major-General Carson, accompanied by Colonel Sir Montagu Allan and Colonel Maynard Rogers visited our troops during the period.

"Private A. H. Wyche of the 5th Western Canada battalion, has been awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal."

DOURO TOWNSHIP TO HELP BRITISH RED CROSS

An Enthusiastic Meeting Held Last Night — Addresses by Reeve Walsh and Messrs. C. H. Pennefather, F. D. Kerr and R. R. Hall

ONE MILL ON THE DOLLAR

A large and representative meeting of the ratepayers of the Township of Douro, was held at the Town Hall in Douro last evening. The meeting was called together at the request of Reeve Walsh to consider the manner in which Douro township would aid in assisting the British Red Cross Fund.

The meeting was a most successful one in every way, and the addresses of the different speakers were received with the deepest attention and sympathetic interest.

The chairman, Reeve Walsh, in opening the meeting, explained the objects of the meeting, stating that every citizen of the British Empire was deeply interested in the outcome of the war, and that the residents of Douro, he was satisfied, would make a splendid response to the call of the sick and wounded. The Red Cross Society was doing a noble work and he strongly commended its objects to the citizens.

Mr. C. H. Pennefather was then called upon, and delivered a short but interesting address further urging the claim of the Red Cross.

The next speaker was Mr. F. D. Kerr, whose eloquent address was received with marked attention by the audience.

The closing address was made by Mr. R. R. Hall, who forcesbly and eloquently outlined the progress of the war and the necessity of each individual man in the Empire doing his part. At the conclusion of the meeting there was a short discussion as to whether the best means would be to raise the amount by assessment or by voluntary contribution, when the decision was reached to ask the Township Council to levy an amount equal to one mill on the dollar, and also to appoint a committee of two from each sub-division to secure additional voluntary contributions to supplement the amount raised by assessment. From the interest and enthusiasm shown it is evident that Douro township will be well to the fore among the townships of Ontario in assisting the Red Cross Fund.

The soldiers at the front, the British Empire and King George were successively cheered with hearty enthusiasm.

The meeting was of the most enthusiastic nature and successful from start to finish, and it is expected that the results of the work undertaken by the Township of Douro will be carried forward to a triumphant conclusion.

PURE MILK DEMONSTRATION

It will be time well spent for those of our citizens who are particular about the milk they drink, to attend the free demonstration to be held in the Peterborough Pure Milk Company's premises on Wednesday afternoon, beginning at 2:30 o'clock. The scientific processes which ensure the clarification and pasteurization of milk, and the bottling and capping before delivery to patrons, should prove interesting to housekeepers.

NEW FEVER IN DARDANELLES

At a meeting of the Academy of Medicine, in Paris, the other day, Drs. Borrailhe, Armand, Delille, and Charles Richet made a report on a fever which they called "The three days' fever,"—which is rife in the east, and from which the French expeditionary force in the Dardanelles has suffered.

This fever which appears to be of an epidemic character, and is characterized by a total absence of eruption, is due to the bite of a mosquito. It is seldom serious and is only mortal in rare cases.

COUNCIL ADOPTS CHANGES IN GARBAGE COLLECTING SYSTEM

Will Take Effect on January 1st —Tenders For 1916 Collection to Be Called For Three Areas Sanctioned by the Council

REVIEW OF AMENDMENTS

Sanitary Inspector Spence's amendments to the Garbage Collection By-law recommended by the Property Committee were passed by the Council last night.

The new clauses follow as a further reminder to citizens, but they do not become effective until the New Year:

Clause 5, 4th line—Strike out "convenient dimensions," and substitute "not more than two cubic feet capacity and which, with contents, weigh not more than 75 pounds."

Clause 5, 9th line—After the word "removed" add "and shall thoroughly strain and wrap in paper all table and kitchen waste before placing in such receptacle."

Clause 5, 12th line—After the word "matter" add "and on the days of collection such receptacle shall be placed immediately adjoining the lane, if there be a lane, and from such lane there shall be provided a gate, door or entrance of such size and character as to permit of ready access to such receptacles, and such gate, door or entrance shall be unfastened or unlocked on the days of collection to allow the collector to obtain access to such receptacles for the purpose of emptying and returning the same, and where there is no lane such receptacle shall be placed not nearer to the street line than three feet back from the front line or angle of the dwelling or building."

New Clause 5 (a)—"No person shall pick over, interfere with, remove or scatter any bundle of paper or any article placed for removal, whether contained in receptacles or otherwise, but shall leave the same to be removed by the collectors, and all garbage shall be deposited at the Incinerator by such collectors."

Almost a Vote.

In explaining the clause dealing with the placing of the receptacles, Ald. McIntyre happened to mention that he would be in favour of putting them only three feet back from the street line.

Mayor Buller immediately caught the idea, and moved that the report go back to the Property Committee in order that the chairman would be thoroughly satisfied.

Ald. McIntyre demurred against this, saying he was quite willing that the report be adopted.

Apparently Mayor Buller was only bluffing, and Ald. Stratton and Ald. Green carried it a step further, although satisfied with the original suggestions.

Ald. Saunders favoured the amendments, which were finally included in the by-law.

Simplify It.

Ald. Green suggested that since there were a number of amendments to the Garbage By-law, it would be preferable to consolidate the by-law, which could be readily understood by contractors, aldermen, and the general public. His motion to this effect, seconded by Ald. Duffus, was carried.

Garbage Collection Tenders.

The committee's report included the recommendation to call for tenders for the collection of garbage for next year. Tenders will be asked for the collection from (a) the present area, (b) the whole city, (c) from the present area, with the following additions: Between Douro and Maria Streets west of Rogers Street, but including the north side of Douro Street and the east side of Rogers Street; and an addition in the South Ward following the line of Park Street to Albert Street, Albert, Alfred and Chamberlen Streets to the Monaghan Road, the Monaghan Road to Romaine Street, and Romaine to Lock Streets, and Lock, Crescent, and Perry Streets to George Street, and north on George Street to the southern line of the present area.

MEETINGS AT THE ASSEMBLY HALL

A very profitable address was given in the Assembly Hall last night. The manner in which the heart of God has gone out to men was brought out by reference to His choosing a single man (Adam) in the beginning, then a family, viz., Noah and his family, then a nation, the Jews, and lastly in one day His heart goes out to the whole world in John, 3:16. "God So Loved the World, etc." On Sunday evening light from the word of God was brought to bear upon the statement advocated by so many that "hell means the grave." From 2 Peter, 2:4, "The angels that sinned were cast down to hell." It was stated that fallen angels were the first inmates of hell, and that these, being spirit beings, could not be placed in the grave. The word in Matthew, 16:18, "The gates of hell shall not prevail against" (Christ's church) could not possibly mean the grave, as death and the grave have prevailed against many of the members of the "church which is His body." If in Psalms 9:17, "The wicked shall be turned into hell with all the nations that forget God" the word is the grave, the scripture, stating

SEAL BRAND COFFEE

Irresistible!

CHASE & SANBORN, MONTREAL. 105

as it does, the doom of the wicked, is by inference declaring the doom of the righteous and the wicked to be alike, as countless numbers of the righteous dead have been interred in grave and the inference would conflict with other portions of scripture. The Helven "Sheol" and the Greek word "Hades" are the two original words translated in our version, "hell," and both define "a place of departed spirits." The Helven word "Quebar" is the word for "grave."

All are invited to "search the scriptures to see if these things are so" Acts, 17-11

THE GRESSMAN COMPANY LIMITED

COUNCIL ASKS HOME GUARD TO TURN IN RIFLES

And Mayor Says He Will Have to Get Out Himself If Younger Men Fail

The Council sounded the last post for the Home Guard last night when it was decided to ask the secretary of the Peterborough Civilian Rifle Association to hand over their arms and ammunition to the city. In reply to an enquiry from Mayor Buller, Mr. Frank Linton, the secretary, stated that the Association has a deficit of $69.40. They also have 20 Ross rifles the property of the city.

Langford—They ought to be of some use to the volunteers.

Mayor — We're not going to give them to no officers or regiment.

Langford—I didn't mean them to be kept.

Ald. Green moved, seconded by Ald. Duffus that the city clerk be instructed to write Mr. Linton, asking him to turn in the arms, ammunition and paraphernalia to the chairman of the Property committee.

Ald. Stratton moved that the guns be brought to the city hall and Ald. (Capt.) Langford be asked to drill the aldermen.

Mayor Buller—I'll offer my services myself next week if some of the younger fellows don't turn out.

As a parting tribute it may be said that the Home Guard has done its bit.

MARY BROWN-LEWERS TO LECTURE HERE

Is Woman Who is Doing Things. Her Work Interests All Classes

WOMEN of Peterborough who have been reading of the splendid work achieved by Mrs. Brown-Lewers in other Canadian cities, are pleased with the announcement that she has been secured to lecture here. Her work is of interest to all grades and classes and ages of housewives and cooks. It would seem perhaps that young women studying domestic science would be the ones most deeply interested in Mrs. Brown-Lewers' domestic science lectures, or that young women who are just beginning to keep house and to do their own coking, would be most eager to hear her, and indeed it is this latter class that Mrs. Brown-Lewers really feels derives the most benefit from her work. But in every city where she lectures, the older women who have achieved success and a reputation as good housekeepers and excellent cooks, attend her school and gain from her much helpful information which they claim makes them better housewives, and more excellent cooks. While Mrs. Brown-Lewers modestly asserts that she can say nothing to help the already successful woman and only asks that she interest herself in this Better Foods Better Homes work for the sake of others, it is nevertheless true that her lectures and cookery lessons contain something of value to every woman who keeps house and desires to cook nourishing, wholesome meals for her family.

Many women who are perfectly able to bake good cakes and pastry, to mix delicious salads and good meats and vegetables in the most delectable manner, know exactly how to season foods and garnish them attractively, have not learned the nutritive value of certain foods and why some dishes should not be served with certain other dishes, and what constitutes a well balanced meal, and what foods are best for the man who works in an office and which other foods are most helpful to the man who works out of doors, or just what are the most nourishing foods for babies and for growing children, and all of this helpful information is included in Mrs. Brown-Lewers' Better Foods Better Homes course.

Realising the importance of better foods and better homes, she unselfishly gives up her own home life and devotes her entire time to teaching other women how they may be efficient homemakers, and how they may prepare meals for their families that are nourishing and economical and at the same time thoroughly enjoyable.

She will lecture in Peterborough at the Conservatory of Music, Hunter and Rubidge streets, every afternoon of the week of November 8th, except Saturday. She is brought here by the Examiner, who offers this course of lectures and cookery lessons free to every woman in the city.

Mrs. Brown-Lewers is a thoughtful student of the feminist movement so much discussed at the present time, and says that this movement is often held up to ridicule and derision by those who do not understand it. She recognizes in it an awakening of women to the fact that they have been waiting for centures for the men to do things for them which they can very well do for themselves, and that these things are all conducive to success in woman's business which is now and always has been, the business of home making.

Disappointed with the wages in the munition shops along the Clyde, Mr. Fred Smith, 40 Lafayette avenue, arrived home yesterday only to find his house locked up, his wife ill in the Nicholls Hospital and his children in the care of friends. A telegram with the news of his wife's illness was forwarded after he had sailed and missed him by a few hours. He crossed on the Scandinavian, whose passenger list included several hundred Canadians, most of whom were wounded at Festubert. There were also 160 sailors bound for Halifax and 140 marines going to Bermuda to finish a course in gunnery. Most of the wounded had received foot and leg injuries, but there was only one missing leg. It is an admitted fact that surgery's advanced efficiency has saved many limbs, which in other wars would have been amputated.

Bradford in Darkness.

Mr. Smith had the unique experience of being unable to find his way in the streets of a city with which he was perfectly familiar. He arrived in Bradford in the middle of the night, but with the city in absolute darkness he was unable to gain his bearings, and had to wait until daybreak revealed his position. In Leeds and Bradford, Lord Derby's recruiting scheme is working most satisfactorily.

Worked on the "Ramilles."

Mr. Smith went to England to work on munitions and was engaged in the huge plant of Beardmore's at Dalmuir on the Clyde, where guns, submarines, aeroplanes, hydroplanes, shells and torpedo boats are being constructed. Between 700 and 800 ment from Canada and the United States are working in the shops along the Clyde, and hundreds of others are scattered throughout England. Mr. Smith was engaged for a time on the immense superdreadnought "Ramilles," 9,000 tons heavier than the "Queen Elizabeth." He was also working on the torpedo boat "Hardy," which had put in from the North Sea for minor repairs to her machinery.

Mr. Smith returned to Canada for the reason that he could not make sufficient money to keep himself in the Old Country and his family in Canada. It is possible to make four and five pounds a week, but overtime is necessary, and despite his attempts he failed to share in the overtime work. His highest wage for a week of 54 hours was £2, 2s. 1d. The hours of employment are 8 a.m. to 9 a.m.; three-quarters of an hour for breakfast; 6:45 a.m. to 1:15 p.m.; dinner; 2 p.m. to 6:15 p.m. While many secured overtime work, there were numerous other men like himself who did not. Moreover, he was refused a clearance which would have permitted him to apply at other shops. The only alternative was to walk the streets for six weeks and he preferred to return home. It was given as a reason for refusing his clearance that a battle might occur at any time and damaged ships would require the work of every man in the shop. But Mr. Smith felt that since there had bene so few calls of this nature he should have been allowed to apply for work elsewhere. Had he been able to make the money he expected he would have remained, but under the circumstances he considered that as the father of a family he would be better off in Canada.

The establishing of a munition tribunal was operating along the Clyde and tended to keep the men regular and efficient. On the third offense of being late a worker could be imprisoned.

LARGE FAMILIES ENCOURAGED.

Kaiser Will be Godfather to Seventh, Eighth and Ninth Sons.

Arrested On Old Charge

East City Man Said to Have Eluded the Police for Two Years—Today's Police Court

Apprehended on a charge of criminal assault dating from July 30, 1913, a former resident of East City appeared this morning before Magistrate Dumble, and through his counsel, Mr. G. N. Gordon, declined to plead or elect. He was remanded for one week.

Mr. Gordon informed the court that his client, who of late has resided in Chatham, had sought to enlist for overseas service. This fact was chronicled by the press, with the result that the police were able to learn of the whereabout of the accused and his arrest followed.

Chief Thompson resented this assertion. He said that circulars were sent out in the regular way and until a few weeks ago, accused confined his activities to the United States.

"Yes, and it took two years to catch him," observed Mr. Gordon.

Committed to Orillia.

Magistrate Dumble declared his intention of committing Denham Jones to Orillia, where he will be taken care of. Mr. G. N. Gordon asked to have him sent to the Reformatory, where he would have an opportunity of learning a trade or as an alternative, liberate him and give his mother an opportunity of arrying out her original intention of buying a piece of land in Monaghan and establishing D. J. thereon.

The court did not agree with the last named proposal, claiming that the lure of the land would fail to impress one who "owns all the railways in the country."

From Ennismore.

A couple of residents of Ennismore pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness. They were fined two dollars and given ten days to pay it in.

"Don't forget to pay the money or the constable will pay you a friendly visit," warned the Magistrate.

John Lowry for a similar offence was fined two dollars with an option of ten days in gaol.

REAR WHEELS OF AUTOMOBILE WERE BADLY SMASHED

Hit With Street Car at Charlotte and Aylmer Sts.—Belonged to Mr. A. F. Hagerman

A street car proceeding east on Charlotte street collided with the automobile of Mr. A. F. Hagerman of the Normal school, at the corner of Charlotte and Aylmer streets yesterday. Mr. Hagerman was going south on Aylmer street. The street car struck the rear end of the automobile, turning it right around, but not upsetting it. The rear wheels were badly smashed. Mr. Hagerman with his two children who were riding in the car at the time were unhurt.

Pte. Phipps' Hint To the Slackers

a member of the Peterborough Trades and Labour Council, and on behalf of the Council Mr. Hartley wished to welcome him home. The citizens of Peterborough were proud of him and of every man who had left Peterborough to fight for king and country. All had not been born in Canada, but he looked upon them all as Canadian citizens and was proud of everything they had done.

Pte. Phipps was greeted with three hearty cheers and a tiger when he arose to speak. He was manifestly embarrassed as he faced the crowd, and for a minute could not find words with which to express himself. His first message was straight from the shoulder and was addressed to the men of Peterborough who have not yet followed the path of duty. "I'd like to see some of the slackers around the streets come along and do their bit," he declared. "I have seen six or seven on each corner, smoking their pipes and loafing. They should be up here in the armouries, getting their uniforms. As for myself, I was the first man to enlist in Peterborough."

Pte. Phipps said that he had lain on the field, wounded, for two days and nights. He was glad to be home in Peterborough, he said, in conclusion.

Mayor Buller explained that Pte. Phipps had been close to Major Bennett when the latter was killed.

The meeting was brought to a close by the singing of the Doxology and the National Anthem.

PRINCETON HERO KILLED IN BATTLE

BALTIMORE, Nov. 2.—John Prentiss Jee, Jr., a famous Princeton football player in the early '90's, was killed on September 28 while fighting as a private in the British army along the northern boundary of France. Word to that effect was received from the London war bureau by relatives in this city.

Poe was born in Baltimore 46 years ago. He won international fame as a captain in the Honduran army, when with a handful of men in a fort at Amalpa harbour, he opened fire on a Nicaraguan gunboat, compelling it to steer away under the impression that the Hondurans had a big force at the fort.

OFFERS TO RAISE SEVENTEEN NEW REGIMENTS IN ANSWER TO CALL

Expected That at the End of November the Desired Quarter of a Million Men Will Have Enlisted

OTTAWA, Nov. 1.—Offers to raise to be commanded by Major Elliott seventeen new regiments, or nearly [illegible] The Province of Nova Scotia is represented in the response by the Counties of Hants and Colchester, each of which offers a regiment. The "Soo" offers a regiment, and Manitoulin Island and mainland opposite has, through W. Smythe, M.P., of Algoma, offered one regiment. Durham County, it is expected, will also supply a regiment, under Col. Tom Johnston, while Peterboro will also have a new regiment to be commanded by Col. Mills, who is coming back from the front. Northern British Columbia has, through Major Warden, offered a regiment, and Vancouver Island has, through Major Hamilton, also offered a regiment, and the Eastern Townships in Quebec will have a new regiment, offered by Col. Gilbert

An Indian Regiment.

There is also a proposition to raise a regiment of Indians along the line of the N.T.R., and on the Ontario Indian reserves. Recruiting will start on this region shortly, and it is expected that there will not be much difficulty in raising a full regiment of Indians.

It is evident that the scheme of recruiting of the Minister of Militia of billeting the men in the districts in which they are raised and forming them into county battalions is meeting with splendid success, as an appeal is thus made to the sentiment, patriotism and local pride of every locality.

It is understood that the British War Office, through Earl Kitchener, has accepted the suggestion that the 48th British Columbia Regiment, at present in England, under Col Holmes, should become a pioneer battalion and to go as a unit, instead of being broken up and sent as details to the front.

RAILWAY MAN SAW JOHN BROWN'S RAID

HIGGINS ESCAPED FROM THE BAND, AND DIES IN MARYLAND.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 2.—Patrick Higgins, 84 years old, and said to be the only surviving actor in the John Brown raid, died recently at his home in Sandy Hook, Md., a small town east of Harper's Ferry. He had lived in America for 54 years, coming from Ireland to Sandy Hook.

He was employed on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad for 50 years, and was retired upon a pension. He left $25,000, saved by frugality from his small wages.

He was the watchman on the bridge on October 16, 1859, when Brown came down out of the Maryland mountains, where he had been preparing for his attack upon the United States armory the previous six months with a band of 25 men.

Patrick noticed when he went to work that night that the lights were out and things were not right at the Maryland end of the bridge. As he proceeded across the structure to the watchbox, midway, he was confronted by several men with guns, and ordered to halt. Then one of the captors was ordered to take him with in the enclosure of the government works, where the other watchmen were held prisoners.

However, Patrick dealt his captor a blow in the face and ran over the ties into the town, getting only a bullet hole through his hat.

By evening of the following day the raiders were either shot by the citizens or captured by the arriving companies of militia, and Patrick was once more able to resume his post as watchman on the bridge unmolested.

Removal of 21 of Parnell St's 56 Trees Recommended by the City Engineer to City Council

The Council had a light lunch last night instead of the full course monthly fare and Mayor Buller's efforts to cut short the Fletcherizing resulted in an early adjournment before ten o'clock. The meeting was inclined toward the lighter vein, possibly influenced by the amenities of approaching partings. There were also several little gusts indicating the direction of the next mayoralty winds. With the exception of the garbage by-law changes there was little business transacted.

Ald. Edgar directing his remarks to Ald. Green, said that no report had been received of the operation of the new system of management in the Engineer's office. The committee was to have known the results by October 1st.

Ald. Green replied that a system is being inaugurated, but it is necessarily slow. Considerable printed matter has to be secured in connection with the work. It is coming along satisfactorily and progress is being made.

Ald. Edgar remarked that he thought the report should have been made without any further request from members.

Plan Street Work.

Ald. Duffus said he believed a cheaper and as good a system of permanent road building on residential streets could be outlined for the next work undertaken by the city. A rock bottom with a top of trap rock and tarvia would make a road probably better than a pavement. Besides most of the material could be secured here. The hauling of field stone would give work to teamsters, and the finished street would not require flushing and scraping. One or two treatments of oil during the year would be sufficient.

Ald. Edgar favoured the idea, but observed that a system of surface drainage must first be provided. He enlarged on the idea by proposing that every committee should begin to outline the requirements for next year in order that the new Council would have at hand something to immediately work on.

Ald. Green stated that he and Engineer Parsons had spent hours on the plan broached by Ald. Duffus. "We believed it wise," he said, "to narrow the residential streets, put in surface drainage and do all the road building with material obtained at home, except oil. The Engineer proposed to do almost identically what the aldermen have in mind. A home-made road can be built at 50 p.c. or 60 p.c. of the cost of the pavement.

Ald. Duffus moved, seconded by Ald. McIntyre, that the City Engineer be asked to bring in a report on the cost of road building along the above lines.

Ald. Green reminded Ald. Duffus that the city has a quarry purchased when Mayor Buller was chairman of the Board of Works, that there is a crusher located there, and that there is no drawing of material to it. Teamsters are employed only in drawing away the crushed material.

Ald. Duffus— The material at the crusher is too valuable for a road base.

Ald. Langford interposed with the comment that good macadam roads oiled, are proving their worth. "Let us make up our minds that we are not going to put down any pavement next year," was his suggestion, based, he said, on the financial conditions.

Mayor Buller stated that the city quarry provided plenty of material, which would prove a great asset to the city. Included in the sub-rock was a quality practically as good as trap rock.

Sewerage For Auburn.

Ald Duffus also moved, seconded by Ald. Weir, that the City Engineer be asked to bring in a report on the cost of providing a sewer to Auburn and at the same time the Fire, Water and Light committee will report on a water system.

Ald. Green urged the aldermen not to load the City Engineer with the last straw. He is extremely busy and has given a great deal of his time to various matters, some of them not yet completed.

Ald. Duffus replied that he did not wish to ask for the impossible, and the report would do as soon as the Engineer could prepare it.

Geo. Brenton's Request.

Mr. Geo. Brenton's petition for a building by-law for a galvanized shed for the storage of sewer pipe, to be erected behind his store at the corner of Hunter and Queen streets, was left with the Engineer, with power to act. Mr. Brenton agreeing to remove the building at any time the city made this demand.

Sewer Was Blocked.

Mr. Mark Spenceley presented a bill for $9.36 for the work of relieving the blocked condition of a sewer service to his property. Superintendent Street Commissioner Evans was present when the trouble was located under city property.—Referred to Board of Works.

Parnell Street Trees.

Ald. Edgar's designs to let a little sunshine into Parnell street has reached the stage where Engineer Parsons has selected those which he believes should be removed. There are 30 trees on the south side of the street and 9 of them are crossed out on the map; on the north side 12 out of 26 may disappear.

Ald. Saunders— Are the owners of these trees satisfied to have them cut down?

Mayor Buller—They will receive notice giving them ten days to reply.

Ald. Green moved, seconded by Ald. Edgar, that the residents be duly notified.

The Hydro Award.

City Solicitor Gordon reported the situation of the city's appeal against the arbitrators' award to the Peterborough Light and Power Company. In his words:

"It is not found as a fact that the award was reasonable or unreasonable, so we are practically back at the starting point from the award."

EX-ALD. W. J. JOHNSTON,
Who Suffered a Paralytic Stroke This Morning, and is Confined to His Home in a Serious Condition.

AN EXPLANATION IN REGARD TO THE AFFAIRS OF LATE DR. GOWAN

In view of the fact that certain statements were made at the time of Dr. Gowan's death, to the effect that his financial standing and practice were in jeopardy, the matter has been thoroughly gone into, and the following letters will go to show that the financial condition of the late Dr. Gowan was sound, and that his dental practice was a remunerative and satisfactory one:

October 29th, 1915.

Dear Mrs. Gowan,—We beg to advise you that pursuant to your instructions, we have spent considerable time in investigating the financial affairs of the late Dr. Gowan, and now beg to report that after a thorough examination of his books, and interviews and correspondence with persons with whom he has had business relations, we beg to say that we found that Dr. Gowan's business affairs at the time of his death were on a most satisfactory footing, that he was perfectly solvent and had ample assets to meet any and all outstanding liabilities.

Dr. Gowan's books indicate that his practice was largely composed of substantial citizens of this city, and also that considerable money was outstanding on his books at the time of his death.

We are of the opinion that the outstanding accounts on his books are all good and collectable.

The reports in circulation that his cheques were dishonored and protested by his banker, we find, upon investigation, to be absolutely without foundation and to be false and untrue in every respect.

We enclose you herewith a letter from the Manager of the Bank of Toronto, with which Bank Dr. Gowan had his account since coming to Peterborough, about ten years ago. This letter speaks for itself.

We also enclose you a letter from Mr. M. K. Cowan, K.C., who had charge of the late Dr. Gowan's defence in the libel action which was brought against him and the Peterborough Review by Messrs. Meharry and McKim. Mr. Cowan's statements should go a long way to remove any doubts which may exist in the minds of the Doctor's friends as to the belief of the late Dr. Gowan, in the merits of the course he pursued in connection with the action.

You are quite at liberty to make use of this letter as you may choose.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) Bennett & Goodwill.

Mrs. (Dr.) Gowan,
168 Brock Street, City.

Bank of Toronto,
Peterborough, Ont.,
October 9th, 1915.

Messrs. Bennet and Goodwill,
Barristers, Peterborough.

Dear Sirs,—Your favour of the 5th instant received. We have never refused a cheque of Dr. W. C. Gowan, deceased. His account with us was never overdrawn, and we are surprised that anyone should make a statement or circulate a report to the contrary.

Yours truly,
P. Campbell, Manager.

Toronto, Oct. 15th, 1915.

J. E. L. Goodwill, Esq.,
Barrister, etc.,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Mr. Goodwill,—I was very much surprised to be informed by Mrs. Gowan that reports were circulated in Peterborough to the effect that the late Dr. Gowan had felt that he had done something wrong or improper in writing the letters concerning the risk in Peterborough which he had written, and that on this account he was afraid to face trial. From the various consultations which I had with the late Dr. Gowan, the conclusion which I formed was that the man had felt that he had done what was absolutely right and proper, and what it was his plain duty to do as a law-abiding citizen of Peterborough, knowing the facts as he knew them. The last time he consulted me we discussed the evidence and he seemed cheerful and bright and in no wise down cast, and felt that the course which he had taken in the matter would be upheld by the Court.

Mrs. Gowan asked me to write you exactly what my impressions were, hence this letter to you.

Yours very truly,
M. K. Cowan.

Toronto, Ont.,
19th October, 1915.

Mrs. (Dr.) W. C. Gowan,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Madam,—We are in receipt of your letter of the 8th October, and we are pleased to advise that ever since this firm had any dealings with the late Dr. W. C. Gowan his business transactions with us have been perfectly satisfactory, and with us his credit was never questioned.

Faithfully Yours,
Claudius Ash, Sons & Co., Limited.
(T. Windeyer).

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 19, 1915.

Mrs. E. A. C. Cowan,
168 Brock Street,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Mrs. Gowan,—We are just in receipt of your favour of the 18th inst., and we are exceedingly sorry to hear about the false reports circulating as to the financial affairs of the late Dr. Gowan.

During his dealings for many years with our Company, his credit was always unlimited, and we do not think we had anyone on our books who was more prompt in paying their bills.

We trust that these baseless rumours will soon die down and that you will hear no more of them.

With kindest regards, we remain,

Yours truly,
The Temple Pattison Co., Limited,

Mrs. W. C. Gowan,
168 Brock Street,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Mrs. Gowan,—In connection with our conversation this morning I beg to repeat what I said to you, that I knew your late husband since he came to this City, ten years ago, intimately. I sold him the property at the above number, and our business relations in regard to the same and otherwise, during this whole period, have always been most satisfactory. I have no hesitation in expressing my firm belief that his professional affairs were on a most satisfactory footing, and that his sad end was not in any degree attributable to despondency, or discontent, or disappointment in his business affairs. He was always most prompt in meeting his responsibilities, and seemed to always have sufficient ready money for all demands.

I am, dear Mrs. Gowan,
Yours sincerely,
(Signed) W. H. Moore.

NEW QUARTERS IN THE BARRIE BUILDING

For the Progressive Club—$81 the Result of Lecture

The new quarters of the Peterborough Progressive Club are on the second floor of Mr. Barrie's new store, George street, which he has very kindly given for their use. Work will go on as usual every Wednesday. Everyone is welcome. Word has been received from the headquarters of the Canadian War Contingent Association that four bales sent by the club and shipped through the Red Cross have arrived safely and the contents greatly appreciated.

Proceeds form the lecture, "The Great War," given by the Rev. Mr. Ketterson, which through the kindness of Dr. Robinson, was held in the Empire Theatre, amount to $81.00.

WAS DISMISSED WITH COSTS

Another echo from the Canadian Cordage Company occupied the attention of His Honour Judge Hutcheson this forenoon. The liquidator sued a Mr. Richard Pierce, of Frankford, on an application for stock. Mr. Pierce repudiated his signature and some years ago had notified the company it was a forgery. Nevertheless the company pursued him, with the result that the action was dismissed with costs, the right to follow another Richard Price if he can be found being reserved. Mr. Wilson McCue (Smiths Falls), appeared for Mr. Pierce, and Mr Bernie (Peterborough) for the liquidator.

Munitions and Arms Factories of France are Working With Zeal and Determination

(By Laurance Jerrold.)

A party of war correspondents of Allied and neutral countries, invited by the French Government, concluded a strenuous visit to munition factories with a banquet. When the toasts came, one of speakers quoted that saying of Rudyard Kipling's and which seems to be peculiarly neat and true: "The only good Boche is a dead Boche." The speaker added that all he had just seen in the past five days prove to him that the French people behind the front is doing its best to fulfil that saying of Kipling's. I have been to the front, and, like everyone else, came away knowing that victory is certain. In Bordeaux, or even in Paris, one might have qualms now and then. At the front no such thing, and nothing but absolute certitude. I have just come from these other battlefields—the munitions and arms factories, where in surroundings made almost diabolical by molten steel, furious steam hammers and grim men too busy to say a word, I saw those other French soldiers who for their own part, and with the same zeal and determination, are forging victory.

As M. Albert Thomas, the Minister of Munitions, said to us on our return, France, like all the Allies, had to improvise. France is organised for peace—few countries better—she was not organized for war. Until a few months ago, until almost the end of the first year of war, most of what she did materially was improvised. The spirit of her soldiers was a very old thing. But the French military spirit is one thing, and a great thing, and perhaps in the long run the greatest thing. The making of guns and shells is another. France began to organize; now is organized. As the Minister said, she will be able soon to beat the Boches at their own game, by method, organization, and steady production of all the deadly means of fulfilling Rudyard Kipling's saying.

The "Nut" in the Car

The crack motorist team of the French army drove our party at an average of fifty miles an hour for hundreds of miles of roads through Burgundy and Central France. A hasty mid-day meal, then a tramp scores of miles through acres of shells, some filled with explosives others made ready to be filled, and of guns, from the foolish-looking but most effectual trench mortar to the heavy gun. Our motorist team had been specially formed in weeks of training by its chief, an engineer who, of course, drives his own car. Nine out of the twelve motorists drove their own cars. They had been to the front; they had been in the British lines; they had driven British generals, who grumbled because he was not driven fast enough. Anything under sixty miles an hour he thought crawling. Our motorists team was one more example of the democracy of the French army.

Most of the drivers were engineers; many owned large factories themselves, and some in civilian life employed in their works the officers under those orders they now are. A fine set of fellows these motorists, and good proofs of the French spirit of enterprise which has sometimes been denied to be French. Here was one of the men, for instance, speaking English almost like an Englishman, Italians, Spanish and a few other languages, and having started and run factories in most parts of the world, in East Africa, and in the Argentine. Here was another, obviously a "nut" in peacetime, now a military driver, a slave to his car, hardly able to snatch three hours' sleep at night before tuning her up and starting the fifty-mile-an-hour drive again the next morning.

In a Factory.

At each stoppage we were whirled into a factory, and passed through various stages of bewilderment. Here was a silent factory; hundreds of women polishing, measuring, painting 75 shells. Then another shed, where the shells lay stacked in thousands. The third factory was an inferno of noise, sledge-hammers or men with iron mallets thumping on steel and iron. But this, at least, was cold iron and steel. "Profoundest hell" was where noise and heat were united—more sledge-hammers pounding, but this time upon white-hot blocks of steel.

We began with "Rosalie." She is the bayonet when the French trooper has fondly nicknamed. The Government works there turn out, or have turned out in former times, a dozen kinds of bayonets; for instance, those for the Japanese, Russian, and Greek armies. Further along were the rifles. The shells chiefly in this case those of the 75 gun also. We first saw guns at ——, but there were more explosives than guns.

There were guns at ——. There, under the leadership of the quiet, laconic, but impressive general manager, the picture of imperturbable determination, we waited. The "75" was of course there, but there were also larger fellows. For our benefit one of the heavy guns, this time a 9.6 in. mounted on a truck and rails, was fired. The usual attention was paid to us of handing out cotton-wool for our ears, but, to the surprise of the uninitiated, the 9.6 made less noise, or at least a duller noise, than the ear-splitting "75", which is only, of course, a 3-in. gun. The latter in the practice ground almost cracks one's ears. At the front, when it is really pouring shell over the Boches, one notices the noise less. Perhaps one has other things to think of—the enemy's shells, for one thing. I may add that at the front it is not etiquette, even for an amateur, and even if he could get it, to put cotton-wool in one's ears.

The Convalescent Camp.

The quiet, imperturbable general manager, who evidently does not get excited about anything, does not trouble about the duration of the war. He just steadily makes more shells, more guns, and will doggedly go on doing so. Guns here are not only made but mended. I saw the convalescent home where the gallant and sturdy little 75's who have been wounded at the front are getting well again. A new inmate has just arrived and stood on a cart. The good old fore man rushed up to her, jumped on the car, and looked her all over, testing her mechanism. "There doesn't seem to be much the matter with her," he said. "We shall get her all right in a jiffy," and a steam crane came, lowered its hook and carried off the 75 to be doctored and made fit again. In the shed where the war-worn 75's had been restorted to health it was delightful to see the loving care with which the men gave the finishing touch of fresh paint to each revived warrior, numbered them and put them in rows to be entrained and taken back to the front to begin their good work again.

At—we saw the first forges; three-inch shells, red or white hot, being hurled about, and apparently played with, by grim, silent-looking players, as if they were quoits. We started back to avoid a red-hot shell, and nearly leaned against a red-hot bar of steel six feet long. The only safe thing was to get close to the imperturable manager. All the time, of course, the sledgehammer going with the noise of a gun report.

Grim Resolsteness.

The men who work in these infernal regions, and the women also, are as much at the front as the men in the trenches. But they leave a very different impression upon one. They have the same spirit and determination, but they express it very differently. War in the trenches seems literally one great glorious game, which all who are not killed or wounded enjoy hugely. The front trenches, of course, are scarcely hilarious. But a hundred yards from the Boches everything is fun and jokes and pastimes that seem heroic to the visitor, because of the place, but which those who amuse themselves with them take quite naturally. Making munitions in this other front of the factories is no joke at all. Only the women seemed at times amused by us visitors. Civilians at the front in the trenches are a constant joy to the soldier, especially when shells come. In the factories when we leaped about to avoid white-hot iron projectiles hurled along the floor, and must indeed have looked comic, we drew not a smile from the grim-set faces of the munition-workers. A grim resoluteness was indeed almost the only expression their faces gave. The girls polishing or painting shells often giggled pleasantly, and the old peasant women in mob caps finishing off shrapnel bullets smiled delightfully at us.

One, the most picturesque and pleasant-looking of all, was coy, and hid under a table not to be phofiend such parties as ours always include, and there was great fun for a moment in the munitions factory. But of all the men, from the experienced wise old foreman to the boy of 14 or 15 working half-naked in the heat, scarcely one ever smiled. They were the picture of grim resolve. They looked as if they thought, and I believe they did think, while they were fashioning white-hot steel into cannon, that they were then actually in the thick of war, and fighting their country's battles—as indeed they are.

Tommy Looks Like Crusader

LONDON, Nov. 2.—On some parts of the Flanders battlefront the British army authorities have been serving out to the men in the trenches steel helmets similar to those introduced by the French. The British helmet is perfectly plain and not decorated like the French, which has a grenade crest and a rigid crown.

The British helmet exactly resembles a pudding basin. It is lined with soft leather, and while light, it is very warm. The men are said to be delighted with the new equipment, because of the added sense of security against splinters, bullets and bomb fragments. One report says that in a small section of the trenches 20 men were saved from serious head wounds during the first four days of the experiment. The helmet lends a bizarre air to the troops, who wear it over the balaclava wool helmet, giving them the appearance of Crusaders.

The next attraction at the Grand after this week will be D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, "The Birth of A Nation." The engagement begins on Monday, November 15th, and is for three nights and two matinees.

This is the great production which is still making a record run of 800 performances in New York City, where it created the sensation of the season. It is estimated that over two million people have seen the production since it was originally brought out in the east. It has had other sensational runs in Boston, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles, to its credit. In Canada, "The Birth of a Nation," has created new records for long runs and large audiences everywhere it goes. In Toronto and Montreal famous road stars were cancelled in order to continue the run of Griffith's masterpiece in the Royal Alexandra Theatre, and also in the Arena.

Mr. Griffith was eight months making this wonderful story. He employed 18,000 people, and 3,000 horses, and the total cost of the work reached the enormous figure of half a million dollars.

The story is one of romance and adventure linked to the most vital periods of American history. It records its facts with the rapidity of lightning and yet never departs from the fundamentals of true drama. Love and conflict are its basic theme but a myriad of details illumine the narrative and lift it so far beyond any thing our stage has ever known that the usual avenues of comparison do not offer a road to follow in this instance. Linked with the drama is an operatic score which carries recurrent themes with every vital scene and character in the epic. This wonderful score which is synchronied to the drama, is in itself an incomparable work of art. An orchestra of forty travels with the attraction to handle the musical features of the presentation.

That part of history dealing with the rise and fall of the slavery problem is the vital spark upon which Griffith has built his story. The conflict which this question causes is reproduced in great battles and in all the thrilling things which are a part of war.

Drove Bulgars Into the River French Charged With Bayonet Routed Attacking Force

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Kragujevac, the Serbian arsenal town, has fallen before the Germans, according to an official announcement made at Berlin yesterday.

Directly west of Kragujevac the Germans, after taking Milianovac, are pressing south, and announce the capture of the heights south of the town and Trivunova mountain. In the capture of the heights several hundred Serbians were taken prisoner.

The Overseas News Agency at Berlin announced yesterday that the outer forts of Nish are now under bombardment by the Bulgarian artillery advancing from Knlazevac and Pirot.

From all sides the Germans, Austrians and Bulgarians are slowly closing in on the Serbian armies, the position of which grows graver daily. They are fighting fiercely, however, to save their country and have inflicted such losses on Field Marshal von Mackensen's force that he has been compelled to send for reinforcements and leave the more serious work of invading the eastern and southern part of the country to the Bulgarians, who have had more experience in mountain warfare such as the Serbians are waging.

From the junction of the Danube and Timok Rivers, in the north-east, to Uskub in the south, the Bulgarians are moving westward, driving the Serbians out of the towns into the mountains, but from Uskub southward they have been checked, as the Serbians in that territory have been reinforced by the French and British with modern guns and with gunners, who gained valuable experience in France and Gallipoli.

Drove Bulgars Into River.

An attempt made yesterday by the Bulgarians, with the aid of artillery, to dislodge French troops from their northernmost position in Serbia met with failure.

A few advance posts scouting in the direction of Veles retired before a Bulgarian attack to their base at Krivolak, where a division of French troops were strongly entrenched. The Bulgarians then attacked this position three times. The Bulgarians were caught in a cross-fire of the French artillery and stopped when they were met by a fusillade of the infantry.

Finally the French charged with the bayonet, and the Bulgarians were driven into the Vardar River, which is swollen by recent rains, and many were drowned.

It is asserted that Kolchanic Pass has been reconquered by the French and that the Veles district has been freed of the Bulgarians, although the town and railroad still remain in Bulgarian hands.

The fighting between Serbians and Bulgarians in the Timok Valley has been most desperate. A Bucharest despatch to the Rome Corriere Della Serra, of Milan, says that the 3rd Bulgarian Regiment of Infantry was almost destroyed, only 50 men surviving. Public buildings and barracks at Wilin, Bulgaria, are filled with wounded men. This newspapers also states that 30,000 Serbians have taken refuge in Roumania.

Berlin claims that the French troops which have arrived in Serbia came from the Gallipoli Peninsula.

The British expeditionary force in Serbia received its baptism of fire on the Gievgeli-Doiran front, where, according to a Times despatch from Athens, it took part in the recent fighting.

The official communication of the Montenegrin War Office, dated October 30, says: "The enemy attacked our positions at Varda. His advance on Bielobordo has been stopped, but the combat continues. The Austrian losses have been appreciable. An artillery combat on the Drina is proceeding."

SETTING HIM RIGHT.

During the concert a man who really appreciated music for its own sake was greatly annoyed by a young fop in front of him who kept talking to the girl at his side. "What a nuisance!" finally exclaimed the appreciative man.

"Do you refer to me, sir?" threateningly demanded the fop.

"Oh, no. I meant the musicians. They keep up such a noise with their instruments that I can't hear half your brilliant conversation."—Argonaut.

MAILED FIST HEAVIER ON BELGIAN TOWNS

ROTTERDAM, Nov. 2—(Despatch to London Daily News.)—I hear on good authority that since the appointment a few weeks ago of a Prussian cavalry officer as the new Military Governor life in Brussels has been unbearable, the most oppressive regulations have been instituted, and large numbers of people arrested.

The principle of the mailed fist has also spread to Antwerp, where between twenty and thirty persons have already been sentenced to long terms of imprisonment and transported to Germany.

In the villages the same process has been carried out. Lokeren, Roiselaer, and Eltichoe have each been fined 5,000 marks ($1,250) because their authorities had not discovered in the three places a total of sixteen pigeons.

In this connection a remarkable description of the reign of terror in Brussels is contributed to the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant by its Brussels correspondent—and the message is all the more extraordinary because it passed the German censorship:

"For some days past," it says, "the walls here have been covered with placards in such superfluity as has not been seen for a long time. Not only the quantity but the tone and contents of the notices prove that something has altered. What it is precisely is difficult to describe. Perhaps I can indicate it by saying that the iron fist will make itself felt.

"On October 12 there was an order for the surrender of all men who during the war had belonged to the enemy's army and might be hidden here. Not only must the men themselves report, but everybody who knew of their presence was commanded, under threats of heavy punishment, to disclose their knowledge.

"Now the inhabitants are threatened that on the renewal of the visit of the Allies' fliers they will have German soldiers billeted upon them. To the uninitiated the logical connection may not be immediately grasped. It is this: The enemy's fliers have repeatedly chosen as targets buildings in which it was known German troops assembled. It is presumed that the population has made known these buildings to the fliers; therefore the population is held responsible, and, in order that they may be watched more narrowly, soldiers will be quartered in their houses if the fliers come again."

THE EXPLANATION.

"My dear," said Mr. Hemmandhaw, "I hope you are not planning to buy a lot of new furniture?"

"I am not," replied Mrs. Hemmandhaw, "and I don't know what gives you the idea."

"This shopping list gives me the idea."

"What shopping list?"

"On this paper which I just picked up off the floor is written: 'wash stand, parlour chairs, dining-room table, writing desk, refrigerator, taboret, piano stool, pedestal, step ladder, cedar chest, music cabinet and garbage can.'"

"Oh, that is just a record I was keeping of the things the baby has fallen from this week."—Judge.

RUSSIAN GUNS SILENCED THE GERMAN BATTERIES ON RIGA FRONT

PETROGRAD, Nov. 2.— It appears that the retreat of Gen Lauenstein's troops, acknowledged in the German official reports last Saturday, was really due to a bad beating. The Russian artillery poured a deadly fire at the Germans, as they hastily made entrenchments on the southern bank of the Mussa. The German gunners were unable to reply with any serious effect.

The enemy certainly has sent many batteries to the Balkans. Prisoners say that formerly every battalion had a battery behind it; there are not now enough to make them felt seriously. After being compelled to retire across the river, the Germans tried to make a stand with the assistance of all the batteries which could be sent and reinforcements of men. The Russians continued to harass them, and forced them to retreat further.

The Germans, having failed in two months of almost incessant attacks to reach Riga and Dvinsk by various routes, are now trying along the railway which skirts the shores of the Gulf of Riga from Tukum, and have, according to their reports, reached a point west of Schlok. This is a very slight advance, and much low ground, over which it is difficult to move, lies between them and their objective.

At the moment of telegraphing the War Office has not received details, but it seems clear that the German position at Olai, south-west of Riga, has been made untenable.

Rejoicing in Riga.

A private message from Riga says that there is great rejoicing in the city. They consider the present developments have removed the danger created by the vigorous German attack began over a fortnight ago. There is no doubt that the enemy will throw more troops at this point, but the bringing up of men and supplies is made difficult by the activity of the allied submarines in the Baltic.

In the Dvinsk sector, both to the west and south-west of that city, the Russians have begun an offensive, apparently in anticipation of renewed attacks by the Germans, and they are also on the move in the lake district east of the Dvinsk-Vilna Railway, and in Volhynia and Galicia. The result of these various battles has not been disclosed, if indeed, they are concluded. Those at the southern end of the line are doubtless designed to prevent the Germans and Austrians from sending reinforcements to Serbia.

To-day's official communication from Russian Army Headquarters intimates that newly organized corps have taken the field and are giving a good account of themselves. Detachments of young Lettish troops are singled out for the valor they are displaying in their baptism of fire on the Riga front.

LETTER OF THANKS FROM PROMINENT BELGIAN FOR GIFT

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien read at the Cathedral on Sunday a letter from Belgium gratefully acknowledging the gift of $2,235.00 from this diocese toward the relief of the Belgians. The collection was taken up in December last. Not only did the letter express deep thanks for this gift, but it was an acknowledgment of the national sympathy, charity and aid in men and money, which Canada has contributed to Belgium. The letter breathes a beautiful sentiment and hope, but on account of its pointedness Bishop O'Brien felt it was better not to publish it just now. "After the shooting of the English nurse, Miss Cavell, they are capable of anything" remarked His Lordship.

Feldman and Christie, the popular entertainers, opened a week's engagement at the Grand last night when they gave a splendid presentation of "The Three Twins" to a crowded house. The attraction is even better than last year, with a company of clever entertainers who highly pleased the audience. They should do a record business here this week. Feldman and Christie themselves are as funny as ever, and Agnes Geary keeps the fun going all the way. Williams and Williams sang some songs that were thoroughly enjoyed, and the whole performance was pleasing.

Peterboro Boy Received Thirty-Seven Wounds Says London Dispatch

Special to The Examiner

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Sergt. R. Beavis, a member of the Thirteenth Battalion, previous to joining the troops in the employ of the Bell Telephone Co., of Peterborough, is making good strides to recovery in a London hospital. He received thirty-seven wounds from shrapnel and bayonet wounds, received while lying wounded. He is now among the most cheerful patients in the hospital, having been awarded the D. C. M. and the Legion of Honeur. Some time ago he was in the Mounted Police. His parents reside in Peterborough, Ont.

CHARGED WITH ATTEMPTED MURDER

Charles Brewer Appeared Before Police Magistrate Dumble This Afternoon —Was Remanded

Charles Brewer, 30 Alfred Street, appeared before Police Magistrate Dumble this afternoon in answer to a charge of attempting to murder his wife, Margaret Brewer. The accused, who is 60 years of age, attempted to commit suicide following the attack on his wife. He succeeded in partially severing his windpipe with a razor, and has since been confined in Nicholls Hospital. To-day he was arrested and charged with attempted murder. He was remanded for one week. Mr. G. N. Gordon will appear for the defence.

Mr. Brewer was very shaky while in court this afternoon. His neck was swathed in bandages and he had difficulty in expressing himself. He is the father of fourteen children, two of whom are constables in the United States. One daughter is a doctor in the Old Country. At times he appears to be very irrational.

EX-ALD. JOHNSTON SERIOUSLY ILL

Was Stricken This Morning While at the Colonial Weaving Company

The many friends of ex-Alderman W. J. Johnston, 637 Aylmer street, will regret to learn that he suffered a paralytic stroke this morning and is confined to his home in a serious condition. At present he is unable to speak. He was at the Colonial Weaving Company about nine o'clock this morning when he complained of feeling unwell. He was removed to his home and medical aid summoned.

Methodist Boys of the 93rd Were Entertained

The Methodists in the 93rd Battalion, overseas contingent, were pleasantly entertained by the C.L.A. of Charlotte street church last evening. The affair took the form of a Hallowe'en party and was thoroughly enjoyed by the large number present. Games of a Hallowe'en character were played and provided much amusement. Addresses of a patriotic nature were made by the pastor, Rev. J. P. Wilson, Rev. Dr. Workman of Toronto, who was in the city for a few days, and Lieut. Stewart of the 93rd Battalion. A musical programme was also given, at the conclusion of which dainty refreshments were served.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 2.—A new Anglo-French expedition to the Balkans is announced by the Berlin Tageblatt, which publishes a telegram from Sofia, stating that British and French transport ships with troops have appeared off Kavala, Greece.

TURIN, Nov. 2.—Crown Prince Frederick William of Germany is dead, according to a Rome despatch to the Gazette Del Popole, whose correspondent asserts he was informed by a diplomat accredited to the Vatican that news had been received by the Secretary of State in a cipher message from Papal Nuncio at Vienna, Monsignor Scapinelli.

The diplomat is said to have refused further details, but to have assured the correspondent that the news was authentic.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Fears that Monastir, Serbia, has been captured by the Bulgarians are expressed in an Athens message to-day.

The Serbian main force's communications to the southward have been cut off, it was stated.

If the Bulgarians have taken it, they must either have cut their way through the Serbo-Franco-British line or made their way around its left wing.

The cutting of communications between the Serbians, who face the Austro-Germans in the north-east and the Allies in Southern Serbia, implies they have drawn a cordon in force completely across the country.

LAUZANNE, Switzerland, Nov. 2.—German submarines in the Mediterranean have been ordered to blockade Greek ports, according to advice from Munich to-day.

The assumption is that, if the Greek coast blockade has been ordered, it is on account of Greece's failure to prevent the Allies' entrance into the Balkan war field across Greek soil.

SMITH FARMERS FAVOUR ONE MILL LEVY FOR RED CROSS

A very enthusiastic meeting in the Foresters' Hall, Bridgenorth, last night, recommended to the Smith Township Council the levying of a rate of one mill on the dollar for the Red Cross Society. Reeve McKee occupied the chair. The speakers were Judge Huycke, Col. Miller and Mr. Daniel O'Connell, of Peterborough, and Rev. Mr. Galt, of Gilmour Memorial Church. A musical programme provided by Mrs. Telford, Mrs. Young, Mr. Clayton Telford, and Rev. Mr. McKee, of Bridgenorth, added to the interest of the meeting. The speeches were of a stirring character, and were heard with close attention by the large audience which crowded the hall.

TO MY BEST CHUM — MY FATHER.

Dear old Dad, when Kitchener called,
On me to come up with the Boys;
I thought of you and my dear old home,
And the scenes of my childhood joys.

It's up to me to out and help,
The other brave chaps at the front;
Never let it be said I was one that jibbed,
While others have bore the brunt.

And I hope that won't be long,
We'll get the Huns well on the run,
To the tune of our marching song.

FINDS NO TRACE OF MAN ACCUSED OF KILLING WIFE

BATH AUTHORITIES BELIEVE SYLVESTER FENTON COMMITTED SUICIDE AFTER FLEEING FROM SCENE OF CRIME

BATH, November 3. Mrs. Emma Fenton was slain by her husband, Sylvester Fenton, at the home of J. B. Chase, in Vermont street here, according to the authorities. Sheriff's officers have not yet succeeded in capturing Fenton. Mrs. Fenton's head was crushed with a hammer and her throat was cut.

Grace Towner, a granddaughter of Fenton, and the murdered woman, was in the house at the time and witnessed the killing. Running from the house for aid, she was stopped by Fenton, who told her not to call the authorities.

"Don't call the officers," he said. "I will end it all as far as I am concerned and it will be easier and cheaper for all."

He walked out into Vermont street, and disappeared along that thoroughfare in the direction of the outskirts of the city. Because of his statement to the Towner girl the authorities have inclined to the belief the fugitive took his own life. A posse of deputies has sought diligently for him in the woods near the village but so far has failed to find any trace of him.

Fenton was 63 years old. His wife was several years his junior. Fenton owned two large farms near Hornell, but had not worked them in several years. His wife came to this village several weeks ago to spend the winter at the Chase home.

25 CENTS DESTROYS YOUR DANDRUFF AND STOPS FALLNG HAIR

Dim, brittle, colorless and straggly hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp, of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance, an incomparable gloss and softness; but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a new growth of fine, downy hair coming all over the scalp.

RUSSIAN TROOPS HAVE ADVANCED TOWARD DVINSK

The Bulgarian Artillery Is Engaging the Outer Fortifications of Nish

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The Bulgarian main army, advancing by the Nisava Valley on Nish, has passed Bela Palanka, eighteen miles from the Serbian war capital, and Monday night its heavy artillery was reported engaged with the city's outer defences. At the same time the right wing of this army, which is operating from Kniazevac, has reached the headwaters of the Timok, where it is less than twelve miles from Nish.

The outer Nish forts are located at points varying from five to nine miles from the city. The principal redoubt is midway between Sicevo and Ostrovica and is designed to block the advance of an enemy up the Nisava River roadway. The city of Nish lies on the south side of a valley, surrounded on all sides by mountain ranges. This valley is about twelve miles in length by five miles in width. The river Nisava flows through the valley from the west to east, and as the stream emerges from the valley on the east side it follows a winding, tortuous ravine for fully twenty miles. The Orient Railway from Budapest and Belgrade, passing through Nish, crosses the Nisava valley and follows the stream as far east and south as Caribrod.

The defence of Nish depends on ability to hold the ravine coming up into the valley from the east and the railway approach line through the hills to the north and west. Opposite Nish the valley stretches away to the north for a distance of five miles. At this distance the foothills are met. The summit range of the mountains is four miles beyond the foothill base. This summit range has an average height of three thousand feet along the ridge.

Within one mile of the city on the south side is 338 Metre Hill, and at a distance of one and a half miles to the southeast is 261 Metre Hill. On the northwest side of the city, at a distance of one and a half miles, is 403 Metre Hill. The city is at the mercy of any heavy artillery which may succeed in reaching these heights. Nish has always been a strongly garrisoned place and the outskirts of the city are marked with extensive barracks and artillery and munitions supply stations. The redoubts which the Bulgarians are now attacking are designed to keep the initial attack on Nish at distances which will preclude enemy field gunfire from reaching the city.

To complete the day's narrative of misfortunes for Serbia the Austro-German forces moving up the Morava occupied Kraguyevatz, where the national arsenal is situated, and have stormed the heights to the south of the fortress.

The military experts in the London morning newspapers say the fall of Kraguyevatz was not entirely unexpected by the Serbian General Staff and that suitable measures presumably were taken to substitute another locality for the manufacture of munitions of war. They say also that the indications are that a channel of supply to the retreating Serbian troops has been opened through Montenegro.

The Daily Telegraph's military correspondent asserts there is little to fear from the menace to the rear of the Serbians, as the mountainous nature of the country offers opportunities for elusive tactics and skilful manœuvres, in which the Serbians are well versed, while the consumption of ammunition in the mountain warfare is much less than in fighting on the plains. Thus, he says, the Serbians will be enabled to conserve their supplies of both men and bullets, and that, moreover, the campaign from now on will offer to the German massed artillery formations and heavy guns new opportunities to make themselves felt.

Some sharp fighting has occurred on the southern front, where the Bulgarians made an attack on the Anglo-French front. The Bulgars were repulsed with heavy losses. The Allies here occupy the line Krivolak Demir Kapu Doiran, which follows the Cardar Valley from the northwest to the southeast and forces the Bulgarian frontier. The extreme left, to which the Serbs are linked, opposes Istib and Veles and bends slightly further to the west to prevent the turning of the whole position.

The Serbians are fighting fiercely to save their country and have inflicted such losses on Field Marshal von Mackensen's force that he has been compelled to send for reinforcements and leave the more serious work of invading the eastern and southern part of the country to the Bulgarians, who have had more experience in mountain warfare such as the Serbians are waging.

Beyond the forces landed at Salonica, which German estimates place at 70,000 men, there is no news of further assistance being sent by the Allies to Serbia.

Russian transports have been reported off Verna, but the report lacks confirmation. There is, however, evidence in despatches from Bucharest that the people of Roumania at least desire intervention and that pressure is being brought on the King and Cabinet to influence them to join the Allies and permit territory to attack Bulgaria from the east.

The Germans, having failed in two months of almost incessant attacks to reach Riga and Dvinsk by various routes, are now trying along the railway which skirts the shores of the Gulf of Riga from Takum, and have, according to their reports, reached a point west of Schlok. This is a very slight advance, and much low ground over which it is difficult to move, lies between them and their objective.

In the Dvinsk sector, both to the west and southwest of that city, the Russians have begun an offensive, apparently in anticipation of renewed attacks by the Germans, and they are also on the move in the lake district east of the Dvinsk-Vilna Railway and in Volhynia and Galicia. The result of these various battles has not been disclosed, if, indeed, they are ended. Those at the southern end of the line are doubtless designed to prevent the Germans and Austrians from sending reinforcements to Serbia.

are so often subject to headache, are languid, pale and nervous—because their blood is thin or insufficient. They are not really sick and hesitate to complain, but they lack that ambition and vivacity which is their birthright. J. L. PRIMEAU GETS CARNEGIE MEDAL

LINDSAY, Nov. 3. Principal Ecrs, of the Separate school, has received a communication from Mr. F. W. Wilmot, of Pittsburg, Pa., Secretary and Manager of the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission, conveying the intelligence that the organization had awarded Mr. J. L. Primeau of Lindsay, but now of Toronto, a bronze medal and $500 for conspicuous bravery in saving, at the risk of his own life, two little children from drowning in the Scugog river on Christmas day.

On the morning in question it appears that two young sons of Mr. and Mrs. W. Ware, who resided on Russell street, wandered down to the river, where the footbridge crosses at the foot of Ridout street. One of the youngsters had the sleighs and the other wore his skates. Out on the river they stepped, which was covered by only a thin coating of ice, and instantly they broke through. The C.P.R. mixed from Toronto was coming along the river front and one of the crew noticed the youths in the river. He thought they were standing on the bottom and paid very little attention to them. Mr. J. L. Primeau, who was on the train in company with his brother, Aloysius, was quick to observe that the two boys were drowning, and were making a frantic struggle with death. He immediately leaped from the train and ran down to the river bank. Throwing off his coat and discarding his boots he bravely jumped into the icy water and after a heroic struggle succeeded in rescuing the two boys.

SOME STORIES OF FISH.

Pet Goldfish, Who, Missing Its Owner, Died.

There are fishermen and fisher men. There are knights of the rod and line, and lovers of the finny tribe, whose stories of the fish they have caught and seen arouse the derision of the sceptics. There are others, alas! too few, who at times confound those deriding sceptics by providing proof of their seemingly incredulous statements.

We welcome, therefore, the story of the man who had a goldfish to whom he attributed, if not human intelligence, at any rate human emotions. He claimed that this goldfish came to the surface of the aquarium every morning to have its back scratched, and after the comforting caress the little creature would sink to the bottom with a contented smile.

Unfortunately the owner of this wonderful goldfish was called away from home for a couple of weeks. During his absence, it languished for its daily scratch, grew morose, refused all nourishment, and died. Of course some people to whom he told the story made some subtle remarks about a relative of Ananias, but the sorrowing owner of the pet goldfish, it is related, promptly produced the dead fish and showed the marks left by the scratching.

There may be those who doubt the truth of this story, but they would have had work to convince the worthy people of the little village of Worcestershire, who still talk of a wonderful trout which was so tame that it would eat out of the people's hands, and that fish have no human intelligence. Indeed, there was a stone set up, which may still be in existence setting forth the wonderful qualities of this tame trout.

According to the experts who have studied the manners of the finny tribe, fish have many of the emotions of the human race. Among their means of expression, it is pointed out, is the habit they have of erecting their scales or fins under the influence of anger or of terror, much in the same way that feathers and hairs are erected in birds and mammals.

Peoples of Peru.

Peru has within her borders a bewildering variety of races. There are the white people of Spanish descent, the mestizos (half Spanish, half native) and the Indians. The Indians themselves are of two races — those of the mountains and those of the forests. The highlanders are the descendants of the ancient people of the Incas. Both highlanders and highlanders are treated as beasts of burden by the other classes. So accustomed are they to being cheated that when an English traveler recently exploring the Andes paid his porters without a grumble or a deduction he overheard them excitedly commenting upon the fact that the "Inglez" had paid up in full.

Bathing In Lapland.

The Lapp equivalent to a Turkish bath is a novel and rather pleasant experience. You get into a low, rudely erected tent, open at the top. Inside the tent are half a dozen big stones raised about two feet from the ground under which a fire is lighted. When the stones have become sufficiently heated cold water is poured over them, just before you enter the tent, and the tent is thus filled with an intensely hot vapor. You stay in the tent about five minutes, during which time you are whipped with light twigs by a couple of Lapps; then you come out and roll in the snow, after which you dress as quickly as possible.

Mme. Adam and the Crinoline.

Mme. Adam has been confiding to an interviewer that she owed her introduction to journalism to the fact that she did not wear a crinoline at the time when fashion decreed the garment. Alphonse Karr, who objected to the crinolines, had been denouncing them in his journal, but had concluded his denunciation with the sentence, "Still, there is not a pretty woman in France who does not wear one." Whereupon Mme. Adam, who was then Mlle Lambert, took up her pen and wrote: "Mr. Editor—One may be pretty—some people even say that I am beautiful—and yet one may abstain from crinolines." And she went on to develop the thesis. She developed it so wittily that Alphonse Karr printed it in Le Siecle and that was her first contribution to the periodical press of which she has since been one of the pillars.—Westminster Gazette.

WIRELESS LIGHTING.

It Will Be a Scientific Development Said Nikola Tesla.

It is now ten years since that brilliant electric investigator, Nikola Tesla, wrote: "When the great truth accidentally revealed and experimentally confirmed, is fully recognized that this planet, with its appurtenant immensity, is to electric currents virtually no more than a small metal ball, and that by virtue of this fact many possibilities, each baffling imagination and of incalculable consequence, are rendered absolutely sure of accomplishment; when the first plant is inaugurated and it is shown that a telegraphic message, almost as secret and non-interferable as thought, can be transmitted to any terrestrial distance, the sound of the human voice, with all its intonations and inflections faithfully reproduced at any other point of the globe, the energy of a waterfall made available for supplying light, heat or motive power, anywhere—on sea or land, or high in air—humanity will be like an ant-heap stirred up with a stick. See the excitement coming."

A few days ago he declared to a correspondent: "We surely are on the eve of the transmission of the voice across the world without wires—not merely signals, but the spoken word. Not only that but the transmission of power; and not only the transmission of power—all these things are wrapped up in the wireless transmission of 'energy'—but the wireless transmission of light to isolated places."

That will mean electric light in every house ultimately, in countries like ours where water power for the generating of power is common.

Tesla remarked further: "Once Marconi told the Royal Society we wouldn't have wireless telephony for two hundred years. When a man begins to see possibilities he begins to be helpful. We are about to see tremendous developments. When proper plants are up the voice will fly around the world—and that time is not distant. From my station at Wardenclife, Long Island, I'm hoping to announce that I'm the first to send the voice around the world." Those who writhe under the yoke of telephonic monopoly will add their prayers for the hastening of the time!

Correcting an Oversight.

There was a terrible noise coming from the direction of the dining room, and the fond mother, alarmed, rushed in. On the floor her own aged son, who was going through all sorts of contortions—somersaults, both backward and forward.

"Willie, Willie!" she cried. "What are you doing? You'll"—

"Oh, it's all right, mother!" he gasped. "You see, I forgot to shake my medicine before taking it—like you always told me to do. So I thought I'd shake myself up as the medicine was inside me!"—London Mail.

The Unchanging Past.

This is the reason why the past has such magical power. The beauty of its motionless and silent pictures is like the enchanted purity of late autumn, when the leaves, though one breath would make them fall, still glow against the sky in golden glory. The past does not change nor strive. Like Duncan, after life's fitful fever, it sleeps well. What was eager and grasping, what was petty and transitory has faded away. The things that were beautiful and eternal shine out of it like stars in the night. Its beauty to a soul not worthy of it is unendurable, but to a soul which has conquered fate the past is the key of religion.—Bertrand Russell.

A Gentle Husband.

Woman (to her husband, busily engaged writing)—My dear, correctly speaking, what is a dentist?

Husband (crossly)—Derived from dent, French for teeth, a man who pulls teeth. (Husband settles down to writing again.)

Wife — My dear, you said this morning that linguist was derived from the Latin lingua, a tongue.

Husband (crossly)—Yes.

Wife—Well, dear, is a linguist a man who pulls out tongues?

Husband—No, madam, but I wish he did. —London Answers.

Uses of Tungsten.

Tungsten is used principally as an alloy of high-speed steel—that is, steel used in making tools used in metal turning lathes running at high speed—to which it imparts the property of holding temper at higher temperature than carbon steels will. The now well-known ductile tungsten is used for incandescent lamps, which are fast displacing carbon lamps. Recently greatly improved lamps, in which the wire is wound in helices and in which the globes are filled with nitrogen, have produced a close approach to white light. These lamps are furnished in candle power up to 2,000. Ductile tungsten is practically insoluble in all the common acids; its melting point is higher than that of any other metal, its tensile strength exceeds that of iron and nickel, it is paramagnetic, it can be drawn to smaller sizes than any other metal (0.0002 inch in diameter), and its specific gravity is 70 per cent. higher than that of lead.

Papuans Die Young.

The average duration of life is shorter in Papua or New Guinea than in any other country, possibly owing to the peculiar diet affected by the natives, who devour with gusto the larva of beetles, dug out of decayed tree trunks and habitually drink sea water when near the coast. "The people die off about 40," we are told in A. E. Pratt's "Two Years Among the New Guinea Cannibals." "We saw one very old man, who may have been about 60 years of age—the only example of longevity that we came across. He was bent almost double, and had a long white beard. His fellow tribesmen regarded him as a great curiosity and brought him to see us. Despite the decrepitude of his body, however, there was no trace of senility, his senses were unimpaired, and the poor old creature showed great gratitude for a gift of tobacco."

Solenodons.

Only two species of that singular insectivorous mammal, the solenodon, are known, one inhabiting Haiti and the other Cuba. They differ chiefly in the color and quality of their fur. Solenodons are quaint-looking animals, rather larger than rats, with long flexible snouts and naked tails. They are nocturnal and obtain their food by digging in the soft ground for insects, etc., with their snouts. Their brain capacity is small, and they are said to have the curious habit when hunted by dogs of hiding their heads in the nearest holes and leaving their bodies exposed.

Dano-Swedish Tunnel.

Denmark and Sweden are busy with plans for a channel tunnel between the two countries. The greatest depth at which the tunnel will run will be about 100 feet, and it is estimated that the undertaking can be completed in five years at a cost of about $25,000,000. The tunnel will be worked by electricity, and, curiously enough, will have to be driven through the same kind of stratum, grey chalk, as would the tunnel between England and France.

Supply and Demand.

Mr. Francis was about to start away to attend the funeral of his rich old uncle.

"Put a couple of large handkerchiefs into my grip, dear," he said to his wife. "The old gentleman promised to leave me $20,000 and I want to shed some appropriate tears."

"But suppose when the will is read," said the wife, "you find he hasn't left you anything."

"In that case," replied he, "you had better put in three."

"That's all right, but you let him know that when I stamp my feet upstairs he's to get busy and be a moving picture."

Simple.

Author—Oh, that is very simple. In the first act, you see, the hero gets into a lawsuit.

The Careful Scots.

A Scot and his wife came to London, and the worthy pair were in a hundred fears concernin' the diabolical ingenuity of London thieves.

As they took their first walk down the Strand the husband whispered of a sudden hoarsely in her ear, "Janet, wummun, hast thou got thy teeth feezed feermly in thy gums?"

Made Him a Songster.

Mr. Stubb (in astonishment)—Gracious, Maria! That tramp has been singing in the back yard for the last hour.

Mrs. Stubb—Yes, John, it is all my fault.

Mr. Stubb—Your fault?

Mrs. Stubb—Indeed, it is. I thought I was giving him a dish of boiled oatmeal, and instead of that I boiled up the bird seed by mistake.

A DANGEROUS JOB.

Doing "Stunts" For the "Movies" Requires Plenty of Courage.

Very few of the hundreds of thousands of people who attend the picture palace realise the great danger involved in acting for the films they witness in comfort.

The leader of the thrill-producers among the motion picture people on this continent is without doubt Rodman Law, the young man who jumps off a high bridge, scales the outside wall of a sky-scraper with his fingers and toes, and allows himself to be used as ballast for a sky-rocket.

Prominent, too, in motion picture acting is Miss Mary Fuller, who has a conspicuous record for daring "stunts"; some of her narrow escapes from death or serious injury are anything but pleasant. In fact, her adventures are decidedly thrilling. "Never, so long as I live," she relates, "will I forget the day I slid down a rope of bedclothes from a window seven stories above the ground.

"I had done many perilous things, but this was the most terrifying, because there was no intense dramatic action to take my mind off the danger. The directors simply asked me in a matter-of-fact way if I would slide down a rope from that height. I gasped for a moment, and then, fearing the thought of being a coward more than the perils of the feat, I closed my eyes and answered that I would.

As we started out to do the scene I began furtively to watch the buildings. That tall one, it must be eight or nine storeys high—I counted—it was only six! Heavens, I was to slide from a point higher than that building, dangling in space! I shuddered.

"Finally we came to the apartment house which had been chosen and were ushered up to a room on the seventh floor I was recognized when I stepped from the automobile, and the appearance of the long rope of bedclothes started the rumor that I was to do something extraordinary. By the time we had tested the rope and everything was ready, there was a crowd of curious people gaping upward at my window.

"The view from that window will live forever in my mind's eye — the rope was stretching downward to eternity — no — not eternity, but, worse still, a pavement of unyielding stone; the iron picket fence that surrounded the little areaway—I could feel the sharp points penetrating my poor body—the upturned faces, many of them already becoming anxious as the realization of what I was to do dawned upon them.

"I suddenly realized that if I remained in that window for another instant I would be panic-stricken and powerless to make the descent. I waved my hand to the director, shut my eyes, and swung out on the sill. I counted the windows as I passed them, not darin to look down. I had gone half way when the rope gave a little and my heart stopped as a vision of that picket fence flashed before me. But the rope held—would it hold until I reached the bottom?

"When I was about twenty feet from the ground the crowd began to cheer, but above the cheer I heard the noise of a tearing blanket.

"I shut my eyes again, but my hands seemed to rebel at further torture, and then I dropped.

"But it was only ten feet, and I was unhurt. Yes unhurt, if bleeding hands and a body that ached be called unhurt; but I had done it and I was happy."

Honest.

A story is told on a young man who was married recently to the daughter of a wealthy merchant. The bridegroom did not have a cent, but he made up for lack of wealth in honesty. He was so very honest that he would not even prevaricate in the marriage ceremony.

He was repeating what the minister read, "With all my worldly goods I thee endow."

"With all thy worldly goods I me endow," repeated the young man. Maybe it was a slip of the tongue, still it would be hard for honesty to go much further.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

RED HEADED MEN.

Arizona's Editor Wants to Know All About Them.

SENDS OUT A CIRCULAR

[Copyright, 1907.]

Three weeks ago we sent out a circular from the Kicker office containing the following queries, and we hereby publish a number of the answers received:

Dear Sir:—Do you think that red headed men have been instrumental in the upbuilding of Arizona?

Do you believe that more red headed men should be encouraged to settle in this territory?

Is there among your acquaintances a red headed man who has bumped himself more vigorously than any other sort?

If you believe that with two more red headed men added to her population Arizona would soon take her place among the sisterhood of states, how shall we get them here?

I know three red headed men who have started three graveyards in this territory and are still on the hustle. It is the red heads who keep things moving. We can't have too many of them.—Judge O. M. Clark.

Your queries at hand, and in answer I would ask what about red headed women? I don't believe we have got a score of them in the territory. While a red headed man is shooting some poor cuss in the leg a red headed woman can raise a fuss extending over half the territory. It has long been my opinion that we should bring on at least 500 from Connecticut, where they are thicker than grasshoppers. If they can't boost old Arizona into line, we might as well quit trying.—Hon. Caleb Johnson.

Do I think red headed men have been instrumental in the upbuilding of Arizona? You bet your bottom dollar! If it wasn't for the red heads among us we'd sleep till noon and waste our Sundays shooting at coyotes instead of playing poker. Get a thousand more of 'em here as soon as possible, and let there be a law passed making it a prison offense for any one of them to use hair dye after his arrival.—Hon. James Carson.

As I am in jail, charged with horse stealing, my opinion may not count, but I will send it in just the same. Keep the red headed men out of the territory. They kill off emigrants as fast as they are brought in. There isn't a town in the territory with three red headed men in it but what has passed resolutions to the effect that the United States ought to annex Canada, Mexico or some other blamed old thing. They always want to be annexing something, and when there is nothing to annex they find fault with a tenderfoot's coattails as an excuse for shooting him. In fact, it was a red headed son of a gun that worked me in on this horse deal, and the red headed prosecuting attorney has just promised that I shall get at least ten years for it.—Hon. Quincy Davis, DD., L. D.

The Tribune has no use for red headed men. We have had three on the staff, and all have been failures. We believe that if this territory is to ever become a state it will be after we have encouraged four or five thousand baldheads to settle among us. The man who has no hair to attend to is the chap who hustles.—Grass Valley Tribune.

The Eagle For Red Heads.

The Eagle goes in for red heads, be they men or women. We went all the way to Vermont to marry a red headed girl, and as a wife she takes the cake. We leave the bouncing all to her, and in the last six weeks she has thrown five different men out of the office and broken the legs of three of them. When she goes after a delinquent subscriber she either brings the money or his scalp back. If we had ten red headed men in this town there'd be a funeral every day and real estate would be at least 25 per cent higher. Send to Massachusetts and promise the crowd 10 acres of land apiece.—Mountain Eagle

In answer to Jim Hellso's circular we want to tell him that there is a red headed man in this town who is doing more humping than any twenty buildheads. Only the other day in the course of two hours he shot a mule, a hog and all the insulators off the top of the telephone poles for a distance of three miles. The Recorder wouldn't have ten lines of local news per week if it wasn't for our red headed man. Yes, bring on more. There is said to be 250 of them in one community in Rhode Island, and all are named Green. Arizona is the climate in which they can ripen. She can promise them a mountain apiece. Lord, but what an opening there is for us!—Lone Jack Recorder.

Although we had a narrow escape ourself from training with the red heads and therefore have a fellow feeling for them, it is not on that account that we would go in for bringing 5,000 into the territory at once. A red headed man is on the hump and hustle. He is never quiet. He is always planning. Something has got to happen every day in the week. If we had 7,000 or 8,000 with us, Arizona would be one of the United States within a year or on her way to that country of flame and brimstone. Promise 'em anything on earth to get 'em here and then lasso every man and tie him up to something that will hold him.—Blue Hill Howler.

Arizona would have still been an Indian hunting ground but for red headed men. What we want is 10,000 more of them. The editor of this paper is personally acquainted with no less than seven red headed men, and, while they haven't made any of the rivers run upstream, they have kept the American eagle shrieking for twenty-four hours a day. What's the matter with promising every one who will settle here a bucking broncho?—Wolf Creek Gazette.

Great Men's Opinion.

Jim Hellso wants to know what we think of red headed men. What did Caesar think of them? What did Alexander the Great say of them? What did Napoleon do with an army of them? We have long known that the crying need of this territory was more red headed men, thousands more, but we are a humble and modest weekly editor and have kept still about it. When we went back home to Indiana last summer, we saw hundreds of the right sort and we believe they could be secured with very little trouble. In fact, every Indiana farmer with a red headed son or daughter feels aggrieved and wants to get them off his hands. Come on, ye red heads, come to the only country on earth where the color is appreciated.—Comic John Sinclair.

Jim, He so ought to be kicked for leaving the red headed women out of his circular. Catherine of Russia, Joan of Arc, Queen Elizabeth, the mother of Washington—why, we could string the list out a rod long. It was a red headed girl who fired the first shot on the field of Lexington. It was a red headed dame who fired the last shot at Bunker Hill. Who is the red headed woman now the real power behind the throne? How many poets, statesmen and warriors owe their success to red headed wives? Get red headed men here—get them in droves—but don't skip the red headed females. Talk to them softly and bring them along. If Arizona can be saved, they will do it.—Big Cave Reporter.

As to that circular, Mr. Hellso, we want to say, Hurrah for the red heads! Get 'em here by the million. Get the long haired ones in particular. Get two red headed women for every one red headed man. Get droves of red headed young uns and let them grow up among us. Let every official of the present government who is not a red headed man resign and give place to a hustler. Put them in official positions in every town in the territory and give 'em room to get hold with both feet. Arizona is on the wabble. We have tried all else, and now let us turn to the red heads. Let the rich brick red color flaunt itself from every hilltop and be found in every valley and let it be a crime equal to that of murder for a barber to clip off any of the capillary substance or for a druggist to be found with a bottle of hair dye on his shelves.—Red Rock Sun.

The editor of the Kicker thanks the above persons and papers for their expressions and stands ready to work with any commission appointed to bring about the red headed influx. He also returns thanks that none of them have mentioned the fact that his own hair started out to be red, but faded away to a French pea color under the brain strain of making the Kicker the leading weekly of the civilized world.

Afflicted with Lame Back
THREE YEARS AGO
COULD NOT SWEEP THE FLOOR.

Women are coming to understand that weak, lame and aching backs from which they suffer so much excruciating pain and agony are due to wrong action of the kidneys.

The kidneys are overtaxed—given more work than they can do, and when the back aches and pains it is hard for a woman to look after her household duties, for no woman can be strong and well when the kidneys are out of order.

On the first sign of any weakness in the back Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken. They go right to the seat of the trouble, cure the weak, aching back, and prevent any serious kidney trouble liable to follow.

Mrs. I. Goushaw, 683 Manning Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I take great pleasure in writing you, stating the benefit I have received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About three years ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad I could not even sweep the floor. I was advised to use Doan's Kidney Pills, and before I had used one box there was a great improvement, and my back was completely cured. I highly recommend 'Doan's' for lame back."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

VENIZELOS: WORLD'S GREATEST STATESMAN

Uncrowned King of the Greeks is Best Hope of Allies—His Stubborn Courage and Foresight

According to A. G. Gardener, editor of the London (Eng.) Daily News, M. Venizelos is the greatest statesman of Europe. According to the extended story of a correspondent: There is just one big man in Greece. That is Venizelos. He is not only the only big man in Greece—he is also one of the world's great statesmen. He is surrounded by such difficulties, however, that it is doubtful as to how far he can carry his country with him. The King is a pro-German. His wife is the sister of the Kaiser. The King hates Venizelos as his father hated him before him. He hates him as all insignificant Kings hate great ministers, who treat their dignity as secondary to public rights and liberties.

M. Venizelos is a native of Crete. His grandfather had fled from Athens to escape the tyranny of the Turks. In the struggle for Cretan self-government the young Venizelos became President of the newly-created National Assembly. When Prince George of Greece, brother of the present King of Greece, became High Commissioner of Crete, he at once attempted to set up an almost despotic Government. As Venizelos had already experienced enough tyranny under the Turkish despotic government, he opposed this new attempt at despotism. He resigned his office and put himself at the head of the insurrectionists. The result was that Prince George disappeared and Venizelos returned to power under Zaimis, the new Commissioner, who has also been Premier since the war.

In 1909, when the throne of King George, the father of the present King, was tottering, there was need for a great man to save the situation. A popular appeal went out to Venizelos, in Crete. The demand for him was so strong and the need for his presence so great that even the King had to ask him to come to the assistance of his country—though it must have been a bitter pill for King George to swallow, when he was still burning with indignation over the humiliation that this upstart had brought upon his son in Crete. Venizelos came. He saved the situation. He re-created Greece. He formed the Balkan League that overthrew the Turks—and, but for the unscrupulous trickery and greed of King Ferdinand of Bulgaria, there would have been no second Balkan war; the Balkan League would have remained intact, Turkey would not be involved in this titanic contest, and the other Balkan nations would have been solid and probably active friends of the Quadruple Entente from the start.

The personality of this man is so great, his popularity is so great, his ability is so great, that the future course of Greece depends more on him than it depends upon the King and any administration. It is fortunate that this man is big, honest, far-seeing, and courageous.

Not Good at Riddles.

A lawyer was questioning a new client, a widow, the other day about her history. "My history," she replied, "is simplicity itself. My first was the happiness of my life, my second was goodness itself, my third"—

AN ONTARIO WITNESS.

Suffered from Rheumatism.

Waterloo, Ont. "We use Dr. Pierce's medicines in our home and have always found them to be the very best. Some time ago my husband was taken sick with muscular rheumatism. He was very bad for four years, could not do a stroke of work. He took several different kinds of medicine and had several good doctors in that time, but did not get one bit of relief. He began taking "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Pleasant Pellets" and in less than a year he was a well man and he goes to work every day. We all feel very kindly toward Dr. Pierce for his wonderful cure when everything else failed."—Mrs. Jacob Wolfe, 8 Queen St.

PURE BLOOD

The Greatest Blessing Mankind Can Have.

Many Canadian people need this powerful vegetable remedy that puts the stomach, liver and bowels in fine condition; that clears the skin of pimples, rash, blemishes, and eczema; that dissolves boils and carbuncles; that makes nerves stronger and steadier, and gives to pale, weak, run-down people the fullest measure of health and happiness.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, free from alcohol or narcotics, does just what is stated above, simply because it banishes from the blood all poison and impure matter. It dissolves the impure deposits and carries them out, as it does all impurities, through the Liver, Bowels, Kidneys and Skin.

If you have a bad cough, bronchial, nasal or other catarrh, unsteady nerves or unsightly skin, get "Golden Medical Discovery" to-day and start at once to replace your impure blood with the kind that puts energy and ambition into you and brings back vigorous action.

All medicine dealers can supply you in either liquid or tablet form or send 50 cents for trial box of tablets to Dr Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

War upon Pain!

Pain is a visitor to every home and usually it comes quite unexpectedly. But you are prepared for every emergency if you keep a small bottle of Sloan's Liniment handy. It is the greatest pain killer ever discovered.

Two Irishmen were engaged in a dispute in a cemetery one day.

"Well," said one, "I don't like cemetery at all—at all."

"Well," said the other, "I think it is a fine cemetery."

"No," said number one, "I don't like it at all, at all, and I'd never be buried in it as long as I live."

"Phwhat an unreasonable orld fool we are, to be shure," said number one, apparently losing his temper. "Why, man alive, it is a fine cemetery, and if me both was shocted, shure I'd be buried in it."

Doctor Said Sciatica--- Rheumatism--Lumbago

But He Could Not Help Me, and Endorsed the Use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Wm. Parker, 105 Cayuga street, Brantford, Ont., tells in the following letter of his remarkable experience with Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills: "My doctor treated me for some time for Sciatica, Rheumatism, Lumbago, but to no purpose, for I had to lay off work. The visiting officer of Sick Benefit called to see me and advised the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, stating that he had been cured of the same trouble by their use. I asked the druggist about them and he recommended them highly. Not being satisfied with this, I went back to my doctor, and when he said they were good I began their use. The promptness with which they enlivened the action of the kidneys and bowels was wonderful, and it was not long before I was rid of all my trouble.

"I was so bad that I could only walk by hanging on to a chair or the wall. My wife had to lace my shoes. Only those who have had this ailment can realize the way I suffered. I am writing this letter to let people who have my trouble know of these pills. You are at liberty to use this letter, and if anyone interested will call or write to me I will give every detail."

Write to Mr. Parker, enclosing stamp for reply, and he will verify this statement. He will do this out of the gratitude he feels for his cure and because he realizes how difficult it is to obtain the cure of these dreadfully painful ailments.

There are so many treatments recommended for rheumatism that you naturally doubt them all. Here is an opportunity for you to verify the cure and put this great medicine to the test. It will only cost you a quarter to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They get at the very foundation of rheumatism, and by removing the poisons from the system take away the cause of pains and aches.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

SMOKE SCREENS

A Novel Scheme Adopted During Naval Warfare

The accuracy of modern naval gunnery is so marvellous that the only hope for a ship to escape being sunk when within range of the guns is to hide itself. That is easier said than done, however, and there is only one way in which it can be done, and that is by means of a "smoke screen." It is hard for one ship to hide herself behind her own smoke, unless the wind is favorable, but for a number of ships to put up a huge fog of black smoke between them and their pursuers is comparatively easy.

The smoke is caused by oil fuel, and it can be turned off or on at will by supplying more or less air to the furnaces. It is so dense and black that it is quite impossible to see more than a few yards through it. It will be remembered that Admiral Sir David Beatty mentioned the German smoke screen in his despatch of the battle of the North Sea. To use his own words, "The enemy's destroyers emitted vast columns of smoke to screen their battle cruisers, and under cover of this the latter altered their course."

German military aviators, too, explode smoke balls in the rear of their machines, so that, when hotly pursued, they can hide their movements and escape.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itch, scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

No matter how many designs we may have among the more decorative skirts the time is sure to come when we want a plain, serviceable model for one use or another or to trim according to our own ideas. The skirt shown herewith is admirably adapted to many of these purposes.

It is made with three gores and may have either the raised or the regulation waistline. As shown it has an end one and a half inches above normal. The closing is at the side of the skirt, and there is one of the new pouch pockets at the right side. This may be omitted if desired.

The skirt is so plain and practical that many stout women will welcome it in the larger sizes to which the pattern is carried. It is suitable for linen, its imitations, silk, gingham, brilliantine, taffetas and for all lightweight woollens. The only ornamental feature is the buttoned side closing, and this gives a fancy touch if the buttons are in contrast with the goods or if something bright and of odd shape is used.

The matter of length is for individual choice. Slender women are showing practically the entire boot, but the more conservative are satisfied with a skirt that displays only the ankle.

The skirt pattern, No. 7296, is cut in sizes 22 to 36 inches waist measure. Medium size requires 3⅛ yards of 36 inch material.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age if a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Address: The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

TWO SUSPECTS ARE IN CUSTODY

BATAVIA, Nov. 2.—Two men were arrested yesterday and locked up in the Batavia police station as suspects in the Jacob Schoenberg murder case. The men are Mike Miller and his cousin, Stanislaus Gazulick, both Poles. A third man wanted is still at large.

Detective Grady, of Buffalo, who with a force of his detectives, has been working on the case, claims that the men who committed the crime are also connected with recent burglaries in this vicinity. Mr. Grady stated to-day "If I had nothing against these men I would not have arrested them," and he would offer no further information.

About a dozen New York Central detectives, headed by detective Lashanski, of Buffalo, have been sleuthing around Batavia and Le Roy ever since the shooting of Alexander J. Block, the New York Central detective, on Tuesday night. Mike Miller, one of the men under arrest, was locked up Tuesday night previous to the shooting of Mr. Block, but no charge was placed against him, but many incriminating things have been unearthed tending to connect him with the different burglaries. October 16, when Jacob Schoenberg was brutally murdered by being struck with a heavy iron bar when asleep in his home in South Liberty street.

Miller has admitted that a cap found in Schoenberg's yard the day after the murder was his, but he thought it had been stolen from him, saying that he had not seen it since last winter. Gazulick was locked up to-day but the man really wanted has not been found. He is wanted for the shooting of Detective Block, but it is thought that he is the slayer of Jacob Schoenberg, as it has been learned that following the shooting of Block this man went to a house on the south side of the city, changed his clothes, and disappeared. It was at first thought that the man went to Le Roy, but a search for him there has been fruitless.

Holy Games in Navy

The custom of giving Bible names to men-of-war at one time prevailed extensively in the British Navy. The Goliath, however, which was sunk in the Dardanelles recently, was the only battleship which had a Biblical appellation. In the seventeenth century, however, the British naval fleet included vessels named Abraham, Benjamin, Ephraim, John the Baptist, Jonathan, King David, Ruth, and Solomon. In Nelson's time there was both an Adam and Eve and an Eden, but by then the use of Biblical names for engines of destruction began to be out of favor. One warship, commissioned in the time of Henry VIII., bore the name of Christ, and among the fighting fleet of Henry V.'s time were ships named Jesus, Holy Ghost, Peter, Paul, and Paternoster.

Marconi Has Irish Wife

Mrs. Marconi, who is working with the Italian Red Cross, spent her girlhood, until the death of her father, Lord Inchiquin, at Dromoland Castle, Co. Clare, the seat of the O'Briens. Her step-brother, Lord Inchiquin, is the present holder of the title, and is a direct descendant of King Brian Boru, who ruled over Munster. The family is the only one in the kingdom that has the right to wear the scarlet royal livery. The wedding gifts that Marconi showered on his bride included, besides a rope of pearls as big as hazel nuts, brooches, necklets and bangles of precious stones.

Men of Swift Promotions

The latest promotion of Sir David Beatty makes him Britain's youngest Vice-Admiral. He reached the highest rank but two in the navy at the early age of forty-four. Nelson was forty-three when he became a Vice-Admiral. Sir David's career is without parallel in latter day naval annals. He was captain at the age of twenty-nine; he passed over the heads of 385 lieutenants when he became a commander, and over the heads of 200 commanders when he became a captain.

OUR SIR SAM

An Overseas Article on Canada's War Minister

His proper title is Major-General Sir Sam Hughes, K.C.B., but Canadians to a man speak of him as "Sam," just as Britishers used to speak of Lord Roberts as "Bobs."

Sam Hughes comes of a North of Ireland stock. He was born in Ontario. Although for a time he was lecturer in English Language, Literature, and History in the Toronto Collegiate Institute, he has always been a soldier at heart.

He has been President of the Canada Rifle Association, which includes some of the best shots in the world, and President of the Small Arms Committee. He served in the Fenian Raids of 1870, and has always been strongly in favor of the colonies offering the Empire every assistance in Imperial wars.

Indeed, his name will go down to history as a man who telegraphed to Lord Kitchener that within a fortnight he would undertake to land 10,000 Canadians at the seat of war.

He has more than fulfilled this pledge. For to-day there are many more than 10,000 Canadians either at the front or in England ready to fight when required, and thousands more in Canada ready to come over when the Mother Country calls.

During the South African War, in which he fought, Hughes was several times mentioned in despatches for his valiant services. But it was only by a near shave that he went to South Africa at all. It happened like this: When Hughes was a member of the Canadian Parliament he under took to criticize General Hutton, the Canadian commander-in-chief. As his military superior General Hutton told him to shut up. He didn't.

Consequently when the South African War broke out he couldn't get a commission from General Hutton, although Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Premier, personally applied for it. And when the boat carrying the Canadian contingent steamed out Colonel Hughes, as he was then, was a desolate, disconsolate figure in mufti, seated on a pile of baggage on the quay.

But later he went to South Africa, got his commission direct, and remained there three years.

General Hughes has been a journalist, and recently he received a big party of pressmen at his London hotel. All sorts of tricky questions were fired at him. To each he gave some pat answer.

There was, however, one exception. "When will the war be over?" asked an indiscreet scribe. "When we beat the Germans," snapped the General. "I can't be expected to answer questions of that sort!" The journalist who had asked the question discreetly retired from view.

And if from all his virtues we stand out they are that he loves a good fight and never forgets a friend.

—Pearson's Weekly.

WIVES AND MOTHERS

Have you ever stopped to realize how much the health of your family depends upon you? For instance, diet is a great factor in health, and you are responsible for it. Then again when any member of your family gets into a run-down condition, when the children are delicate, cross and ailing, when somebody takes cold and develops a cough, they look to you for help. Do you know that our local druggists, McDermid & Jury, have a non-secret constitutional remedy, known as Vinol, which they guarantee for just such conditions? Many families in this vicinity have found it so reliable they are never without it.

STOCKINGS AND WAR HAVE SAME ORIGIN

Wood Pulp Germany's Cotton Substitute is the Commencement of Many Varied Articles

The claim of the Germans to have substituted wood pulp for cotton in the manufacture of explosives calls attention to the properties of this wonderful product.

Wood pulp is just what its name implies, and is obtained by disintegrating wood either by a mechanical or chemical process. The former variety is prepared by grinding it under water. It is inferior in quality, as the fibres are short and the product readily discolors. Under the chemical process the wood is cut up and boiled under pressure with a solution of caustic soda, sodium sulphide, or, best of all, calcium bisulphite, and the resulting soft product is pulped, pressed, washed and bleached.

It was the use of this material that so reduced the cost of paper as to make the halfpenny newspaper possible. So rapidly, indeed, did paper cheapen from 1875 to 1885 that the introduction of wood pulp is said, within those years, to have trebled the circulation of England's newspapers.

It is a far cry from high explosives and newspapers to ladies' stockings and "silk" necktie, yet the latter no less than the former are nowadays commonly products of the same origin.

All sorts of hardware articles are now compounded of the pulped tissues of trees that once swayed gracefully in some northern forest—cigar and cigarette holders, fancy combs, umbrella handles, buttons, insulating materials, films, and a hundred other things.

Of course, the extensive use of wood pulp for articles of clothing is not strange. Cellulose, which is employed in enormous quantities in the fibrous state in the form of cotton, linen, jute, hemp, etc., is the chief component of all vegetable tissues, in which it exists in elongated cells or fibres. Cottonwool and filter paper are almost pure cellulose. It is only a matter of technical skill to convert to textile uses the cellulose of the spruce tree instead of using that of the cotton plant. In the manufacture of hardware purity is not so essential, high pressure and a strong adhesive being the great factors.

Nor is the course of wood pulp run when it is made into textiles or papers. The paper itself, when it has served its turn, goes back into the boiler, and once more becomes pulp. Mixed with starch or glue and pressed, it is then forced into moulds, previously oiled, and we have that useful product, papier mache.

Value is Increasing

The commercial value of this commodity has of late years been greatly enhanced by the ingenuity and skill of decorative artists, especially the French. The rich mural mouldings that give so imposing an aspect to certain public buildings are a superior kind of pulp product.

Carton pierre—an article that the French have carried to a high state of perfection—perhaps marks the acme in this line of manufacture. It consists of paper pulp, whiting and gum, pressed into plaster moulds and stove dried. Improved so as to admit of gilding easily it decorates portions of the Tuileries, the Louvre and the Palais Royal at Paris.

The demand for wood pulp articles is said to be rapidly increasing, and in some of the factories they are unable to cope with it. The passing of propulsive explosives does not exhaust the uses of the pulp even from a military point of view. In the form of a solution it is extensively used in the treatment of fabrics for aeroplanes and other war

THE CZARINA

The Czarina's popularity in Russia has been enormously increased since the war on account of the work that she has been doing for the Russian Red Cross.

It is interesting to recall that Her Majesty once had an extraordinary experience for a Royal personage while on a visit to Germany. She was out shopping one day, attended only by one lady companion, and she had hoped to remain unrecognised by the people. While she was making some purchases in a jeweller's shop, however, the news of her identity got abroad, and in a very few moments there was a large crowd outside the premises.

Exit through the front door was out of the question, so the Czarina asked the jeweller to let herself and her companion out at the back of the shop.

The jeweller replied that that was impossible, as the back yard was enclosed by a very high boarding which would effectually cut off their retreat.

"That does not matter," said the Empress. "Get us a ladder, and we will climb over it."

A ladder was brought, and the Czarina and her companion rushed up it, climbed over the boarding, jumped into a quiet street, and made their escape as quickly as they could.

Neutrals May Sell Arms

It is an established principle of international law that the trade in arms and munitions is free. The Hague Convention of 1907 recognized the right of private individuals to trade in this way. Instances of request by one belligerent to a neutral power to stop this trade are found in history, but the remonstrances have never met with favorable results.

Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses!

A Free Prescription

You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eyestrain or other eye-weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says after trying it: "I was almost blind, could not see to read at all. Now I can read anything without glasses, and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully, now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy without glasses but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time, and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto. Fill a two ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one Bon-Opto tablet and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are both ering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time. The Va-nas Drug Co., of Toronto, will on the above prescription, as their druggist cannot.

You Can't Brush or Wash Out Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

TWO WOMEN ARE ACCUSED

Detectives Claim They Systematically Robbed Department Store.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 2.—Goods valued at over $1,500, stolen from the Duffy-Powers department store by a trusted woman clerk and carried away by another woman who was a confederate, have been recovered by Detectives Andrews and Semer, who were assigned by Captain of Detectives Whaley to investigate the case.

The two women were arraigned in Police Court. The specific charge is the theft of $28 worth of goods on October 26. Mrs. Flora Mahatcke, 35 years old, of 411 Main Street East, who took the goods from the counters and stock room of the jewellery department, where she was employed, was sentenced to serve 60 days in the penitentiary. Mrs. Grace Brough, 36 years old, of 76 North Union Street, who carried the goods away, was paroled for a year in care of Miss Ottnatt. She is a married woman, having an invalid husband and two children, which had weight in obtaining leniency for her.

Mrs. Mahatcke had access to the stock room, which enabled her to deliver goods to her confederate and still escape detection until detectives were assigned to the case two months ago, after the store officials had made complaint to Chief of Police Quigley. Andrews and Semer worked for some time on the case before their suspicions were aroused by the fact that the Brough woman came into the store at about noon on numerous occasions and after visiting various departments, without making any purchases, finally gravitated toward the jewellery department. She was finally caught with a parcel containing some silver mesh bags and spoons which Mrs. Mahatcke had been seen to deliver to her. The women's homes were then searched. Watches, stick pins, rings and other jewellery as well as many toilet sets and other valuable articles were found in great quantity. The goods recovered filled several large baskets. Many of them had not been unwrapped, being in the original packages in which they had been shipped from the manufacturers. The inventory of the goods recovered, which are in charge of Property Clerk Foley at Police Headquarters, pending their return to the store, has not yet been completed.

A strange feature of the case is that the women appear to have disposed of none, or any, of the articles taken. They may have been planning to open a jewellery store of their own. They did not themselves realize that they had taken up the goods when they were brought to Police Headquarters, when they made a full confession to Captain of Detectives Whaley of their operations, which were spread over a period of months.

FRENCH ADVANCING IN SOUTHERN BULGARIA

ALLIED SUBS ACTIVE ON TWO SEAS

French Troops Make Progress in the Vicinity of Strumnitza

Are Making Their Way Along the Southern Mountain Slopes of Bulgaria in an Effort to Cripple the Bulgarian Campaign Against the Serbs---Only Mine Activity Reported at the Dardanelles Where the Enemy has Abandoned All Attacks.

GERMAN STEAMER SUNK IN THE BALTIC

PARIS, Nov. 3.—(French Official Communique).—"On the Franco-German front the situation remains unchanged. In the region of Stremnitza (in South-Western Bulgaria, where the French are trying to cripple the Bulgars' campaign against the Serbs by invading the former's territory) we are progressing along the southern mountain slopes. In the vicinity of Krivolak (a Southern Serbia town) we repulsed two Bulgarian battalions on October 30. There was only mine activity at the Dardanelles from October 20 to November 1, the enemy having abandoned all attacks on us."

"Both French and British submarines are now operating in the Sea of Marmora, preventing supplies from reaching the enemy's troops."

PARIS, Nov. 3.—Arrangements have been made to keep Serbia supplied with munitions through Montenegro. While Serbian losses are said to have been moderate in view of desperate fighting, it has been necessary to destroy large quantities of war material to prevent it from falling into the hands of the invaders.

The Bulgarians have not repeated their attacks upon Krivolak, which is held by the French. The evacuation of Monastir by the Serbians is denied. A French man-of-war yesterday bombarded a Bulgarian supply train between Xanthi and Dedeaghatch.

PARIS, Nov. 3.—The loss of the French submarine Turquoise in the Sea of Marmora was admitted by the Admiralty to-day. The vessel's two officers and 24 seamen are missing, and believed they have been captured as the Turks claim.

ATHENS, Nov. 3.—The Serbians and Bulgarians are fighting desperately in the region east of Prilep, 25 miles north-of Monastir. The Bulgarians were reported over-running the country south-west of Veles, but the Serbians still held the hills surrounding Prilep.

Unable otherwise to communicate with the Serbians north of Nish, the Allied ships are unloading munitions for them on the Montenegrin Adriatic coast.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The Germans gained little to-day in their drive on Riga from the West, Petrograd despatches stated.

Before Dvinsk, however, it was said that the Russians were on the defensive. In Volhynia, at the southern end of the Russo-German line, it was reported the Germans had suffered huge losses in men. The Czar had also gained various Austrian positions in Galicia.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 3. The German steamship Gedania was sunk by a British submarine in the Baltic to-day.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 3.—Before leaving Kragujevatz, the Serbians blew up all buildings of military importance. The Serbians fought with unexampled bravery, defending their flattened trenches to the last.

BERLIN, Nov. 3. The War Office to-day announces that Von Hindenburg has been forced to withdraw his lines between Swenton and Ilsen Lakes, on the northern end of the Russian front.

BERLIN, Nov. 3.—The Austrians have occupied Uzice, Serbia, the War Office announced to-day.

The Serbians, it was stated, are still stubbornly resisting the Austro-German advance southward through the Morava River toward Nish. Fighting was said to be in progress on both sides of the river.

BERLIN, Nov. 3.—At Souchez (in the Artois, France), 100 meters of salient trenches have been evacuated by the Germans, announced the War Office to-day.

East of Peronne, continued the report, the Germans shot down an English aircraft with rifles and captured the pilot.

On the Eastern front, Marshal Von Hindenburg (in the extreme north) repulsed three Russian attacks. The Russians only succeeded in occupying Mikuliski.

The troops in Nisava Valley (through which the Bulgarians are seeking to reach Nish from the south-west) have given way before the superior forces of the enemy.

THE CANADIAN LOAN.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 3. Hon. W. T. White announced to-day that the Canadian War Loan will be advertised in Canada during the last week of this month. The Duke of Connaught will subscribe to the loan. Mr. White is asking all financial institutions and the public to prepare to participate.

Pennant Club's Entertainment

The Pennant Club of the Murray Street church held a most successful Hallowe'en entertainment and taffy pull last night, which the thirty-seven young ladies and gentlemen present enjoyed to the uttermost. The evening was spent in the usual free and easy, hilarious festivities characteristic of the season. Much credit is due to the committee in charge and everyone expressed a hope for future gatherings of a like nature. After clasping hands with crossed arms and forming a large circle everybody sang Auld Lang Syne, and went home in pairs.

IMPORTANT MEETING

There will be a very important meeting of the Speakers' Patriotic League in the recruiting rooms, Simcoe street, to-morrow, Thursday evening, at 8 o'clock, when some business of importance will be taken up. It is desired that every member of the committee should be on hand.

COUNCIL'S APPEAL TO A HIGHER COURT

The Council decided on Monday night to carry to the Supreme Court of Ontario, its appeal against the award to the Peterborough Light and Power Company. It is understood that the anticipated costs are about $500 and the Council apparently decided that it was better to try the court of last resort, or approximately last, if there is any possibility of reducing the $154,781 00 award.

UNUSUAL SOUVENIR FROM WESTERN FRONT REACHES PETERBORO'

Pte. Emile Baumer Receives Medal Taken From The Breast of a German Captain of The Landstrum—New Officers Attached to The Peterboro' Battalion—Presentations Made—To-day's Military News.

Pte. Emile Baumer of the military police of the 93rd Battalion, has received a most interesting souvenir from a cousin who is a sergeant major in a French infantry regiment, "Chasseurs a Pied". The relic of the fierce fighting on the western front takes the form of a Prussian medal taken from the breast of a German Captain of the Land-trum, who was bayoneted and killed by Pte. Baumer's cousin. The significant feature about the medal is that it was awarded for services rendered in the Franco Prussian war of 1870, indicating that the Captain who was wearing it was at least sixty-five years of age.

It was just a year ago to-day that Peterborough's quota to the 2nd contingent left Peterborough to go into barracks at Kingston, their first stage of the journey to the front. Their unit, the 21st Battalion, has been on the firing line for six or seven weeks now.

The esprit de corps which exists among all ranks of the 93rd Peterborough Battalion, has been well illustrated during the past couple of days. On Monday, Sergt. Calladine was presented with a cane, whistle and a pair of gloves by the men of No. 1 platoon. Yesterday the men of No. 2 platoon presented Sergt. Oxley with a handsome wrist watch, while the members of No. 4 platoon called upon Sergt. Hartshorn to accept a meerchaum pipe, a quantity of tobacco and a cane. All three sergeants are slated for promotions which will take them away from the platoons they have been training and the men under them took the opportunity of expressing their appreciation of the treatment they had received from their platoon sergeants.

The 93rd band played their first game in the Battalion Soccer League yesterday afternoon when they defeated No. 4 platoon by two goals to one in an exciting game. The musicians had the score 2 to nil until the last minute of play when Sergt. Hartshorn scored No. 4's only counter by a beautiful shot from the side. Pte. Norman of No. 1 platoon handled the whistle.

	Won	Lost
No. 1 platoon	2	0
No. 3 platoon	1	1
No. 4 platoon	0	1
No. 2 platoon	0	2

Two new officers reported at the armouries this morning in the person of Capt. Nelson of the 40th Regt. and Lieut. Widdifield of the 57th Regiment. The two officers have been with the 80th Battalion, C.E.F., at Barriefield and have been transferred to the 93rd Battalion.

Driver Martin Kennedy of Peterborough, who is in England with the Canadian Army Service Corps, has sent an interesting post card to his mother, Mrs. John Kennedy, 225 Sherbrooke street. On the card are printed the following verses which are very popular with the soldiers at Brainshot Camp, England.

To My Truest of Pals, My Mother.

May the Lord watch for ever between me and thee.
When we are absent one from the other,
Are the words that I sent with heart
full of love
To the best of dear pals, my mother.
For King, Queen and Country we're fighting,
"Honour and Right" is our watchword true,
Tho' "might" at first seemed to hold the sway,
Naught shall conquer the Red, White and Blue.
'Twas some time since that I left my dear home
To answer old England's cry.
The parting was hard, and tho' she tried to be brave,
There was a tear in my dear mother's eye.
"God bless you," said she, "God bless her," says I,
For of mothers no man had a better;
And while I'm in England, or when I go to the front
She knows I shall never forget her,
So cheer up, dear mother, my truest of pals,
Tho' at parting your heart may feel sore.
We will all look forward with hearts full of hope
To true happiness when peace comes once more.

OTTAWA, Nov. 2.—Major-General Sir Sam Hughes' appeal to all Canadian officers, or those wishing to be officers, to report for duty is designed to press into service, not necessarily overseas service, as many as possible of the available officers and non-commissioned officers in the country.

The raising of some seventy new infantry battalions will require upwards of two thousand officers. These will be needed for overseas service. Considering the great numbers of Canadian militiamen that are already overseas or in camp training to go there it is perhaps too much to expect that the whole number required should come from the ranks of the active militia.

In view, however, of the increased establishments, to be further increased by steady reinforcements, there will be need for a large number of men, not now qualified, but who would become qualified at the various instructional schools to be established throughout the country.

This is the first class of men to whom the appeal is directed. The second class are those officers who are not in a position to go overseas, owing to business considerations, age, or the inability to stand the rigors of active service, but who are in a position to render valuable aid at home by assisting in the training of the forces now being raised. Along with them are many non-commissioned officers.

A particularly large number of the latter class will be required, owing to the following system and the fact that the troops raised this winter will be rather widely scattered throughout the country. In order to facilitate this instruction a special drill book is being prepared by Major-General Hughes, embodying the latest in military training, based on the practical experience and lessons learned at the battlefront.

The officers, it is emphasized, are to volunteer, not to Ottawa, but to the commanding officers of the divi-

ITALIANS GAINED ALONG LARGE FRONT

ENEMY LOST HEAVILY

ROME, Nov. 3.—Austrian regiments, fighting on the Isonzo-Carso line on October 21, 22, 23 and 24, lost more than half of their effectiveness and rolled their artillery into ravines and torrents. Twelve and seventeen inch guns in positions on Mounts Santo and Sabatino to defend Gorizia were dismounted by the Italian artillery fire.

New positions occupied by the Italians before Gorizia enable them to bombard the Austrian defences located farthest to the east of the city. The Italians gained on an average between one and two miles all along the extensive front the new line being solidly protected by three important positions of San Michelle, San Martino, Del Carso and Poljane, where armoured trenches and refuges cut into the bare rock, were taken in struggles after preparation by Italian artillery.

Officers and men commend Lieut.-General Count Cadorna's systematic plan of taking dominating positions, one by one, which made the recent important advance possible.

HAS RECEIVED A GUNSHOT WOUND IN THE BACK

Pte. Howard Curtis of The Second Battalion Was Wounded on October The 25th

NOW IN THE HOSPITAL

A cable message was received by Mr. George Curtis, of the Curtis Brick Co., this morning to the effect that his son, Pte. Howard Curtis, of the Second Battalion, has been wounded on October 25th, receiving a gunshot wound in the back. He is now in No. 26 General Hospital at Etaples. This is the second time Pte. Curtis has been wounded. In June last he received a slight injury to the hand, but was soon back with his regiment. Pte. Curtis enlisted at Edmonton, but at Salisbury Plain was transferred to the Second Battalion under Lieut. Charles Ackerman. No particulars as to how Pte. Curtis was wounded have as yet been received.

A letter received from Pte. Curtis a short time ago gives some interesting information. It reads, in part, as follows: "We are in the first line again and some very peculiar things have happened since we came in here. Just to the right of us where the 1st Battalion are the trenches are only forty yards apart and both sides were very friendly for a few hours yesterday.

They kept talking to each other, and at last they suggested going out between the trenches and exchanging souvenirs. Our fellows yelled over, and asked them to come half way, and that they would also come to meet them. The Germans sent a Sergeant and two privates over the parapet and our fellows seeing that they were game enough to come, also let three men go to meet them. One would have thought peace was declared for they shook hands and exchanged cigarettes, etc. However, the officers on both sides became warlike again and the men were ordered to come back to their trenches. Neither side fired and every one got back to the trenches all right.

LINDSAYS WILL APPEAR TO-MORROW

Preliminary Examination May Be Postponed at the Request of the Crown

To-morrow at ten o'clock Sandford Lindsay and his wife, Mrs. Phoebe Lindsay, will appear before County Police Magistrate Langley in answer to a charge of murder preferred against each of the above named parties. In addition to this, Sandford Lindsay will be charged with incest and also of causing the death of the unborn child of his daughter, Lily May Lindsay. Two charges have been registered against Mrs. Lindsay. She will not only be charged with murder, but also of causing the death of an unborn child.

The capital charge is based on the death of Lily May Lindsay, aged fourteen years which took place some weeks ago and which is said to have resulted from a criminal operation alleged to have been performed by the parents.

It is hardly likely the Crown will be ready to proceed when the case comes up to-morrow. A further adjournment will be asked for.

Mayor's Sympathy For Ex-Ald. Johnston

"I regret very much the death of ex-Ald. Johnston," said Mayor Hall to-day, "and my sympathy goes out to him and his family. He was a veteran in civic affairs having been a councillor for years in Ashburnham and more recently for the entire city. He was a staunch Conservative and had the welfare of the whole city at heart."

SEDITION AND SEDITION.

The Toronto News prints an editorial article titled "The Bourassa Sedition." There is sedition and sedition. The Imperial dictionary defines sedition as "a factious commotion in the state, not amounting to insurrection." That is precisely what the Bourassa Nationalist movement amounts to; and at that it has spent its force; it is utterly discredited in sane and sound public opinion, and would have disappeared long ago if it had not been given official recognition by being represented in the Borden Government by the seditious element, represented by three of the ministers, who though changes have been made, are kept up to strength to this day. Nationalism, "the factious commotion in the state," has been kept alive by the "factious commotion," kept up by the News and other unpatriotic politicians, one element of sedition, "factious commotion," affecting to reprove another. We are in a struggle in which party politics is a treasonable intrusion. We have a great duty to do, and we can only do it by resisting every temptation to turn aside, to consider the promotion of the interests of party or faction. We can only warrantably discuss nationalism of the bigger kind, the discharge of the national duty of doing our bit and our best in the war for country, empire, humanity, and human right and happiness.

BRITAIN NOT IDLE.

There are persons who criticise Great Britain with failing to keep up her end with the French on the western front. It is forgotten that to the intervention of British troops, France owes the fact that the Germans are not now in possession of Paris; that Britain has held the front assigned her, and has not only not permitted Germany, in the language of Mr. Asquith, to gain a foot of ground since April, but has made important gains. Britain, according to the same authority, has nearly a million men on the western front, and is fighting and winning battles on half a dozen fronts. These carpers forget the work of the fleet as referred to by Asquith. After stating that in the transportation of troops, two and a half millions of officers and men had been carried in addition to 320,000 sick and wounded, two and a half million tons of supplies and 800,000 horses, he added—

"Up to the present, the loss of life in the whole of these gigantic overseas operations has been considerably less than one-tenth of one per cent. There never has been anything comparable in history to the service of the navy. There they are — the men of the grand fleet, living unnoticed, unadvertised; performing with efficiency and vigilance which cannot be described, but which has cleared the whole high seas, from one end to the other, of German warships and mercantile marine. Where is the great German fleet upon which so much money was spent? Locked up in the Baltic. It dare not show its face in waters where it can be attacked. The whole maritime resources of Germany have been reduced to sporadic and constantly diminishing efforts of submarines."

In this tremendous war, unparalleled for expanse of operations and fierceness of struggle, we cannot see all that is being done. But we can see that steady progress is being made in overcoming Germany and her other national conspirators against the interests of the world; and when the history of the titanic conflict is written it will be seen that Great Britain has contributed her full share to the victory, and that her overseas dominions have been important factors in the triumph.

HUNT HUNS—NOT DEER.

CITY POLITICS.

By city politics is not meant the controversial kind that has to do with the getting of office, aldermanic or otherwise. It refers to a far more important branch of city policy, the dl getting our streets under some sort of system in the planning and management of street work. Heretofore work upon our streets has been of the haphazard kind—here a little and there a little, without reference to a general scheme of street improvement. From lack of a grade plan of the city we have astonishing conjunctions of walk levels — more jumps than junctions in many cases; and for lack of systematic plans we have astonishing street lines, with houses and other buildings encroaching upon the streets. A sample of the haphazard treatment of street lines, a legacy from the past, is shown in Park street north from Charlotte. The curb on the west side is a bad case of curvature of the spine, and is as near a straight line as a cow path through a pasture.

The street department is commendably working on a plan to systematize street work, something that is by no means premature. And the aldermen, judging by the discussion at the Council meeting on Monday night, are coming to the right view of things. The proposal to narrow the streets and make easy and cheaper the construction of permanent macadam streets of some kind, is a step in the right direction. We have been "building" streets for sixty or more years, and except in the case of recently laid asphalt pavements, we haven't a mile of what may be called, by the most elastic employment of terms, a mile of even approximately permanent street surface. If the plan now advocated had been pursued in the past decade or two, we should have had, at the rate of a mile or two a year, many miles of practically permanent roadway; that is roadway that with adequate attention to maintenance, would be effectively permanent. As it is we have spent thousands of dollars on street work, with virtually nothing to show for it except the appealing record of it in our tax bills.

We have the best natural conditions in Canada, for building good permanent street surfaces at the lowest cost. The facilities for surface drainage owing to surface configuration of the city area, are of the best. We have in most parts a natural foundation that cannot be surpassed. We have a surplus of stone easily accessible, and now we have prospect of system and plan that can be devised to turn all these incidental advantages to excellent advantage at a comparatively very low rate of money expenditure, with the result of getting the worth of such expenditure in streets of permanent and excellent character.

It developed in discussion in the Council that good macadam streets, virtually permanent, can be built at half, or less than half the cost of asphalt pavement, and the splendid results we have had from the use of oil on mere gravel streets when properly applied to a properly pregared surface, is another argument in favour of the construction of macadam streets of good character. Many of the oil-treated streets are to-day as smooth and comfortable for the use of wheeled vehicles as the paved streets.

We are glad to be able to congratulate the street authorities upon entering upon a systematic plan of dealing with our sereet work; and the merit of this action is not perhaps lessened from its being on a line generally with what The Examiner has advocated in the public interest for years. If a good plan, as will doubtless be the case, is adopted, and properly applied, we shall have infinitely better results, and get better value for the money expended.

VENICE.

If the Lombards has possessed dynamite and airships from which to throw destructive bombs upon sleeping and defenceless cities, perhaps Venice would have been bombarded from the skies in the era of the maggiori and the minori; perhaps not. We prefer to give the Lombards the benefit of the doubt. History scarcely records acts of barbarism so useless and shameful as the Teutons on this era of science and enlightenment are capable of performing. In all the wars of Venice, and the Venetians were a warlike and domineering people, the "tiara of proud towers" of the Adriatic city was unmolested. But now, when man was just beginning to think that he had conquered war and established the brotherhood of all nations, bombs shatter Ruskin's "level field of checkered stones" in front of the palace of the Doges, and the winged lion is threatened with destruction. The whole world was shocked a dozen years ago when the beautiful Campanile crumbled and fell, and now the new tower is a target for aerial bombs. The Church of Scalzi had been damaged and St Mark's may go next. The historic doves may be frightened away from the piazza never to return. The clock tower may be smashed and the treasures of the bibliotecs pass into history.

Dropping bombs on Venice is no more dastardly than dropping bombs on London, but somehow the shock to the world caused by this latest outrage of Teutonic warfare seems greater. For the whole world has taken pride in Venice, her preservation for all time seemed assured. Byron mourned the departed glories of the sea city, but he was a poet and in a bitter mood. In the eyes of the modern world Venice has preserved the glories. Railroads and telephones have not destroyed her beauty. But the Austrian aeroplanes threaten to wipe her out of existence. The Zeppelin attack on London have stirred the British martial spirit so that recruiting has become an easier work. It is likely that the Italians will fight the harder because of the attacks on Venice. Their enemies must pay for the damage they have wrought. "Frightfulness" does not frighten men, it inspires them to new efforts. Before many days have passed dynamite bombs may fall in the Landstrasse, which Metternich ironically called the entrance to Asia. It is, indeed, one of the reopened gateways to the domain of barbarism. Since the Huns and the Vandals Europe has known no such warfare as this.—New York Times.

WAR STOPS THE MARCH OF SCIENCE.

A typical and significant result of the European war is that the French Government has felt obliged, owing to its need constantly to use the Eiffel Tower as a part of its military telegraph system, to withdraw the permission it had given for its employment during a few minutes of each day as a receiving station for wireless telephone messages from the United States.

This puts an end, for the time, to the highly interesting and very important experiments and tests which the engineers of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company were conducting between Paris and Arlington, and the establishment of transatlantic communication by telephone must be deferred until the warring nations have sufficiently exhausted each other again to substitute the arguments of reason for those of force.

The delay can hardly be called of great consequence in comparison with other deprivations and losses to which war is subjecting all the world, but it is one especially well calculated to impress upon people everywhere their interests in the return of peace. For wireless telephony, while in this particular phase of it the undertaking of a corporation conducted for the profit of its own stockholders, is so little remote from the domain of what is called "pure" science, and its success is so obviously a matter of more than private or even national advantage, that in better days than these any Government would be glad to facilitate the efforts of promoters by freely giving them any assistance it could command.

That is why the French Government did what it could to help, as long as it could, and why it now doubtless feels regret for the compelled withholding of further assistance. The work of experimentation can, indeed, go on over the other seas between stations that are not, as yet, in billigerent territory, but it is the Atlantic which it is most desired to cross, and the Eiffel Tower has no present substitute for height and equipment on the other side of that ocean.—N. Y. Times.

MISS CAVELL AND RECRUITING.

Surprise and annoyance are expressed by the German Government that such publicity has been given to its shooting of Miss Cavell, and that in other nations resentment is at white heat against the perpetrators of the crime. The incredibly inane palaver from Berlin is utterly futile as a palliative. The direct effect has been to send thousands of men into the ranks of the British forces—her martyrdom is the making of the armies. "How long, O Lord, how long?" Nobody has time to listen to what Germany says about this latest outrage. The deep damnation of the taking-off thunders above an apology that is not even specious.—Philadelphia Ledger.

QUESTION OF A COALITION GOVERNMENT FOR CANADA

The Journal of Commerce of Montreal, of which Hon. W. S. Fielding is editor-in-chief, reviews the arguments for and against a coalition government, at least during a continuance of the war. Its text is an article sent to the University Magazine for October by Mr. E. W. Thomson, the well-known journalist. The Journal of Commerce says:

Mr. Thomson's renewed suggestion of a reorganization of the government on coalition lines such as have been followed in England has, we imagine, small chance of being accepted. Such a movement at the early stages of the war might have been feasible, or it might have become feasible later if there had been in the meantime such co-operation between the two parties respecting war measures as existed in England for some months before the actual formation of the coalition cabinet. There has been no such co-operation in Canada. The members of the cabinet in making plans for the war saw no reason for departing from the system of party government that had long prevailed. There is nothing in the present situation to lead them to take a different view. They are not likely to propose a coalition, and if they did propose it the opposition might feel that such a course now would make them responsible for policies in the formation and application of which they had no voice. Surprising things happen in war times, it is true, but the formation of a coalition government in Canada, under present circumstances, is hardly within the realm of probability.

There does not seem to be any good reason, however, why the question of an extension of the parliamentary term should not at a later stage be considered without the creation of the dangers that Mr. Thomson suggests. The chief objection to such proposals at this time is that they are entirely unnecessary, or, to say the least, premature. Our parliament has still a full year to run. Many things may happen before the expiring of the term. Assuming that parliament will meet again in January, there will be time enough toward the close of the session to consider what shall be done. If the war situation be then found unchanged, so far as Canada's part is concerned, a proposal for a short extension of the term would be in order, and, in all probability, it could then be brought forward with the support of a public opinion that could not be behind any such plan to-day.

There is no occasion for any coalition talk at the present time. The Borden government has an ample majority, and it is being given the loyal co-operation of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the members of the Liberal party. The premier of Canada has not invited a coalition, as the premier of Great Britain did, and nothing has thus far arisen which would justify him doing so. He should, however, extend to the Liberal leaders, in return for their co-operation, a full measure of confidence with regard to war measures. This has not thus far been done. As for the extension of the parliamentary term, there will be time enough, as Mr. Fielding says, toward the close of the session to consider the course which ought to be taken, and it is not likely, from the spirit which the Liberals have thus far shown, that they will reject any reasonable proposal which may be made to them by the government.

A STRAIGHT LIE.

The New York Journal story that thousands of young men are leaving Great Britain in order to escape serving in the army scarcely needed to be investigated to convince people of its untruth. A similar lie was publish ed a few months ago, saying that thousands of Canadians were crossing the border "to escape conscription."

HELP TO RECRUITING.

The chum spirit and the good fellow ship which counts so much afterwards in esprit de corps, has not been sufficiently exploited. Every locality has its group of young men and if they are properly appealed to they will come in in companies.—Toronto World.

THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

The only criticism made in connection with the Patriotic Fund is that the work is being done too well. It is said that women who used to go out and work before the war are now able to live at home in comfort.

Well, why not? We asked the men to go and fight the battles of Canada, of the British Empire, and of humanity. We promised that if they would do that, we would see that their wives and children were provided for. We did not stipulate that their wives must go out and work. In a well-ordered community, no wife ought to be required to go out and work. The husband and father is the bread-winner of the family. The married woman's duty is to care for the home, to keep the house in order, and look after the physical and moral welfare of the children.

But it is said that before the war many women were not able to do this. They were obliged to go out and work, because their husbands would not work or could not find employment. Now these women are better off, in the sense of material comfort, than they were before the war.

That may be true. The war has given employment to men who were not employed before. If they were not working before the war, they are certainly working now. They are engaged in a very hazardous employment, full of toil, hardships, and danger. They are working and fighting for us. It is therefore just and reasonable that we should see that their families are maintained in comfort, and that their wives are not required to go out to work. Surely we have no right to ask that the woman shall leave her home and work while her husband is working and fighting in the trenches.

As a matter of fact, the payments made to wives and families are much smaller than is generally supposed. In the month of August the average payment per family by the Toronto and York Patriotic Association was only $13.90 a month. Some are better off than others. It is impossible to avoid that. But the fact that a good many are better off than before the war is a fact that ought to give pleasure to subscribers to the fund. That is what they paid for—to make the wives and children of soldiers comfortable, and so to encourage men to enlist. The Patriotic Fund is the greatest of all recruiting agencies.

THE APPEAL IS TO CANADIAN CITIZENSHIP

(Special to The Examiner.)

GANANOQUE, November 3.—"A man's duty in this war is not determined by his racial origin but by his Canadian citizenship," declared Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., M.P.P., at a recruiting rally held here to-night under the auspices of the Eastern Ontario Speakers' League.

"It has been said in some quarters," continued Mr. Rowell, "that we cannot expect Canada to do as much as Australia or New Zealand because our population is more beterogeneous. If this is so it only imposes upon the government the added responsibility of making clear to all classes of our people the vital character of the issues involved and the critical situation facing our Empire, and of impressing upon them their obligation to assist in its defence. Is not the population of South Africa more cosmopolitan even than that of Canada and yet according to cable advices received from South Africa, the union under General Botha with a European population of about one and a quarter millions, a portion of which was disaffected and went to the extent of open rebellion—organised and sent into German South West Africa an expeditionary force of 70,000 men, which represented between five and six per cent. of the entire European population. This in proportion to population would mean for Canada substantially over 400,000 men. We shall have to more than double all the efforts we have heretofore put forth before we succeed in calling to the colours as many men as General Botha took with him into German South West Africa."

"The Minister of Militia," said Mr. Rowell, turning to another aspect of the subject, "announces that he has already received offers to raise seventeen new regiments. This splendid response to the government's authorizing the enlistment of troops up to 250,000, is a fine testimony to the courage and patriotism of the Canadian people, and of their desire to do their share in this great struggle."

"Canada's duty," concluded Mr. Rowell, "is not determined by what South Africa or New Zealand or Australia has done. The measure of our responsibility is our ability. Who can say we have as yet measured up to our ability?"

Something New.

Many advertisers are constantly trying to think up "Something New" or "Different," and the results are startling to be sure, but not always convincing nor conducive to increase the business of the advertiser.

The craze for originality is a mistake. People do not care for stunts or mental gymnastics. They do want to know the facts in regard to your business and whether you can offer better prices or better quality than your competitors.

Tell the facts in a straightforward, unassuming manner. You will gain the confidence of your patrons, and you will find that advertising pays abundantly.

Berlin Food Prices High And Milk Very Scarce

Central Empires Hoping for Relief Through Serbia From Bulgaria —Austria Worse Off

Roast Beef, 36 cents per pound.
Roast Veal, 40 cents per pound.
Veal Cutlets, 80 cents per pound.
Pork, 40 cents per pound.
Ham, 65 cents per pound.
Bacon, 56 to 61 cents per pound.
Butter, 56 to 61 cents per pound.
Eggs, 4 cents each.

By CARL W. ACKERMAN.

BERLIN, Oct. 15. (by mail)—Berlin faces the need for milk cards. Hotelkeepers are not as much worried by this, however, as by the mysterious 10-pfennig a week rise in food prices. Ten pfennig is about two cents. For the past two months food prices have been climbing skyward at that weekly rate.

A few months ago a bread scarcity was what everyone feared. To guard against it bread cards were organized. When it was reported milk was growing scarce, milk cards were suggested immediately. From the fact that whipped cream is forbidden already in Austro-Hungary from the rising price of butter and from milk dealers' unwillingness to increase deliveries cards seems probable. If milk cards do come, it is said only families with children will be allowed good supplies.

Prices of butter have increased 3 cents per pound in the past week. Even cooking butter costs 50 to 54 cents.

Considering the scarcity of pork fat, or lard, which is so abundant in America at 10 to 15 cents, American housekeepers can understand what it means to Berlin housewives to have to pay five times as much for the one article used in preparing nearly every meal.

In both Germany and Austria-Hungary food prices have been increasing rapidly since spring. Germany, however, is still economically better off than her ally.

The people believe that as soon as a way is cut through Serbia, and Bulgaria and Turkey are in direct communication with Berlin, foodstuffs will cost less, for Bulgaria and Turkey both are said to be stocked with foods the Germanic allies need.

Shortage is Admitted.

SOFIA, Nov. 3—German Home Office delegates were here to arrange for the export of Bulgarian grain to Austria-Hungary by way of the new route opened through north-eastern Serbia. It was believed all food shortage in the Germanic countries would speedily be relieved thus.

Berlin Crops Discussed.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 3—The Vorwaerts (Berlin) says that the committee of the Social Democratic party has requested the Imperial Chancellor to convoke the Reichstag at an early date because the question of the food supply and the state of siege require speedy discussion.

Germany Lacks Fodder.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Discussion of whether the food situation in Germany really is as serious as has been pictured recently in some reports is continued by the newspapers. The Daily Mail believes it misleading to say that Germany is starving or in imminent danger of starvation, but adds: "There is no denying food conditions there are vastly less favorable than at the outset or the first winter of the war."

Last year, it is pointed out, Germany's domestic harvest was better than the average and she had huge supplies in storage. This year's harvest, according to reliable Dutch reports, is under normal because of the midsummer drought lasting two months, but in spite of this the potato crop was unusually large. The fodder question is believed to be the most important for Germany, as the supply formerly was obtained chiefly from Russia.

The Post says it has learned that Rumania has decided the prices of cereals for export shall be double those for home consumption, and that payment must be made in gold.

An order for the commandeering of all flour in Hungary went into effect yesterday, according to a Berne despatch.

The Chronicle declares Germany is far from the end of her food resources, remarking that Germany is daily providing adequately substitutes for each article as it becomes too scarce for general consumption. In this campaign, the Chronicle calls attention to advertisements in German newspapers for imitation eggs, lard, tea, artificial honey, and straw flour.

Other London papers emphasize the bearing which the British sub is likely to have on Germany's supply of corn foodstuffs. It seems to be taken for granted that Germany's connection with Sofia and Turkey cannot be protected soon enough to have any considerable bearing on the food situation this winter.

LIST OF DELINQUENT WAR REFUGEES

United States to Sue All Delinquents Who Are Able to Pay—Sums from $7 to $1,300.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The Treasury Department made public tonight the names of more than 2,000 persons who have failed to refund to the Federal Government money advanced to them in 1914 to enable them to return from Europe, where they were marooned by the war. This list will be followed from time to time by other lists of persons who have failed to pay and whose cases are now being investigated. It is understood to be the intention of the Government to sue those who are able to pay.

It is apparent that many of the borrowers gave fictitious names and that many others gave addresses that did not exist. In one case the address is a vacant lot. The most frequent notation on the list is "Can't locate."

The Treasury Department prefaced the list of names with this statement:

"A number of persons who were caught in Europe at the time of the outbreak of war in the Summer of 1914, and to whom funds were advanced by the representatives of the United States Government who were sent abroad or stationed abroad for that purpose, have failed or refused to repay the money advanced to them. It will be remembered that at that time a veritible panic overtook Americans who were in Europe, many of whom were without money, and even though they had drafts or letters of credit, they were unable to raise money on them.

"Representatives of the United States Government in Europe were besieged by frantic Americans demanding that they be sent home, and at once. Others clamored for money to provide themselves with food. The sacred duties of the American Government to its citizens were appealed to. In this emergency Congress acted; $9,750,000 was appropriated to relieve the necessities of American citizens abroad, with the provision that persons to whom relief was furnished should reimburse the United States if financially able to do so.

"Arrangements were made by cable by which our diplomatic and consular officers in Europe were provided with money to assist our citizens who came to them for relief. One million, five hundred thousand dollars in gold coin was loaded on the battleship Tennessee in the New York harbor a few days after war was declared and sent to London, Paris, Berlin, Rome, and other large cities of Europe, to be used in assisting our citizens. A large amount of money was advanced to persons asking relief, and receipts or promises of repayment were taken from them.

"A considerable number of these obligations have been paid, but many still remain unpaid. Although there is no duty on the part of the Government to look up the signers of these notes and demand payment, yet in the case of every person whose name appears on this list efforts have been made to find him either by personal visits or through the Post Office. In many cases the persons could not be found or letters mailed to them were not answered.

"The collection of the amounts due from these delinquents will be pushed where the person is fully able to repay the amount advanced. Each case is to be investigated, and where the person is found to be financially able to repay to the Government the amount advanced it is the intention of the Treasury Department to make his name public. This list will be followed from time to time by other lists when it becomes apparent to the department that the persons whose promises are held are refusing to pay, though able to do so.

Ops Township Man Injured

Was Struck in the Leg by Shrapnel —Seven Men Killed

LINDSAY, Nov. 3.—Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Brown, Ops township, have received a letter from their son, Pte. Percy Brown.

In his letter Percy stated that he was slightly injured in one of his legs by a shrapnel shell, but the injury was not a serious one. He was engaged with others on digging a communication trench when the Germans opened fire. Seven were killed around him, but he escaped serious injury.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown have also received a letter from their son, Pte. William, who is a prisoner. He writes that he is not in good health, and it is feared that he is not receiving the best of treatment at the hands of the Huns.

NEWSPAPER MEN VISIT GREAT FLEET

LONDON, Nov. 3—Graphic descriptions of the first visit of British newspaper men to Great Britain's grand fleet are published by all the leading papers. They unite in paying tribute to the preparedness and efficiency of the British navy, not only as to the main fighting units but also to the less prominent but equally important auxiliaries or various types.

A naval officer aboard one of the ships told the correspondent that in addition to the war fleet proper there are between 2,000 and 3,000 ships of the merchant marine employed in transport and supply duty and as many more engaged in patrol work or in foiling the "declining efforts of enemy submarines." The visitors were shown the celebrated map on which are marked the places where German submarines have been captured, destroyed or sunk and various methods for meeting the submarine menace were explained to them.

"We actually saw vessels engaged in this anti-submarine business leaving port," says one correspondent. "Indeed it is not necessary to go outside to understand where the blockade has failed. Here at anchor alongside one another lay the bane and the antidote."

One full day of the visit was spent in inspecting large new naval works at a place which a short time ago was swampland, but now is a live and busy naval establishment which will be large enough when completed to accommodate 20 dreadnoughts. The works include three drydocks, each of which is capable of holding any ship afloat.

There are about 35,000,000 fur felt hats made in the United States each year and about 7,000,000 wool felt ones.

DEFORMED THROUGH LONG IMPRISONMENT

Singular Case of Cruelty to Animals Discovered in Lincoln County.

St. Catharines, Nov. 3. High Constable Boyle of Lincoln County, has brought to the attention of the Humane Society a most singular case of cruelty to animals, which he discovered on a farm in Pelham Township. It is that of a horse placed in the cellar of a barn five years ago, when it was a colt, and kept there continuously since, never having been brought into the open or removed from its narrow enclosure. When the colt grew too large to be taken from the cellar without enlarging the exit, it was permitted to stay there, growth in its cramped surroundings having resulted in the animal being terribly deformed. Its front legs have turned up until they now appear like horned projections.

When the Lincoln constable left the place the animal was still in the confinement, and must remain there until the building is torn down.

Unsightly Pimples Covered His Face.

All diseases and blemishes of the skin are caused by the blood being in an impure condition.

You cannot make a good complexion from the outside; you must get to the seat of the trouble. You must make the blood pure and rich by taking a medicine that will drive out all the impurities and poisons from the blood, one that drives out everything from the system that is the cause of these unsightly skin eruptions.

The best blood cleansing medicine on the market today is Burdock Blood Bitters; a medicine that has been used with the greatest success for the past forty years; a medicine you don't experiment with when you buy it.

Mr. Lennox D. Cooke, Indian Path, N.S., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. Last winter my face was covered with pimples. I tried different kinds of medicine, and all seemed to fails. I was one day at a friend's house, and there they advised me to use B.B.B., so I purchased two bottles, and before I had them taken I found I was getting better. I got two more, and when they were finished I was completely cured. I find it is a great blood purifier, and I recommend it to all."

IMPROVEMENTS MADE TO THE SOUTH CENTRAL SCHOOL

Building Said to Be in a Sanitary Condition—Regular Monthly Meeting of the Board of Education—Applications Received.

The Board of Education met last night in regular monthly session. Mr. John Smith submitted a report respecting the sanitary condition of the South Central School in which it was stated that several improvements had been made. These included a new flush pipe. A coat of whitewash was also applied in the basement. Mr. Smith declared the school to be in a sanitary condition. In this he claimed to be supported by the Medical Officer of Health and other officials who were consulted in regard to the matter.

Mr. Smith suggested that iron angle posts be substituted for the wooden posts now doing service in front of the Collegiate Institute. The work will cost in the neighbourhood of four dollars.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

CLUB WOMEN of Peterboro who have already accomplished much for the betterment of the community, will be interested in the "Examiner" Better Foods Better Homes Week, beginning Monday, November 8th and continuing through Friday, November 12th.

Clubs are invited to attend in a body, the Lectures and Cookery Lessons of Mrs Brown-Lewers at Conservatory of Music, and if they will advise the "Examiner" of their intentions to do so, seats will be reserved for them.

Mrs. Brown-Lewers Is Accomplished Cook

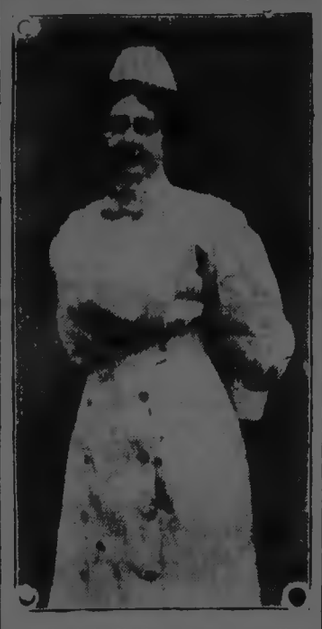
Says Women Should Study Food Situation To Properly Care for Family

Shows Housekeepers How To Overcome Many Difficulties In The Kitchen

WOMEN WHO ARE interested in good cooking, and surely that includes every woman in the city, will thoroughly enjoy the course of lectures and cookery lessons to be put on at the Conservatory of Music, Hunter and Rubidge streets, next week by Mrs. Brown-Lewers, under the auspices of the Examiner. Mrs. Brown-Lewers is, and always has been a very famously good cook, and her mother and grandmother were good cooks locally famous among the pioneer women of Idaho for their prowess in the culinary art and for their splendid recipes. Every branch of the cookery art has been thoroughly studied by Mrs. Brown-Lewers both experimentally in her own kitchen, and in her domestic science class at Pratt Institute, and theoretically in the same classes and in travel.

Mrs. Brown-Lewers has been a great traveller and has watched the women of India prepare foods out of a very limited variety of materials with the very crudest cookery implements. No less interesting has been her observations of the western Indian squaw puttering about her camp-fire. From both she has secured interesting recipes. From the little Japanese woman cooking on a stove scarcely bigger than a hat, from the Chinese woman preparing bird's nest pudding, and so-called "rats," from the French woman frying frogs legs and snails in black butter she has gained ideas for good cooking which she has modernized and Americanized and Anglicized and blended with her own cookery knowledge until she has one of the finest courses that can be offered to housewives anywhere. But while she gives to the women who attend her classes the benefit of all this knowledge and a fine collection of recipes, it is not her aim to bewilder them with a maze of foreign cookery methods and dishes, but to inspire them with a desire to study the food situation as it affects their own family, learn how to prepare nourishing, wholesome and enjoyable meals and evolve a system which will render all of their housekeeping methods more efficient in every way. She aims in her course here to show housewives how to overcome many kitchen difficulties, how to lessen the number of steps in the preparation of a meal, and how to reduce their housekeeping bills without lowering their standards and ideals of home life.

One of the interesting features of her week of lectures is the one on Friday afternoon, when she will talk on "Motherhood and the Development of the Child." Friday afternoon will be given over to the little folks entirely, that is as far as the lecture and menu is concerned. On this afternoon the speaker asks that all pay particular attention to the talk and take notes. Every mother in Peterborough should hear this lecture and all of the other lectures. Mrs. Brown-Lewers will give on food and household management, in her course here, beginning Monday, Monday, November 8th, and continuing through Friday, November 12th.



Wages Case in Police Court

Difference of Twenty-five Cents Results in Litigation—To day's Police Court

Wm. Harrison was the sole occupant of the prisoners' dock in this morning's police court. He lost no time in pleading guilty to a charge of being intoxicated in a public place. Harrison is a lumberjack by occupation and claims to have no home. He was fined two dollars with an option of ten days in gaol. Failing to have the necessary iron men Harrison will sojourn in the county gaol.

Wages Case.

For a difference of twenty-five cents two women appeared in the Police Court this morning. The plaintiff worked one day from ten o'clock until four for which she received the sum of fifty cents. Next day plaintiff worked an hour or two longer. Defendant offered her seventy-five cents, which was refused. Plaintiff claimed a dollar. After hearing the evidence, the Court decided that seventy-five cents was enough and disposed of the case on that basis.

MRS. TOM THUMB NOW SEVENTY-FOUR

Anniversary of Her Birth Celebrated By Friends on Sunday.

BOSTON, Nov. 3.—Mrs. Tom Thumb (Countess Lavinia Magri) observed the 74th anniversary of her birth at her home in Warrentown, on Sunday. A large number of friends and relatives were present for the occasion. One of the incidents of the day was the dedication of a boulder in memory of Richard Warren, of Revolutionary fame, who was an ancestor of Mrs. Tom Thumb.

There was an orchestra in attendance and addresses were made by Thomas Weston, of Boston, who recently wrote the history of Middleboro; George W. Stetson and Harry Lebaron Sampson, both of Middleboro. The Countess herself gave a short sketch of her work and the reason for placing the boulder to be dedicated.

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr. Rugham Johnstone, painter and decorator, 316 College Street, will be answered on Wednesdays — questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of stringency and enforced and suggested economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, signwriting, paperhanging, furniture polishing, and decorating may be sent to the Examiner, and will receive attention in due course.

Rob Roy, Campbellford, Ont.—Dear Sir, last week I forgot to ask you to tell me how to fix my oven. I was disappointed last week, but it was my own fault. The room is empty and father will not let me do a thing until you tell me how to do it, so please answer next Wednesday.

Ans.—Very well, Rob Roy, I will not keep you longer. First sandpaper the ceiling and walls, with fine sand paper, then apply a coat of paint composed of 3 parts boiled oil, 1 part turpentine, made to the consistency of cream, with white lead in which has been put a very little lamp black. Let his get thoroughly hard, then get the centre of your ceiling, mark it, and decide whether you prefer an oval or a circle centre for your ceiling. If a circle make it about four feet diameter by placing a brad awl or small wire nail in the centre, and with a string two feet long, make a small loop in each end, slip one end over your brad awl and a pencil in the other. Keep the string tight and mark your circle around. In this circle appyly a coat of pale green paint, on the field or balance of your ceiling paint it a steel grey, and your walls a steel grey. When his is thoroughly hard, make a good strong chrome yellow paint, fairly thin, with lots of turpentine, and coat over your green centre sharply, and with a coarse grained sponge, pat it all over evenly, when the green should predominate. Now paint the balance of your ceiling a very pale silver grey. When this is dry get your string again, have a little steel grey, and with a small fitch brush, attached where your pencil was, work carefully, paint a line about two inches wide around your circle. Use an inverted light shining on your circle, which will reflect the green and yellow back to your room. Next week we will tackle the walls, etc.

Waxite, Peterborough.—I have heard of wax flakes or powder to simply throw upon the floor for dances. Will you advise me through your "Arts and Crafts Column" where this can be procured or can it be home-made?

Ans.—I presume it can be purchased in any first class hardware store. However, here is a recipe which is worth trying, it is given by one of the best authorities I know of. Melt paraffin wax with benzine over heat but away from open flame or fire as it is very explosive. Then stir in some talcum powder to form a stiff paste, after which rub through a fine sieve and allow it to stand until the benzine evaporates, pulverize, and dust on the floor.

Another Ender, City.—I would be pleased to learn the quantities of paper required for the following sized rooms which are all nine feet two inches high, 9 ft. 3 in. x 10 ft., 12 ft. 6 in. x 8 ft. and 12 ft. x 9 ft., and is there any later styles than the cut out borders or crown borders?

Ans.—Your wall paper dealer will show you the latest ventures in wall paper down. The respective quantities are: Ceiling 4 rolls, walls 10, roll border 15 yards; ceiling 4 rolls, walls 11 roll border 15 yards, ceiling 4 rolls, walls 11 rolls, border 15 yards. I am guessing at the number of openings, but the above should be ample.

P. Q. D., Peterborough, Ont.: I bought some ——— best white enamel as it was highly recommended, and I engaged as I thought a first-class painter to paint it on. But I find it quite dull in some spots, notably the window sills. The doors also are unsatisfactory as the gloss is not uniform, being quite dull in some spots. Is it the fault of the enamel or the painter?

Ans.—This is a delicate question for one in the business to answer. However ——— white enamel is one of the best on the market. The trouble is a common one (altogether too common) and is called "Blooming." A great many painters do not study the nature of the enamel and so pay little attention to the immediate undercoat or temperature conditions, both very important factors. For instance your window sills are dull, then your painter left the window up just a little too high, a draught was caused which lowered the temperature and caused atmospheric condensation, consequently dew or moisture was deposited on the bright shining surface and of course it went dull, sometimes only after two or three days. In the same way the draught hit the door, but naturally the sills were affected first and most. There are many causes of the same effect, and ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the painter is to blame rather than the enamel.

THE ASPHALT ON OUR STREETS

Some Interesting Information About Our Pavements

Peterborough is proud of her permanent highways.

What if our streets have been torn up for the summer? We are willing to suffer a little inconvenience for the future pleasure of their enjoyment.

We have watched with growing interest their laborious construction, from the deep excavation, and concrete base, to the final layer of asphalt.

The concrete, or cement, we are more or less familiar with, owing to its extensive use a few years ago in the construction of the Trent Valley Canal, particularly the famous Lift-Lock, as well as to its manufacture in Lakefield—our little suburb to the north; but the asphalt, that hot, black, spongy substance, which is rolled into a smooth layer on top of the concrete, we are not so well acquainted with.

Asphalt is another name for bitumen (hence the name bithulithic), or, more properly speaking, it is the solid form of bitumen, which is found also in the liquid state, called petroleum, and in the gaseous state, when it is known as natural gas.

In the scriptures there are numerous references to bitumen, among which the following may be quoted:

In Genesis, 9:3, we are told that in the building of the tower of Babel, "slime had they for mortar," and in Genesis, 14:10, that the vale of Siddim was full of slime-pits."

Herodotus alludes to the use of bitumen bought down by the river Is, a tributary of the Euphrates, as a mortar in building the walls of Babylon.

The asphalt of the Dead Sea was used in Egypt for emblaming the dead.

In common with other forms of bitumen, asphalt is very widely distributed geographically and occurs in greater or less quantity in rocks of all ages.

The principal asphalt deposits are merely the result of evaporation and oxidation of liquid petroleum which has escaped from outcropping strata.

The celebrated Pitch Lakes of Trinidad was long regarded as the largest deposit of asphalt in existence, but the deposit found in Venezuela exceeds it in area.

The Trinidad "Lake" has an area of 100 acres and is sufficiently firm in places to support a team of horses. The deposit is worked with picks to a depth of a foot or two, and the excavations soon became filled up by the plastic material flowing in from below and hardening.

The softer parts of the lake constantly evolve gas, which is stated to consist largely of carbon dioxide and sulphuretted hydrogen (smells like rotten eggs.)

The working of the deposit is in the hands of the New Trinidad Asphalt Co., who hold a concession up to the year 1930 on payment to the government of a minimum royalty of $50,000 a year.

A circular line of tramway, supported on palm leaves, has been laid on the lake to facilitate the removal of the asphalt.

Very large quantities are exported for paving purposes, but the supply seems unlimited, for in 1908, though 1,585,000 tons had been removed in the previous thirty-five years, there was but little evidence of reduction in the quantity.

The Venezula deposit is said to contain more than 1,000 acres.

Asphalt in its purest form is generally black in colour, and is frequently brittle at ordinary temperature. Apart from its principal uses in the manufacture of paving materials, it is largely employed in building as a "damp course" and is a matter excluding coating for concrete floors, as well as in the manufacture of roofing felt. It also enters into the composition of black varnish.

OFFICERS MUST BE PROVIDED

COUNTY MUST FURNISH PLACE FOR POLICE MAGISTRATES

TORONTO, November 3.—Without calling on the plaintiff, the Appellate Division dismissed the appeal of the County of Huron from the County Court decision awarding Francis Holmstead, police magistrate, $315 damages for the failure of the county to provide him with an office.

The county contended that the magistrate used his own private office for his functions, and moreover he had not asked for an office, but merely for an allowance for rents. The town of Seaforth had already provided him with a place to hear cases as police magistrate of Seaforth.

The Divisional Court held that the statute was clear, that it was the county's duty to provide an office for him as police magistrate of the townships of McKillop and Tuckersmith.

Decline of German Force Matter of a Month or So

In the current issue of "Land and Water," Hilaire Belloc returns to a comprehensive analysis of the enemy's possible effective reserves and how long he can continue to keep his force in the field at its present strength. He arrives at this conclusion:

"If you weigh all the scales against the allies, you arrive, for the date when the enemy's effectives will decline as somewhere about the turn of the New York or very little later. Say the end of January at the very latest. More reasonable estimates, less violently weighing the scales against the chances of the allies, reduce that time to the course of December, while estimates which have very great authority behind them, but must be admitted to be at the hopeful end of the line, place the turn of affairs in the month of November itself."

Bellos thinks there is no doubt that the Germans hoped for peace before this hour would arrive and recalls the pretty definite statement that the Kaiser himself mentioned October as the date when the war would be over. He continues:

"Meanwhile, the enemy is throwing away men more lavishly than ever because his Higher Command has decided that a violent expenditure of energy in this crisis is better policy than husbanding his remaining reserves. In connection with this policy, he has also created a new diversion, largely political, in the Balkans with some 5 per cent. of his forces, and could at the most, were his success complete in that direction, slowly train and still more slowly equip some unknown number—perhaps half a million—of men drawn from the subjects of the Turkish Empire. While this experiment is being made in the south-east of Europe, he is being hammered continuously upon the western line; he is losing great masses of men (for the equivalent of five army corps have gone in the last three weeks, allowing a proportion of 1 in 5 casualties for the dead); he is failing in exceedingly expensive counter-offensive strokes, and on the East he is at last held.

"That is the situation as a whole, and the more steadily we bear it in mind and base our judgment upon it, the better for the nerves of the nation."

BOTHA'S TASK IS NOW TO CAPTURE GERMAN EAST AFRICAN COLONY

This and the Cameroons Are the Only Two Colonies Left to Germany in Africa—Botha Will Have Confidence of the People—War Will Result in Additions to Empire.

That the war was "carried into Africa" shortly after the declaration of hostilities in Europe means great additions to the British Empire. Only two German colonies in Africa remain under the German flag—the Cameroons which is now overrun by British-African forces, and German East Africa, which the Belgians are reported to be invading from across the boundary of the Belgian Congo, having defeated the German forces at the boundary on September 11th.

The British have also been engaged against the German East Africans at different times, and it is likely that a serious invasion of that territory will be made before long.

The recent election of General Louis Botha to the Presidency of the British South African Union, thus settling British sentiment definitely in the ascendant, will free the general's hands and give him the necessary confidence of support at home, to undertake the conquest of German East Africa. Up to date German East Africa remains about the last colonial possession under the German flag. It has been engaged chiefly since the war against the British forces to the north of it in British East Africa. General Louis Botha, having conquered German South-West Africa, and the other German colonies in Africa having fallen, may now be expected to advance against German East Africa from the south-west by the way Rhodesia.

As Large as Ontario.

German East Africa is a great territory situated between British East Africa and Portuguese East Africa, with the sea coast of 620 miles, its northern boundary extending across the great Lake Victoria Nyanza. Inland to the west and south it faces the Belgian Congo and Northern Rhodesia.

German East Africa has been since the war on the aggressive to the neighboring British colony of Northern Rhodesia, and has sent several expeditions across the border at different times. Of late it has acted more on the defensive.

The territory in question is about twice the size of European Germany, or about 400,000 square miles—about the same as the Province of Ontario including the newly annexed district of Patricia. It has a population of 8,000,000, of whom, however, only about 5,000 are white. Its inland boundary is largely formed by the large lakes, Victoria Nyanza, Kivu, Tanganyika, and Nyassa, which waterway system provides as admirable natural means of transit. In addition is the River Rubizi, but this water flows into British territory.

Two railways have been built to serve the commerce of the interior plateau competing with the Uganda railway in British East Africa. The colony has been well served by the great German steamship lines, and is possessed of four excellent ports, Lindi, Kilwa, Tanga, and Dar-es-Salam, the latter town being the capital.

Rich in Agricultural Resources.

The country is a rich one of varied agricultural resources, and was the most promising of all the German possessions in Africa. The country for the first zone back from the sea is comparatively low, and here the climate is tropical. Enormously rich tropical forests cover this section. On the plateau island the climate is more temperate and dry, being suitable for white settlement, and for agriculture and stock-raising. Large gold deposits are known to exist, as well as those of other material. Germany has spent large sums of money in the developments of the territory, and huge agricultural plantations have been established.

When war broke out, the Germans in East Africa enlisted 5,000 natives and 3,000 whites, recruited from reservists who had been sent to the colony by the sea at the outbreak of the war. The native troops consisted partly of local tribesmen, partly of warlike Sudanese.

The British force opposed to them in East Africa during the first three weeks of the war totalled at most 1,300 men, many of but doubtful fighting quality. Further recruits were raised from the white settlers and East Indian residents. Somali Scouts and a body of Arabs were also added to the British forces.

A British cruiser began hostilities in this section of the dark continent, by bombarding Dar-es-Salam, the capital of German East Africa, on August 14. The German ships in the harbor were dismantled, and the floating dock was sunk. On the same day, the British steamer Gwendolin, surprised the German steamer Von Wissmann on the eastern shore of Lake Nyassa, and took her crew prisoners. In the south-west fighting also began between the German forces and the North-East Rhodesians.

Indian Troops Arrived.

On September 3, Brigadier-General I. M. Stewart, assumed command in British East Africa, bringing with him the 29th Punjabs, a battalion of Imperial Service troops, a battery of Calcutta Volunteer Artillery, a battery of Maxim guns, and one mountain battery. The reinforcements arrived in time to save the famous Uganda railway, which parallels the northern boundary of German East Africa, at a distance of from only 50 to 100 miles. A German expedition against this railway lost its way by depending on British maps after reaching within 20 miles of the line. The German maps had guided them this far, but did not cover the last intervening 20 miles to the railway. The expedition went eight miles out of its course, missed the water holes upon which all travel in this district depends, and was captured to a man. And all because of the deficient British map!

The German forces later crossed the boundary into British territory near the Victoria Nyanza, but were driven back. Seven other attacks on this frontier between German and British East Africa were made by the German forces during September, 1914, the most serious of which was directed against Mombasa, on the coast, at the end of the Uganda Railway. Six hundred Germans with six machine guns advanced by land, and the warship Koenigsberg was sent to bombard the town from the sea. British warships arrived and spoiled this part of the plan, however, while the land forces were held up by the Arab company under Captain Wavell, and some King's African Rifles from Juhaland, being colored troops. A native color-sergeant took command of the whole force when the white officers were all disabled, and eventually reinforcements arrived, and the German invaders were beaten back.

Teems With Big Guns.

The country is chiefly a savage wilderness, teeming with lion and rhinoserous, being probably the finest big game hunting grounds in the world to-day. The fighting was largely of the kind familiar to this continent a century ago, the tactics being made up as much of bush craft as of military strategy. Picket duty was the more exciting at night encampments inasmuch as lions roared on all sides and the wild African beasts of various kinds could be heard close by. It was through this part of Africa that Colonel Roosevelt, Winston Churchill, and other big game hunters made trips of recent years, and several volumes describing the wild life of the East African plateau have been published of recent years. Part of the British territory has been set out as a big game reserve and an elephant sanctuary.

German East Africa still holds out, and it will be the task of General Botha, the enemy of Britain in the Boer War, to lead the British South African and East African forces.

British policy has become dominant, and it may be that the South African troops will be set to the task of conquering German East Africa, which will add this great German colony to the British Empire. One hundred years from now in all probability, these campaigns in Africa will occupy a place in African history such as in Canada now filled by the War of 1812.

Wanted His Own Physician

Request of Charles Brewer Who is Awaiting Trial on Charge of Attempted Murder, Will Be Granted

Charles Brewer, 59 Alfred street, who is confined in the County Gaol, awaiting trial on a charge of attempted murder, is still under the care of a physician. His transition from the hospital, where he was undergoing treatment for injuries, self-inflicted in an attempt to end his life, following an assault on his wife, to the County Gaol, will, it is said, occasion no ill effects, although at present, accused is in a very weak condition. This is due to a prolonged stay in bed, preceded by loss of blood. When in court yesterday, Brewer was hardly able to stand up. He will likely be in a condition to appear for trial on Tuesday next. He requested that his physician, Dr. C. H. Amys, be allowed to attend him at the County Gaol. This was acceded to.

Brewer has been a hard working man. Those who are in a position to know, claim that the condition of mind that led up to the assault on his wife, was not the result of drink, as many are inclined to believe, but rather the result of certain conditions that the counsel for defence will probably reveal, when the case comes to trial.

Mr. G. N. Gordon is appearing for the accused.

WILD HOGS USED AS WATCH DOGS

When Caught Young, They can be Trained as Pets.

In some parts of Mexico the wild hogs, which the natives call jobalis, (hah-hah-lee), savage beasts in their natural state, are used as watch-dogs. If they are caught young and brought up with goats they will go out into the hills with the herd and fight off coyotes or other wild animals; if they are raised with chickens they will protect them, and round a ranch house at night they are useful as any dog.

Although fierce by nature they can be tamed until they follow their master round like a dog. The landlord of a hotel in one of the border towns even keeps one of the wild hogs as a playmate for his baby son.

The jabali is only first cousin, however, to the domestic pig. Swine are divided into two main branches. In one line is the farmer's pig, descended from the wild hog of Europe, and in the other is the jabali, which is really a peccary. But the jabali is quite "piggy" enough with his small, flexible snout, long mottled bristles, and long, sharp tusks.

An Easy Way to Increase Weight

Good Advice for Thin Folks.

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on drugging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods, rubbing on useless "flesh creams," or following some foolish physical culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

There is a preparation known to reliable druggists almost everywhere which seemingly embodies the missing elements needed by digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This modern treatment is called Sargol, and has been termed the greatest of flesh builders. Sargol aims through regenerative, reconstructive powers to coax the stomach and intestines to literally soak up the fattening elements of your food and pass them into the blood, where they are carried to the starved, broken down cells and tissues of your body. You can readily picture what result this amazing transformation should produce as with increased weight the cheeks fill out, hollows about neck shoulders and bust disappear, and from 10 to 20 pounds of solid, healthy flesh is added to the body. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient. All leading druggists in this vicinity have it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied, as per the guarantee found in every package.

NOTE.—Sargol is recommended only as a flesh builder and while excellent results in cases of nervous indigestion, etc., have been reported, care should be taken about using it unless a gain in weight is desired.

Cheese Board Reappoints Its Patriotic Committee

Trewern Factory in Smith Made Largest Contribution—Last Sale Was Held This Morning With Substantial Price Received—Some Factories Still Making.

Mr. James Cook bought the entire cheese offering this morning, 1928 boxes, at 16 5-16 cents. At the corresponding meeting a year ago the price was 14 11-16 cents, and in 1913 was 11 1-8.

It was really the last meeting of the year, the Board deciding to adjourn indefinitely and to meet again at the call of the secretary. Many of the factories ceased operations at the end of October, but some of them are making November cheese.

Keene	70
Warminster	85
Shearer	120
Selwyn	125
Vilhers	75
Warsaw	130
Westwood	165
Oakdale	95
Daisy D.	65
Pine Grove	53
Myrtle	130
Ormonde	140
Young's Point	55
Lang	123
Indian River	75
East Emily	75
Trewern	64
Norwood	150
Fleetwood	75
Killarney	50
	1928

Mr. Gillespie opened at 15 1-2. Mr. Cook offered the top price of 16 5-16.

Patriotic Committee.

Moved by Mr. Mann, seconded by Mr. Bullock, that the distribution of the Cheese Board's Patriotic Fund be left with the same committee as last year, composed of Mr. Duff, Mr. Switzer and Mr. Hawthorne, and that this committee have full power to act as they see fit.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the Bank of Montreal and the members of the press.

Moved by Mr. Coughlin, seconded by Mr. Mann that one pound a box be allowed off to the buyers for the cheese made in the last half of October.—Carried.

More Contributions.

Mr. Hawthorne reported the following additional contributions from factories to the Patriotic Fund:

Warminster factory	$67.00
Young's Point	49.04
Mount Pleasant	43.00
Trewern	85.18

Mount Pleasant did not sell on the Peterborough Board this year, but they arranged to give one day's make of cheese, and forwarded the cheque through Mr. Gillespie.

Trewern Factory.

Trewern's cheque is the most substantial donation received from the local factories. This factory is located on the 9th line of Smith. Mr. G. W. Mann is its secretary and salesman and Mr. John Chittick is the maker. Not one patron withheld milk on the day selected for the patriotic make, and Trewern, by the way, is not the largest factory on the board.

OFFICER HAS BEEN REMOVED

MILITARY GOVERNOR OF BRUSSELS HAS LOST POSITION

LONDON, November 3.—General Sauberzweig, the military governor of Brussels, has left that city and his successor, whose name has not yet been learned, has been appointed, according to a Rotterdam despatch to the Daily Telegraph, which says that Sauberzweig, who is a Prussian cavalry officer, succeeded General Von Kracewell about a month ago. His accession, the despatch adds, introduced a new note of severity, which culminated in the execution of Edith Cavell. He signed the death sentence and kept the matter a secret, which permitted of the execution before any appeal could succeed. His last proclamation threatened severe penalties for the concealment of arms.

"It is noteworthy," the correspondent further says, "that last week the Emperor made a tour of the principal towns in Belgium occupied by the Germans. His presence may be assumed to have resulted in the removal of General Sauberzweig."

"Bill" Hancock was for about fifteen years connected with professional lacrosse in the City of Toronto, and latterly a referee of both hockey and lacrosse all over the province. He came to Owen Sound about two years ago and has since been closely connected with the sport of this town. He it was that coached the local junior Northern League hockey team. This year he aided in coaching the local lacrosse team.

Ottawa, Nov. 2.—Because their officers were not considered properly qualified, two regiments en route to the front have been held up, according to the statement of the Minister of Militia to-day. These regiments will not be allowed to proceed until their officers are adjudged competent to lead them into action. They will have to perfect themselves in their knowledge of their duties or they will be replaced by others.

A number of new offers to raise regiments under the new system of local billeting, established by the Minister of Militia, have been received. It is understood that 24 new regiments will be raised in Western Ontario, including Toronto. Hon. Robt. Rogers stated to-day that at least 20 new regiments could be recruited in the West.

Raise Company in Dawson.

Commissioner Black, of the Yukon, who is in the East on leave of absence, was to-day given permission to raise a company of infantry in Dawson City 250 strong. PEOPLE WHO REMAINED IN BELGRADE WERE ONLY OLD WOMEN AND CHILDREN

Budapest, Nov. 2.—A description of the city of Belgrade is given in an article by Margarete Vezzi, a Hungarian correspondent. According to this account the shops are all guarded by sentries to prevent looting and two sentries are stationed before the King's palace, where a staff of officers is billeted. The small palace of the Crown Prince, the stairs of which have been blown away by a shell, is also occupied by five officers judging from the chalk inscription on the wall. The Russian Legation is in the heart of the ruins. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs as well as the Austrian and German Legations, are untouched. Only window panes were smashed by the fierce explosions.

An endless row of supply wagons continues. One line is proceeding through the ciety eastward, another row is proceeding in the opposite direction, and amid traffic small groups of Serbian prisoners are being escorted. There are among these numerous soldiers who were cut off from their comrades and were hiding among the ruins and trenches waiting for an opportunity to rejoin them. One of them was discovered on Kalimegdan almost buried in the earth, but supplied with foodstuffs for 14 days. A minute later two soldiers with fixed bayonets escorted a strange looking prisoner an old woman at least 70 years old, with hands securely tied. One of them said she climbed a telegraph pole as cleverly as a cat and cut wires before they had time to fire on her. She was murmuring as they passed. "I don't mind if they shoot me. I am old enough to die."

The outskirts of the town are totally destroyed. The Jewish district is a heap of ruins, with not a house in it. The people who remained are only old women and children. The younger women have all left with the men. Not even boys of twelve or thirteen years can be seen. Thy are also on the firing line.

London Air Raids a Just Reprisal, Berlin Says Severer Raids May Follow

BERLIN, Nov. 3.—All the evening papers print an identical article designed to explain to the German people the purpose of the air attacks on London and certain valuable results so far achieved. The appearance of the article at this time is considered particularly significant. The article reads:

"The object of the successful attacks of our marine airships on England's metropolis and its environs is military; the purpose is to destroy important military plants and render useless the transit facilities that serve for assembling troops, but, above all, to endanger London, as being the most important 'etappenlage' of the English [illegible] forces. That in so doing this warfare war brings with it the destruction or endangering of private property should excite Englishmen least of all, since they, by means of their hunger for war on Germany, purposely wiped out the boundary between measures directed against the military power and measures directly against the civil population.

"Since to-day not hundreds of thousands but millions of human beings in Germany must limit their consumption of food and make not inconsiderable sacrifices, we feel that the attacks of our airmen on England are a just reprisal, which make it possible for us to achieve results of military value, and at the same time to strike at England's economic life at its most vulnerable spot. That the last-named results are being achieved, according to the accounts of the English themselves, cannot be doubted.

"Just as the submarine war against England's coast makes itself felt not only through actual destruction but also in arousing fear, which again results in all manner of protective measures detrimental to economic life, so it is also with the air war. To get some idea of the fear which has seized such aggressive circles as The London Times one need only to consider the drastic measures which its marine correspondent proposes."

If Galliani, the ex-Military Governor of Paris, commanded in London, accordiig to this correspondent, all traffic on the streets and railways and the Thames would be stopped when danger was threatened. It is hard to tell whether this suggestion is made merely to cause the British Government further difficulties in connection with the air war, but if carried out, it would result, says the correspondent, "in incalculable damage to London's and, therefore, England's economic life, and the attacks of our airships thereby would have achieved a success of the greatest importance."

"The drastic measures proposed, without regard to the economic effects," the writer continues, "show most clearly what importance the English themselves attach to the Zeppelin attacks. The British Government finds itself in a painful position. We can note with satisfaction that here, too, the effects of our military operations on English economic life have led to political differences of opinion of the most serious nature, calculated still further to undermine unity of the British Government."

After discussing at length the further economic burden caused by Zeppelin insurance, the article in conclusion sums up:

"The air war has brought to the English difficulties of all kinds; first, the material loss itself against which there is as yet no protection; secondly: the economic burden."

The suggestion is made here that this perhaps historic anonymous article may mark the beginning of a new period of activity in the air war on England.

Sir John French Has Nearly One Million Men Under Command

British Casualties in France and Flanders Have Reached a Total of 377,000—Some Facts in Premier Asquith's Speech

Sir John French now has nearly one million men under his command on the western front. British casualties in France and Flanders have reached a total of 377,000. The Germans have not made a net gain of a foot of ground since April.

The Cabinet as a whole accepts the responsibility for the failure of the Dardanelles operations. The first attack was made after full investigation and consultation with naval experts, and was fully sanctioned, though some doubt existed in the mind of Lord Fisher.

At present the allies on Gallipoli are holding back 200,000 Turks. The Dardanelles situation now is receiving the Government's anxious consideration, not as an isolated thing, but as part of the larger strategical situation in the Balkans.

British submarines in the Sea of Marmora have sunk or damaged two battleships, five gunboats, one torpedo boat, eight transports and 197 supply ships.

The beginning of the Salonica expedition was a request from former Premier Venizelos of Greece, on Sept. 21 for France and Britain to supply 150,000 men on the express understanding that Greece would mobilize.

France and Britain are in full agreement to maintain the independence of Serbia, and are in accord as to the means of so doing, the plans having been ratified during the visit of Gen. Joffre to London.

The financial situation of Great Britain is serious, and the nation must be prepared to make far greater sacrifices than in the past.

Lord Derby's recruiting scheme is practically certain of success. The war, however, must be won, and rather than not [illegible] the Premier would not hesitate to make proposals to the House involving some sort of legal liability.

Confident of the ultimate triumph of the allies, the Premier will not shift the burden from his shoulders until satisfied he is unable to bear it. He will not surrender the task while he enjoys health and the confidence of the nation.

The Cabinet War Committee will consist of not fewer than three or more than five members, and will keep the Cabinet informed of all important decisions.

HOME MAN'S BODY AFTER ACCIDENT

AUTOMOBILISTS THROW VICTIM INTO STREAM AND COVER STAINS ON ROAD

BRIDGEWATER, Mass, November 3.—After an automobile had struck and killed William McFadden, a farm hand, its occupants dragged his body 20 feet and tossed it into a stream. Then the attempted to hide the stains in the road by covering them with the gravel. The police have found no trace of the automobile.

Calvin Pratt of Taunton, who was riding in his automobile an hour after the killing of McFadden saw stains in the dust and by following them, came to the body in the stream. Frank N. Paradise now a red automobile dart away after the man was killed, but did not know at the time the reason for his haste.

DETROIT SUSPICIOUS OF RAILWAY DEAL

Detectives Galore Watching Voters and Agents in Yesterday's Crisis.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 3.—With representatives of a national detective agency engaged by an organization known as the "Honest Election League" on duty in every voting precinct, and with at least $7,000 in rewards offered by various interests for the arrest and conviction of illegal voters, Detroit began voting in earnest yesterday on the Municipal Street Railway question. The polls were to be open until nine o'clock last night, and it was expected the vote would be the heaviest cast here in years. As the campaign, which has been the most bitter ever waged in this city, closed Monday night, charges of illegal and unfair tactics were being hurled back and forth between the factions for and against the street railway purchase plan. The proposition provides that the city shall immediately take over the city lines of the Detroit United Railway at a price to be fixed by the Circuit Judges of this county, and that the property shall be paid for out of the earnings of the system during a certain term of years.

The purchase plan has been supported by the city administration and the antis' charges that it is a "blank cheque" deal and an unbusinesslike arrangement.

FARMER DIES ON WAY HOME

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 3.—John H. McCreary, a farmer residing in the township near here, met death while driving home from this city by falling out of his buggy over the dashboard. His body, still warm, was found at midnight three miles from home. He had suffered concussion of the brain and partial dislocation of the neck. He was 62 years of age. Dr. Hill of Roslin, Coroner, is to hold an inquest this evening.

ORPHANAGE WAS BURNED

Over a Hundred Children at Mass Marched Out Safely.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 3.—Sylvan Heights Orphanage, a Roman Catholic institution, was ruined by fire yesterday. The one hundred and three children who made their home there were at mass in the south wing when fire was discovered behind a telephone booth in the second floor, and under the care of Mother Superior Aloysius all were marshaled and marched out to safety. Rev Father Dennis P. Reardon, who was conducting mass, completed his service before leaving the building.

The fire quickly spread, driven by a high wind to other parts of the large three storey building, and most of it was either destroyed or badly damaged.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

WILLARD MAKES $8,000 IN WILD WEST SHOWS

According to Jack Curley, the Promoter—Worst Week Was About $4,500—Champion Intends to Take a Holiday Before Meeting Moran.

"On or about November 1 Willard will sever his connections with the 101 Ranch Wild West Show. The show was kept out on the road five weeks longer than ever before, because Willard proved such a tremendous attraction for them. I feel that Willard was a godsend to the circus, and, on the other hand, I also feel that it was a life-saver for Willard. Never in the history of pugilism has a boxer drawn such a tremendous salary as Willard has with this circus.

"Jeffries in his palmiest days was well satisfied with $1,500 a week, and I think he was the highest salaried world's champion we ever had.

"Willard's worst week netted him three times that amount, and on several occasions he drew down close to $8,000 for a week's work.

"Regarding Willard's boxing, I just received a letter from Tom Jones telling me that immediately after the close of this season Willard will go home for a month's well-earned rest.

"Ever since he started training last November he had not had an idle day. He will go to Los Angeles to join his family for about four weeks, and will then go on a short trip, probably to Catalina Islands, until the holidays. He will spend them at home, after which he will be ready to return to work, and as quickly thereafter as possible accept offers for fights. Willard naturally prefers the long route, for he wants to make sure to leave no room for any arguments as to result. In other words, he hopes and sincerely expects to leave the ring after the referee counts out his opponent.

"Regarding the price, he has been offered $33,500 for his share from three different sources, one in or near New York and two in the South, promoters reserving the privilege of choosing for his opponent any white man before the public."

DOUBLE HEADER AT RIVERSIDE ON SATURDAY

There will be a double-header at Riverside Park on Saturday that should appeal to all the city's sport lovers. Arrangements have been completed for a Rugby game between the Collegiate Institute and the old boys of that institution to be called at 2:15 o'clock. The Rugby game will be followed by the final soccer game in the series between the Normal School and the team representing the 93rd Battalion. The Band of the 93rd will be in attendance, and will play a popular programme. The soldiers and students will be out in force, and it is expected that a big crowd will be on hand to see a splendid afternoon's sport.

FIX PROFIT ON POTATOES.

German Authorities Set the Price for Growers and Retailers.

BERLIN, Nov. 1. — The Government has made further regulations governing the sale of potatoes. It is provided that cultivators must sell at a figure between 275 and 305 pfennigs (from 69 to 76 cents) a hundred pounds.

Returning to England Because Pension is Not Sufficient For Living Conditions in Canada

Private G. N. Curtis, who was injured at Salisbury Plains, and returned to Peterborough early in the spring, is returning to England on Wednesday next, according to information received to-day which intimates that he is leaving Canada because of the fact that his $17 monthly pension is not sufficient to maintain himself and his wife. Private Curtis was incapacitated at last winter's camp, kicked by a horse at Valcartier and laid up with rheumatism in England. When his pension came into effect his allowance from the Patriotic Fund ceased. The Hon. J. H. Lougheed recently intimated that plans were under way for the augmenting of the pensions. Mr. Curtis recently wrote to Premier Borden giving the circumstances of his case and received in a reply a note that his letter had been handed to Hon. H. B. Ames, head of the Patriotic Fund. However, as this allowance had already been cut off there was nothing to hope for from that direction. With a pension of $40 a month, Private Curtis could have managed, otherwise it is understood that he felt he would be better off with relatives in England. The Patriotic Fund, it was stated, offered to provide part of the fare to England.

In connection with this matter there are a number of gentlemen who regard it as a discreditable precedent. The proposal to augment the pensions, they say, indicates that the country is dissatisfied with them, and while the generous motives that prompt their increase is recognized here is, at least, one returned soldier who would prefer to remain in Canada, but who finds it necessary to return to England on account of the slender proportions of the present pension allowance.

It was none of Mr. Curtis' fault that he was rendered unfit before the big engagements, and it is felt that he deserves all the consideration that should be extended to the soldiers.

Nish May Fall But Soldiers Will Escape To The Mountains

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The Austro-Germans and Bulgarians continue their advance in Serbia, and are daily drawing closer to Nish, making the position of the Serbian army in the north more precarious. It is believed here, however, that the Serbians will be able to withdraw to the mountains and resist the invaders until the assistance which the Entente allies have promised draws some of the pressure from them. The British and French troops which were landed at Salonica already are doing this in the south, and news of a Russian contingent, which is variously reported as having landed at Varna or to be approaching Bulgaria through Roumania, is anxiously awaited.

Cakak, the latest temporary capital of Serbia and of military importance as a railway point, has been captured by the Austro-German troops, according to an official statement issued in Berlin to-day. The town is 30 miles south-west of Kragujevac. The Serbian capital has been moved to Mitrovitza.

A despatch from Rome says that 50,000 British and French troops are advancing from Krivolak, and are outflanking the Bulgarians. The Bulgarian losses at Veles (Kuprili) are estimated in the Rome despatch as exceeding 25,000 men.

Huge Enemy Losses.

Repulse of the Austro-German forces in the centre of the northern line with great losses is reported in an official Serbian communication. It follows:

"On Oct. 29, on the north-western front the enemy attacked in force on the right bank of the Penitza, and with less strength on the right bank of the Morava.

"In the centre, the enemy was thrown back with great losses, after having approached within 600 metres of the Serbian positions. On the remainder of the front there were severe engagements.

"On the eastern (Bulgarian) front there was no important change south of the Morava. Toward Pirot fighting is continuous, as is also the case to the west of Zajecar."

The Morning Post's Rome correspondent says: "I am informed Austro-German engineers, aided by Turks, are arming Albanian bands against Serbo-Montenegrins, and Essad Pasha to facilitate Bulgaria's descent to Durazzo."

England Deports An Irish-American

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Michael J. O'Connor, a citizen of New York, reputed to be engaged in Sinn Fein activities, has been prevented by the British authorities from landing from the American liner St. Louis, on which he arrived at Liverpool on Sunday. The authorities ordered that he be returned to America, and he will go to-morrow or later in the week.

Word to this effect was communicated to-day to the American Embassy, which was informed that O'Connor's presence in England was not desired. The Embassy was not supplied with intimate details. It is understood that suspicion that a traveler is undesirable is sufficient under the Defense of the Realm act to justify refusal to admit him.

Investigation by the New York Times showed that the official attitude toward O'Connor was the outcome of information from America that in coming here he intended to stir up agitation regarded by the authorities here as "inimical" O'Connor, it is believed, expected to go to Ireland. He had an American passport with him and insisted on his right to land. It is understood that, courteously but firmly, he was told it was impossible.

It is learned that on nearly every steamer touching England from New York in the last few months one or two American citizens about whom some word has come to the British Government have had their passports taken by the alien officials so that inquiry could be made concerning their visits to Great Britain. In nearly every instance these Americans had German names. They had been allowed to proceed to London, and have had unhindered freedom so long as they were within twenty-four hours' call of the Scotland Yard officials. All that was expected of them by the police was to explain the reasons for their visits here. In almost every instance satisfactory explanations have been given, so that the passports have been returned and the travelers allowed to go.

It was explained to The New York Times to-day that there was no reflection in this activity upon the authenticity of the passports, but that it was simply a precaution taken by the authorities when word had been received regarding a passenger.

In each case the American Embassy has taken pains to investigate when informed by the authorities that a passenger's passport has been held up, and without exception the embassy has been satisfied with the proceedings initiated. Out of all the cases of investigation of American passports by the authorities since the beginning of the war, it was stated to-day, only two had turned out to be fraudulent. Both of these passports were held by Germans, masquerading as Americans, and both individuals were detained by the officials.

Michael J. O'Connor, who now resides in the Bronx, has lived in New York for twenty-one years. He is well known as a prominent member of the Clan-na-Gael and other Irish societies, and is strongly anti-British in his views. Before sailing for Liverpool on the St. Louis he attended two or three Irish meetings in New York and made pro-German speeches.

Word was sent to the Foreign Office in London that O'Connor had sailed, and that he was a political enemy of Great Britain.

O'Connor has conducted saloons in upper Broadway and Lenox Avenue for ten years. He visited Ireland in the summer of 1915, and on his return to New York he told the ship news reporters that he had purchased his native village in County Leitrim and had reduced the rent of all the tenants.

Friends of O'Connor said yesterday that he had been a resident of the United States since his youth and that he was a naturalized citizen. Several years ago, they asserted, he purchased a tract of timber land in Ireland, and he went abroad on the St. Louis to negotiate with the British Government for a sale of the timber. They knew of no reason why permission to land should be refused to him.

TRIAL OF DORLIN NOT TILL FEBRUARY

Names of ex-Ministers on Docket of Criminal Assizes.

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov 3.—The names of Sir Redmond Roblin, Hon. Dr. Montague, George R. Caldwell, and Jas. H. Howden, appear on the docket of the Criminal Assizes opening here, but the trials of the charges against them of conspiracy to defraud the Province, will be put over to the February assizes. The cases will be called some time during the week and defence will ask for an adjournment, on the ground that they are not ready for trial. The Crown will not oppose the application and proceedings are expected to be purely formal, concluding with the renewal of bail. Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, of Toronto, will not be present with the defense counsel. Crown Counsel have no word as to the reported intention of the defense to ask for a commission to take the evidence of Dr. R. M. Simpson in France. The preliminary hearing of further charges against Roblin, Howden and Montague is not expected to be taken up until the Crown lawyers are released from attendance on the Kelly extradition hearing in Chicago, which proceeds to-day.

Wounded Back From Germany Tell of Conditions

TILBURY DOCKS, Oct. 30.—"England very good. Me very glad fight for England. Leg bad. Germany—rotten."

The last words he gave with due English emphasis. He was a Sikh, and he sat in the ambulance train that left here this afternoon, smiling benignly at his comrades, and very greatly interested in two pretty girls who offered him tea and sandwiches and cigarettes.

He spoke very little English, but he sat there perfectly happy, looking very venerable and stately with his white turban and massive beard. He was one of the party of British soldiers who, too much disabled ever to fight again, have been sent home from Germany in exchange for German prisoners in this country.

Opposite him were two smiling Ghurkas, whose only knowledge of English consisted in some quaint Army slang taught them by their merry fellow soldiers. But, through an interpreter, they insisted that to see London, "the mighty mother of the Empire," was sufficient reward for the hardships endured in German camps.

One section of the train was devoted to stretcher cases. Here men were lying too tired to speak, but smiling gratefully for some trivial service performed for their comfort. Further on the bonny-faced boy, full of humor and merriment, addressed a crowd of dock laborers who pressed against the outside of the window.

Black Bread.

"See that?" he queried, as he held out a piece of black bread. "Talk about the price of bread in England! How would you like that for your chief meal? Jolly good thing we've got flat teeth. What do the boys in Germany say? Well"—looking carefully round—"you here are doing Government jobs, I suppose. The boys say that they don't mind putting up with all the beastly conditions out there if only you at home will help to win the war. Say, how's this for a souvenir? And he tossed the bit of black bread to the eagerly listening crowd, who fought for fragments to take home as war relics.

Interpreter's Adventures.

Private Maxwell, who happens to speak German frequently, was requisitioned as interpreter. He protested so emphatically and colloquially against the treatment of his comrades that he was imprisoned. Later he wrote a postcard home asking for food and describing the diet as insufficient.

Private L. C. Higgins, R.A.M.C., who had been in several camps, believes that Gottingen is the best. But even here, the soup was like "potato" water, and in the cheese a certain liveliness prevailed.

"Without the parcel from home it would have been unendurable," he went on. "Two men I knew died of consumption, probably due to lack of food, for they, poor chaps, had no parcels."

RUSSIAN WAR ITEMS.

British Submarine Cut Down German Supplies of Shells.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—"The slackening of the German thrust at Riga is attributed by the Retch to an insufficiency of shells, owing to the activities of allied submarine in the Baltic," a Reuter dispatch from Petrograd states.

"Parties of Bulgarian deserters who have arrived in Petrograd asked to be enlisted in the Russian Army, provided they were not required to fight their compatriots.

"Vigorous measures have been taken to combat the propagation of Germanophilism by many persons who recently have acquired citizenship. Sixty such persons already have been sent to the Government of Irkutsk for a term of years.

"Petrograd and Moscow banks have agreed to participate to the extent of 600,000,000 rubles in the Russian 1,000,000,000-ruble loan."

$4,500,000 TO BECOME RAT PROOF

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 3.—More than $4,500,000 has been expended in the past year in an effort to make New Orleans rat roof and prevent the reappearance of the bubonic plague, according to an announcement made by Dr. R. H. Creed, of the United States public health service, in charge of the work. Seventy-four thousand five hundred and twenty six buildings have been made rat proof; about 7,000 not considered worth repairing by the owners, have been demolished and work is now progressing on 30,301 others. Approximately 87,000 buildings still are to be made rat proof.

Citizens of New Orleans have expended approximately $3,861,000 on their property, while the Federal, state and city governments have spent more than $900,000 in the campaign.

Grand Valley Man Arrested After Shooting Brother-in-law

GRAND VALLEY, Nov. 3.—Harry Strutt, a well known resident of this village, was murdered yesterday afternoon in his house. Late last evening his brother-in-law, Thomas Duckworth, was arrested by County Constable John Brown on a charge of committing the crime. A peculiar feature of the case is that Duckworth is alleged to have traded the gun with which the shooting was committed for a horse and sulky, which he used to drive to a neighbouring farmer, where he engaged to do some plowing. Duckworth was apprehended while engaged in this occupation by Constable Brown. Last evening an inquest into the death of the murdered man was opened by Coroner M. W. Berwick in the Town Hall. Duckworth was present. The murder of Strutt appears to have been the result of a long-standing family feud. The dead man resided on the outskirts of Grand Valley with his girl wife, whom he married when only 14 years of age, and one child. In the same house were also living eleven other people, also relations—Thomas Duckworth, the accused, his wife and two children; Mrs. Pell, a sister of Strutt, and three children; Geo. Strutt, a brother, and Hamilton Duckworth, a brother of the accused. The murder occurred shortly after two o'clock. According to the stories told by the witnesses of the crime, Duckworth met Strutt shortly after one o'clock in the horse stable. The two had some words over family differences, and Strutt then walked towards the house. A few minutes later Duckworth followed him. Meanwhile Strutt had sought out his wife, and they were in their room on the first storey of the house talking. The noise made by Duckworth in climbing the stairs and his loud profanity attracted their attention. His actions also aroused the curiosity of his brother Hamilton and his wife, and they rushed into the hall to see what was the matter.

As Strutt ran to the top of the stairs, Hamilton Duckworth saw his brother dray a gun from behind his back and fired point blank at Strutt. The latter pitched forward and fell head foremost to the bottom of the stairs. Mrs. Strutt rushed forward and wrenched the gun from her brother's hand, but the latter seized the weapon again, and calling to his wife to follow him, he left the house. Panic-stricken, Mrs. Strutt proceeded to a neighbour's, and the police were notified.

Dr. S. R. Campbell was called in, but when he arrived he found that the man had been instantly killed. The course of the bullet showed that it had entered the left arm, above the elbow, and passing through had penetrated the chest and lodged just above the heart.

The stories of other witnesses showed that after the fatality Duckworth, accompanied by his wife and wamily, went to a neighbour, Mrs. Geo. Smith, and asked the latter to look after his wife and family, giving as the reason the fact that the landlord had evicted them from their home for non-payment of rent. Mrs. Smith sympathizing with the family in their distress took them into her house.

BOMB PLOT CASE MOVES SWIFTLY

Officials Say They Have Strong Case Against Alleged German Conspirators.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3. — John C. Knox, assistant United States District Attorney, had a conference with William J. Flynn, chief of the Secret Service, on the alleged conspiracy of Lieutenant Robert Fay and four associates to blow up steamships carrying munitions to the Allies.

Swift action probably will follow when the attorney for Fay, Patrick J. McDonald may apply for a writ of habeas corpus to have the man released from the Tombs. If such a move is made little opposition will be made by the government officials, they being perfectly satisfied that they at present have a strong case. Walter K. Scholz, Fay's brother-in-law, is in the Tombs prison, and he will stand by the story that he has told of the movements and intentions of Fay. Scholz maintained the day of his arrest and subsequently that he and Fay were experienced with mines which they intended to sell to any government that would pay them a sufficient price. Scholz and Fay got out of Germany on a ruse, and that he came here because to have remained in Germany to perfect his inventions would have meant to give the patents to his government. Fay has said from the first that he intented blowing up the munitions carrying steamships, but he absolved the German government's representatives here of any knowledge of the alleged conspiracy.

Paul Daeche is still in jail in Jersey City. His attorney, August Zeigner, will have a talk with Mr. Knox this morning. It is believed Mr. Zeigner will consent to Daeche being brought over to New York city with the rest of the prisoners, if Mr. Knox will consent to a reduction of the bail. Daeche and all the rest are held in $25,000 bail.

The examination of the four held in this city is set for Thursday, but it is the general impression that H. Snowden Marshall, federal District Attorney, will go before the Grand Jury on Wednesday and present the whole matter, obtaining indictments and thus prevent the examination.

MAY POSTPONE CANADIAN DIVORCES

British Precedent, However, May not Apply in Major Gault's Case.

OTTAWA, Nov. 3.—The decision of Justice Sir Henry Burgrave Dean in the British Divorce Court refusing to grant leave to serve a divorce petition upon an officer in the fighting line, is of interest to the Canadian Parliament, and may serve as a precedant for a similar stand here. There are two officers at the front involved in divorce applications which have been made.

One is an application from a Winnipeg woman for a divorce from her husband who is an officer in the Second Division. This officer has already written to the Senate Divorce Committee asking that the case be not proceeded with until the war is over, naively adding that a divorce may not then be required. In view of the British precedent it is almost certain the Senate Committee will accede to his request and will refuse to bring him from the front. They will let the case stand over until the end of the war.

The other application, that of Major Hamilton Gault, founder of the Princess Pats Regiment, is on a little different basis, as in this case Major Gault is the applicant. He will presumably return from the front of his own accord on leave to press his case. Otherwise the case would likely be dropped or held over

MASKED MEN HANG PRISONER TO TREE

COLUMBIA, Miss., Nov 3.—Jack Hughes, 30 years old, foreman of a lumber plant, was taken from the county jail here by a party of masked men and hanged to a tree a short distance outside the city limits. Hughes was under arrest in connection with the murder of Larue Holloway, a Columbia youth who was killed in a lumber camp near here on the night of October 21.

Otho Fortenberry, jailer, was found several hours later, bound to his bed. He said he had been awakened about 1 o'clock by three masked men who took away his keys and after tying him, entered Hughes' cell and led the prisoner away.

MOVEMENTS ON WESTERN FRONT

To understand the October operations in the West it is necessary to keep all the possibilities in mind, the expulsion of the Germans from France, unlikely but possible, the reconquest of Lens and possibly of Lille, the definite defeat of German operations about Rheims, in the Argonne and north, south and east of Verdun. The attack was made on the ends, because a frontal attack would not imperil German communications and the German center, from the Oise to Berry-au-Bac, behind the Aisne, was as impregnable as the Russian lines behind the Bzura and the Rawka had proven in the fall and winter of last year.

Now it is necessary to say, in summing up the larger aspects of the western campaign, that up to the present moment the Allies have achieved no one of their objectives. The maximum possibility, the piercing of the lines in such fashion as to compel a German retirement, has never yet been near. This is what the Germans mean when they talk about the Allied failure, and they are wholly justified. It is equally true that none of the local possibilities have yet been realized, but it is also true that certain local gains, if permanently held, may insure the ultimate realization of the Allied aim to retake Lens, relieve Rheims, and end the Argonne menace.—From "A Month of Battles," by Frank H. Simonds, in the American Review of Reviews for November.

Countless millions are going up in powder smoke. According to an official report of the French War Office, the French artillery fired nearly 300,000 shells against the German positions near Arras in one day. This is nearly as many as the total number fired by German field artillery during the entire Franco-German War. The day in question was frightfully expensive for the French, as the attempt to blast a way through the German lines failed, despite an expenditure of shells which represented a value of $1,875,000. In 1870-71 no German battery in any battle field fired more than 200 shots per gun. Even in the Manchurian campaign the number of shots fired by many batteries did not exceed $4.00 per gun. In 1870-71 the German artillery fired about 817,000 shots, including 470,000 fired at French fortresses, and 338,000 in the field. One-tenth of the latter were fired in the battle of St. Privat alone. In the Russo-Japanese War, 956,000 artillery shots were fired, the largest portion of them in field operations.

Artillery statistics of the present war are, of course, still inconclusive. The German War Office reported, under date of March 10, from the western theatre, that the Allies had fired more than 100,000 shells within 24 hours, against one front of only five miles wide. This was nearly three times the number fired by the German artillery at St. Privat, against a front twice as wide, or in other words, six times as many shells per yard of front as at St. Privat, which was one of the hottest engagements of the 1870-71 campaign.

MODERN DELILAH BETRAYS HIGHLANDER

Prof. J. H. Morgan, late Home Office Commissioner with the British Expeditionary Force, in his "Leaves from a Field Note-Book," published in the Nineteenth Century, tells the story of a Scottish soldier who was shamefully treated by the Germans. The incident is alleged to have happened during the German occupation of Coulommiers.

"A certain straggler from our Army, a Highlander, tarried in amorous dalliance and was betrayed by his enchantress to the Huns, who, having deprived him of everything but his kilt, led him mounted upon a horse in Bacchanalian procession round the town. As to what became of him afterwards nothing was known, but the worst was suspected. The Huns have a short way and bloody with British stragglers and despatch riders and patrols, and I fear that the poor lad expiated his weakness with a cruel death."

Prof Morgan describes the vastly different behaviour of our troops and the readiness of our Tommies to play the part of mother's help in the French villages One of the most engaging sights he saw was a troop of our cavalrymen riding through Armentieres leading a string of remounts, each remount with a laughing child on its back.

"But it may well happen that in spite of babies, and baths, and brass bands, and footballs, and boxing gloves, and playing marbles (the General in command of one of our divisions told me he had seen six Argyll and Sutherland sergeants playing marbles with shrapnel bullets in some support trenches), the men got bored. Men may become 'stale' or get on each other's nerves. When a company commander sees signs of this he has one very potent prescription: he prescribes a good stiff route march. It has never been known to fail. Many a time in the winter months when on visiting Divisional Headquarters did I, in the shameful luxury of my car, come across a battalion slogging along ruddy and cheerful in the mud, and singing with almost reproachful unction, 'Last night I saw you, I saw you naughty boy!'"

Germans Withdraw From Every Front For Serbian Invasion

Allies May Save The Serbian Army Now Held In a Trap Near Nish

London Believes Forces Menaced Austro-Germans and Bulgars May Escape to Mountains and Resist Until Invaders Are Drawn Off By Pressure Elsewhere.

AMSTERDAM, via London, Nov. 4.—A new Anglo-French expedition to the Balkans was announced by the Berlin Tageblatt. This newspaper publishes a telegram from Sofia stating that British and French transport ships, with troops, have appeared off Kavala, Greece.

Kavala is on the north coast of the Aegean Sea, in Greece, about twenty miles west of the Bulgarian border. It is eighty miles northeast of the Greek port of Salonika, where the first detachments of British and French troops were landed for the Serbian campaign.

Kavala is the nearest Greek port to the Gallipoli Peninsula, and might be selected as the landing place in case French and British troops were withdrawn from the peninsula for service against Bulgaria. A Berlin despatch said troops now on the Serbian front, brought in by way of Salonika, had been sent from the peninsula.

A few miles north from Kavala is the railroad which runs from Salonika to the Bulgarian port of Dedeaghatch.

WILL WIN ROUMANIA'S AID.

MILAN, via Paris, Nov. 4.—"Two weeks' of Bulgarian action in Serbia has brought about a change in Roumanian public opinion which sixteen months of interventionist propaganda failed to do," Mr. Filipesco, leader of the Roumanian conservatives, is said by the Bucharest correspondent of the Corriere Della Sera to have declared in an interview.

"The Bulgarians' conduct," continued Mr. Filipesco, "has shown our people the danger which threatens them. Notwithstanding material difficulties the sentiment which caused interventionist manifestations is an eloquent expression of the will of the country, which does not want to allow itself to be stifled by Bulgarians and Hungarians."

A liberty party leader who was interviewed is credited with having declared that Premier Bratiano would be happy to enlarge Roumania's boundaries, but wished to be certain he was not embarking upon a crazy adventure and to be sure that he had the unanimous support of all sections of the country.

The Corriere Della Sera's correspondent expresses the belief that rapid and successful action by the Allies in the Balkans cannot fail to bring about the entry of Roumania into the war on their side.

ARM BANDS OF ALBANIANS.

ROME, via Paris, Nov. 4.—Austria-Hungary, declares the Messagero, is arming Albanian bands with a view to harrying the rear of the Serbian army and assisting the Bulgarian forces to reach the Adriatic.

The Austrian effort, the newspaper asserts, is being hampered by the attitude of Essad Pasha, Provisional President of Albania, who is friendly to the Serbians and is at present in control in Central Albania.

Chemical Jams Creams, Coffee Used in Germany

Something instructive regarding the condition of things in Germany may always be learned by a study of the advertisements in a widely circulated newspaper like the "Berliner Tageblatt." Let us take the advertisements as we meet them. A wholesale dealer in Frankfurt-am-Main wants large consignments of wooden food tubs. He will pay cash for immediate delivery. The presumption is that the leather tubs are growing scarce.

One is surprised at the number of substitutes (Ersatz) offered for sale. Artificial jam and marmalade are frequently advertised. A "chemical factory" in Dresden offers to supply 15 tons of the stuff every week, and seeks travellers to push it. We are not told what artificial jam. A substitute for "whipped cream" is advertised by another chemical factory in Berlin. The sale of the real cream is forbidden, and the enterprising chemist tells us that his goods have been tried in one of the largest restaurants in Berlin with brilliant success. He tells us there is in this cream, milk, not butter in the proportion to be decided by our natural products. The manufacture of it is surprisingly simple and much cheaper than cream. He is doing a roaring business, he says, in restaurants and restaurant and cafe trade.

Condensed milk is commonly sold as a substitute for real cream. One dealer advertises 50 tins of it, at slightly less and couched a letter which enable him to offer us 7½ pound Gouda cheese, we are told, is excellent for working people and the poorer classes generally, and is in great demand. We have a substitute for oil for polishing oak floors. It is not oil at all, but produces a high polish. The same dealer advertises substitutes for chocolate and other household oils.

The price of advertisements of cheap substitutes for butter and lard is what Kaiser Wilhelm pokes fun at. There is no mischief in it. It is a pleasant pastime for the well-to-do and is the ordinary method of the best Munich beer. When poured out properly a beautiful white froth is the result. Some sold in quantities, and in public cafes and gardens, also for private consumption.

REPUBLICANS ARE IN STRENGTH

And Elihu Root, of New York is Considered Eliminated as a Candidate For Presidency

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Republican leaders here are jubilant. They insist that the draft back to their party, shown in the elections, is now so pronounced that control of the next Congress is certain. The White House refused to make any statement but it was said that as soon as complete revised returns are available one will probably be issued.

Woman Suffrage.

Defeated in New York by approximately 200,000; defeated in Pennsylvania by more than 160,000; defeated in Massachusetts by 130,000

Governors.

Maryland elected a Democrat, E. C. Harrison, by 2,000. Kentucky elected a Democrat, A. O. Stanley, by 13,000. Massachusetts elected a Republican, Samuel McCall, by 55,000. Mississippi elected a Democrat, Theo. G. Bilbo.

Constitutional Issues.

Congressmen.

Legislatures.

Massachusetts—Republican
New York—Republican
New Jersey—Republican
Maryland—Democratic.
Mississippi—Democratic.
Kentucky—Democratic.

In New York the Republicans retained their control of the lower house of the Legislature, although they lost one assemblyman. They also elected a majority of the members in the cities of the state. The Republicans of Massachusetts ousted a Democratic governor and retain control of the Legislature. In New Jersey the Republicans gained two state senators and two members of the Legislature.

Blow to Elihu Root.

The defeat of the constitution had extraordinary significance because of its effect upon the future of Senator Elihu Root. Democratic leaders expressed the belief that the overwhelming defeat of the constitution means that Mr. Root's plan to nominate Justice Hughes for President by the Republican convention will be opposed by Republicans in the state who are loyal to the memory of Theodore Roosevelt.

The recall vote against Mayor Curley of Boston failed. Returns to-day was: Yes 47,333, No 35,566.

Ohio voters rejected the prohibition amendment by a majority of about 60,000. A year ago the "wet" majority was 54,000.

In Massachusetts Legislature elections, Wm. S. Shaw, prohibitionist, polled nearly 20,000 votes, and thereby raised his party to the legal standard required in the state. Nelson B. Clark, the Progressive, received about 8,500 votes. The Progressives lost their standing as a party. Amalgamation of Republicans with the liquor interests is blamed to-day by some Democrats as contributing to the governor's defeat.

Passed Vote of Want of Confidence In Zaimis Cabinet

Premier Zaimis Has Been the Strongest Force for Continued Greek Neutrality

ATHENS, Nov. 4.— The Greek parliament to-day passed a vote of want of confidence in the Zaimis cabinet which means it will resign. Zaimis has been the strongest force for continued Greek neutrality. He succeeded Premier Venizelos because King Constantine deemed the latter too strongly pro-war in his views. Zaimis cabinet's overthrow presumably foreshadows Greece's entrance into the war on the Allies side.

SERBS HAVE SCORED TWO SUCCESSES IN LAST TWO DAYS

LONDON, Nov. 4.—The Serbains in the last two days scored two successes. The Bulgarian army marching from Pigot was forced to retreat, the Germans officially admitting the Serbians have extricated themselves from the net.

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

In the early stages kidney troubles are known by backache and urinary disorders. Later come dropsy, stone, rheumatic pains and perhaps diabetes. But don't wait for these. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you in a few hours. Their thorough action on the liver, kidneys and bowels will clear away the pains and the aches and make you well again.

THE PEACE TERMS OF GERMANY

ROME, Nov. 4.—Peace talks still on the air here, despite denials from the capitals of all the belligerent European countries.

To-day it is asserted that representatives of the Entente Powers will meet Prince Von Buelow, the Kaiser's ex-Chancellor, at Lucerne, to discuss preliminaries looking toward the termination of hostilities.

JAPAN FEELS CONFIDENT.

Believes Refusal to Make Separate Peace Strengthens Her Position.

TOKIO, Nov. 4.—Japan's adherence to the agreement among the great powers of the Entente not to conclude a separate peace is regarded here as strengthening the position of the nation.

Incidentally it has removed any fear that a German refusal to cede Tsing-tao would keep Japan in a state of war after peace has been restored in Europe. Japan expects to take part in the discussion of both European and Oriental questions. Premier Okuma has informed leading members of Parliament.

SWEDEN STILL NEUTRAL

No Clash with England Over Commercial Situation.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 4.—[illegible] ruthless ending of the Anglo-Swedish negotiations, begun last July to settle various commercial questions, is commented on generally by the newspapers here. They say the failure of the negotiations will not mean any Anglo-Swedish tension, and express the hope that loyalty and understanding of each other's demands will enable a continuance of mercantile connections between Sweden and Great Britain during the war.

"LID" IN NEWPORT PUT DOWN TIGHT

Drin': Departments in Clubs Closed and Sunday Fishing is Under the Ban

NEWPORT, R.I., Nov. 4.—"Blue Law Sunday" proved everything that was expected of it. The lid was not only put on but soldered to the kettle. The Newport reading room closed its bar for the first time in its history, the Casino Golf Club, Mantanomi Club, Moose Club and Petty Officers' Club were all closed right in the thick of parties, and at the Moose Club, which includes in its membership the Governor of Rhode Island, the Mayor and Aldermen of Newport, a roll-call was put on the front door.

Early the morning a policeman walked into the reading room in this home Avenue and demanded that the bar be closed. The demand was not necessary for the order was anticipated.

Necessities such as bread, milk, tobacco, newspapers and stationery were sold under licenses obtained from the Aldermen yesterday.

Lobster crabs for bait were not listed under necessities and anglers from exclusive towns who came by automobile for their usual Sunday fishing were disappointed. One man was arrested for trying to collect the Sunday night laundry baskets, but was released under promise to wait until tomorrow.

MISSING GIRL FOUND IN PITIABLE STATE

HER CLOTHES HAD BEEN BURNT TO PREVENT HER ESCAPE, TWO MEN ARRESTED

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Miss Lillian Benjamin, 15 years of age, disappeared from her home at No. 221 East 113th street last Wednesday and since then her parents mother has been hading the detectives in a search for her. A man who had spoken to her several times was followed to the house at No. 101 East street, Saturday night, and then the house was watched until last night when detectives entered.

In a room on the second floor they found Miss Benjamin in a pitiable condition. Most of her clothes had been taken from her, and she said that Joseph Stein, twenty-seven, who was with her at the time had stripped her and burned her clothes to prevent her escape. While the detectives were there Louis Fuchs, eighteen, of No. 220 East 105 street, entered with an outfit of clothing which he said he had obtained from his sister, and that he wished to aid Miss Benjamin.

Stein and Fuchs were held in $2500 bail each for a further examination on Thursday and Miss Benjamin was sent to the Harlem hospital, suffering from hysteria and weakness through starvation.

RUSSIANS TO CUT HIGH LIVING COST IN PETROGRAD

Ministry or Interior Will Issue Rules to Regulate Prices and Insure Supply

PETROGRAD, Nov. 3.—The Minister of the Interior has drafted special measures to combat the abnormal prices of foodstuffs in Petrograd. They will be carried into effect soon.

The main object is to insure the conveyance of foodstuffs to the capital in such abundance as to obviate the necessity of compelling purchasers to await their turn to buy small quantities.

The population of Petrograd will be classified in three groups—the military, professional and working classes. Special food stores for each class will be established. The Ministry probably will compel owners of factories to open food depots for the benefit of their employees. Small traders also will be encouraged to form unions for the joint purchase of products on a large scale.

All food freight arriving in Petrograd will be consigned to the Prefect, who will distribute it according to the various groups.

JAPAN'S EXPLOSIVES STOLEN

Many Arrests Made for Thefts—Press Suspects German Spies.

TOKIO, Nov. 3.—There have been many arrests recently for thefts of explosives from magazines, the thievery being variously attributed by the press to Chinese revolutionists and German spies, while even the rumor that it was the work of a secret Socialist association has been circulated.

The police have received a letter signed "Socialist Party" advising the abandonment of the investigation of the thefts. The Hochi Shimbun asserts that there is a widespread plot by German spies to destroy arsenals and interfere with the supply of munitions to the Entente Allies.

In view of the coronation season, the authorities are adopting extraordinary protective measures.

A ROYAL ANTIQUARIAN

QUEEN HELENA OF ITALY AN ENTHUSIASTIC EXCAVATOR.

Some Years Ago While the King Was Away Hunting She Amused Herself Recovering Ancient Remains and Has Undertaken Systematic Exploration of Settlement of the Earliest Latin Peoples.

About eight years ago the Queen of Italy, while her husband hunted the wild boars along the low, sandy coast, still almost entirely covered with wood, as it was in ancient times in the royal preserves of Castle Porziano, whiled the time away by excavating the remains of a Roman villa and made a wonderful discovery. The Queen found a statue which archaeologists identified as a fine replica of the famous discobolus, or discus thrower of Myron. The statue, which was broken, was pieced together very carefully, or, rather, reconstructed, and it is now in the National Museum of Rome.

Encouraged by the success of her first attempt at excavating the Queen became so greatly interested in archaeology that she decided to undertake a systematic exploration of one of the most important sights near Rome, namely, where the first inhabitants of Italy settled considerably more than 1,000 years before the birth of Christ.

The Latins appear to have been originally a Pelasgian tribe, who at a period long anterior to the foundation of Rome, descended into the narrow plain of the Tiber, expelled or subdued the original inhabitants and settled in the district known as Latium. The Latini formed a confederation or league consisting of thirty states. Although Rome was a Latin colony she became powerful enough in the reign of King Tullius Hostilius to make war against the Latin towns. After a war which lasted until 340 B. C. the Romans finally defeated the Latins, dissolved their league and made them subjects of Rome.

The cities of most of the Latin towns were gradually lost, the territory where they stood became a desert, and malaria drove away the inhabitants. A forest of bay trees (laurus), from which the primitive Latin city Laurentum probably derived its name, still existed under the empire and gave the place a name for salubrity. Many emperors had villas in the neighborhood, the extensive ruins of which are now marked by sand hills in the belt of sandy shore which stretches for a distance of over thirty miles from the mouth of the Tiber to the promontory of Anzium, the modern Anzio.

This vast area the Queen now intends to explore in a scientific manner in order to discover traces of the early Latin civilization, study the origin of the inhabitants and perhaps find monumental evidence of the arrival of Aeneas in Italy and his connection with the King Latinus. This self-imposed task of the Queen of Italy is of vast magnitude.

The Queen's work has up to the present been kept secret, and only a few well known professors of archaeology, like Lanciani, Pigorini and the late Prof Vaglieri, director of the excavations at Ostia, were invited to see the excavations.

Besides the villa where she found the statue in 1906 the Queen discovered remains of another villa which is supposed to have belonged to Pliny. The remains of this villa consist mainly in the substructions, but the discover is important, since it enabled the Queen to locate the site of a village, known as Vicus Augustanus Laurentium, which probably took its name from Augustus himself and which, according to Pliny, was near his villa.

The Queen, moreover, explored the site of the ancient Lavinium, consisting of a small hill, the original acropolis, which is occupied by the modern castle of Tor Paterno, and traces of the city walls in small blocks of the gray green tufa used in the earliest buildings of Rome as well as the streets. She discovered a large necropolis, where she found objects of the first iron age, including a sword of the Aegean type, which seems to confirm the traditions of Aeneas' visit to Italy.

BRONCHITIS
NEGLECTED COLD.

Bronchitis starts with a short, painful, dry cough, accompanied with rapid wheezing, and a feeling of oppression or tightness through the chest. At first the expectoration is a light color but as the trouble progresses the phlegm arising from the bronchial tubes becomes of a yellowish or greenish color, and is very often of a stringy nature.

Bronchitis is usually at its worst in the morning on account of the phlegm becoming lodged in the bronchial tubes during the night, and at very often takes some time coughing and gagging before you can get the throat clear of the phlegm.

When this happens you may be sure that if the bronchitis is not attended to immediately it will sooner or later develop into pneumonia, or some other more serious lung trouble.

The best remedy for to cure the cold is DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

Mrs. Roy Conner, Greenwood, Ont., writes "I must tell you what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. Whenever I got a cold I would be troubled with bronchitis, and sometimes I would almost choke to death. After taking two bottles of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup I was cured."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is 25c and 50c per bottle. See that you get the genuine.

HUGO'S WORKSHOP.

His Carpenter's Bench and the Shavings That Fell From It.

A graphic description of a visit to Victor Hugo in Guernsey and of his quaint home there is given by the late Sir William Butler in his autobiography:

"Of the many curious things to be seen in Hauteville House the master's sleeping room was the strangest. He had it built on the roof between two great blocks of chimneys. You ascended to his workshop bedroom by stairs which somewhat resembled a ladder. Quite half of the room was glass, and the view from it was magnificent. The isles of Jethou and Sark were in the middle distance, and beyond lay many a mile of the Norman coast. Alderney lay to the north, and beyond it one saw the glistening windows of the triple lighthouses on the Casquet rocks and still more to the right the high ridges overlooking Cherbourg. The bed was a small camp bedstead, with a table on one side of it and a small desk chest of drawers on the other, with pens, ink and paper always within reach.

"Near the bed stood a small stove, which he lighted himself every morning and on which he prepared his cafe au lait. Then work began at the large table which stood in the glass alcove a few feet from the foot of the bed. This work went on till it was time to dress and descend to dejeuner in the room used for that purpose on the ground floor. As the sheets of writing paper were finished they were numbered and dropped on the floor to be picked up, arranged and put away in the drawer desk at the end of the morning's labor. He called the writing table his 'carpenter's bench' and the leaves which fell from it his 'shavings.'

"It was at this table and in this airy attic that most of the great work of his later life was done. Here were written 'Les Miserables,' 'Les Travailleurs de la Mer' and many volumes of poetry."

Protestants In Rome.

The Protestants are to have a college right in the capital of the Roman Catholic church, namely, Rome. And not only is the college to be at the seat of the government of the Catholic church, but it is to be on the highest and most prominent part of the city, at the top of Monte Marie, that rises sheer 390 feet above the Via Trionfale, the road along which Julius Caesar passed on his triumphal procession. The contract for the land was signed on Jan. 24 last, and the building to be put up till be up to-date and thoroughly equipped along all lines. The project is being carried out by the Methodist Episcopal church.

Two of a Kind.

"Come, come," cried the brusque and hustling real estate man, "why do you pay rent when you might own a home?"

"I don't pay rent," replied the startling stranger.

"Then you own a home?"

"No."

"That's strange. May I ask your business?"

"I'm a real estate dealer."

A Bit of English Humor.

The boy entered the office as silently as possible, conscious of having taken a very long time to go a very short distance. The cashier eyed him sternly and demanded:

"Do you work here?"

"Yes," stammered the boy.

"Your name?"

"John Thompson."

The cashier gazed long and earnestly at the mystified youngster, then remarked: "Ah! Thompson. Now I remember your face. It's such a long time since I saw you last."—Manchester Guardian.

Too Much Decoration.

Mr. Smith, out walking with his small son Bobby, met Mr. Brown, a fellow architect. They strolled about together. To keep their minds in working trim, the two men patronizingly picked out the good and bad points of the new buildings they passed.

Presently Bobby spied a spotted dog. "Look, father," he said excitedly; "look at that dog. I don't like it. There's too much work on it."—Everybody's.

Gave Him Variety.

"How is your rheumatism this morning?"

"Rather better."

"Has the pain disappeared, then?"

"No, but it has shifted to another place, and that gives me something of a rest."—Philadelphia Record.

If better were within better would come out.—German Proverb.

THE IDEAL JURYMAN.

His Age and Qualifications From an English Point of View.

There is a general agreement in London legal circles that the best jurymen are to be found among men sixty years of age. The opinion is that jurymen at that age show better judgment than younger men.

A leading London barrister, asked for his opinion, said: "I prefer men about fifty years of age. A defending barrister in, say, a criminal case which has certain sentimental elements will always welcome a young jury. He knows he can touch their emotions far more easily than he can those of men over fifty. Sentiment is very rare at fifty, and a man is cold and purely logical. The average man who has reached the age of fifty looks upon things from a materialistic point of view, and his judgment is therefore unaffected by sentiment.

"Education, save in certain civil cases, is no great asset to a juryman. The bricklayer or the mechanic has just as much knowledge of human nature and a sense of justice as the professor, and in many respects barristers and judges prefer the unlettered juryman to the man of culture, though in the case of the latter he is less susceptible to an emotional plea. The man with sound common sense, learned not from books, but from everyday life, is not so easily led either by judge or counsel as many suppose, and if you add the wisdom of years you get the ideal juryman."—Exchange.

FORCED THEM TO FIGHT.

How "Honor" Was Satisfied by a Compulsory Duel Hungary.

The code duello as insisted upon abroad is strikingly illustrated by the story of a happening at Budapest, Hungary. It appears that a lawyer, Babocsay by name, quarreled with his wife over a new hat. The wife called her brother, Lieutenant Hajdu, a military aviator, to her aid. The husband used words deemed insulting by Hajdu.

This coming to the hearing of Hajdu's superior officer, the latter ordered the lieutenant to fight a duel with Babocsay. Neither party wished to fight. Babocsay offered to apologize, and Hajdu was willing to accept the apology and thus end the affair.

But the military martinet was inexorable. The duel must be fought to satisfy the honor of the army. Consequently these two men, closely related, were compelled to attempt to try to take each other's life. They met, Babocsay, firing aimlessly, nevertheless sent a bullet through the lung of his adversary, and Lieutenant Hajdu died of his wound.

Upon hearing of the death of her brother at the hand of her husband in her quarrel Mme. Babocsay went insane, twice attempted suicide and was finally confined to an asylum.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Golfer's Great Catch.

A good story is told of the late William Mollison, the actor. Playing on a Tayside links, he was driving off at the seventh hole (which stands on a high embankment with a burn in front), and after the usual waggle, he let go. But the head of his driver was loose. It came off and went into the burn and left him with nothing but the shaft, with the whipping straightened out—one end attached to the shaft and the other to the head of the club. There he stood a la angler, then he was heard to shout to his caddie: "Get the landing net ready, you fool! I've got a ten pounder here!"—World of Golf.

Clear Coffee.

It is rather expensive to use an egg every morning to settle your coffee, as a great many do, and it is not clear and free from grounds if you boil it. Put your coffee in the coffeepot, pour boiling water in and set where it will be hot, but not boil. If you have your coffee ground fine you will get better flavor and it will be ready in about ten minutes. If ground coarse allow about twenty minutes.

The magistrate looked severly at the small, red-faced man who had been summoned before him, and who returned his gaze without flinching.

"So you kicked your landlord downstairs?" queried the magistrate. "Did you imagine that was within the right of a tenant?" OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Man Who Thought He Was In Love.

By LULU JOHNSON.

Copyrighted by Associated Literary Press.

The worst of it all was that Alice was happy. "That," Buick told himself, "was the cap of the climax."

Had she been decently miserable, as he had been ever since they had had their quarrel, the misery that loves company would have drawn them together, and once more the superb solitaire which Teddy Buick had bought with a glad heart and a half of his savings would have gleamed on Alice Ryder's finger.

By all precedent that very thing should have happened, instead of which Alice presently became engaged to Harvey Post, and the expression of gloom which had become habitual to Ted's face deepened to a scowl. He took to reading poetry in the long hours of the night, and even in his dreams he lamented his lost love.

Reproachfully he gazed upon Alice's radiant face when he could not avoid meeting her in Harvey's society. At such times the sky seemed overcast, no matter how brightly the sun shone, and Teddy hurried home to brood over his great grief, made the sharper by the very apparent happiness that had come to Alice.

The day that the wedding invitations were issued was Teddy's field day, and the sun was stealing through the half closed curtains when at last he threw off his clothes and flung himself upon his bed to gain a brief transition from wakeful to dreamy grief.

He did not go near his office, but late in the afternoon his mother persuaded him to take a walk, and he made for the fields, where he was least likely to be observed.

He plunged into the woods, which in that happy summer had been the favorite objective point of their walks together.

Now the foliage was sear and withered, flung to the ground as his own heart had been, and the giant trees lifted their naked arms to the autumnal winds in dumb supplication.

The place was thoroughly in harmony with his mood, and Ted flung himself upon a bank of moss to commune with his unhappy thoughts.

The woods represented his own life. Springtime, with its bursting buds and tender foliage, had marked the birth of love; then had come the summer of courtship, the rich fruition of promise under the ardent glow of the sun of love.

Ted skipped the harvest time, but now the woods were, like love, dead. The chill of winter was in the air and in the dull November clouds.

The fancy pleased him, and so occupied was he with his thoughts that he failed to hear the footfalls on the rustling leaves until the newcomer hailed him with cheery cry.

"Mooning again, Ted?" cried Alice brightly. "Forget your troubles for awhile and help me gather some hickory nuts."

Ted rose slowly to his feet, and as he did so he glanced about and made certain that Harvey was not to make a third. He felt that he could not stand by and see the loving glances which the two would exchange.

Slowly he followed Alice along the path. Most of the nuts had been gathered, but some few remained, and presently Ted forgot his great grief in Alice's merry chat.

It was not until the nuts had been gathered and they sat down to rest on a fallen trunk that remembrance came again.

Alice saw the cloud that settled down upon his face, and she turned abruptly.

"Ted," she asked, "do you want to make me very happy?"

"You're about as happy now as one girl deserves to be," was the ungracious response. "What do you want?"

"I want you to get married," was the surprising reply.

"That's what I wanted to do," reminded Ted, "but you wouldn't have it. Has Harvey jilted you?"

"Mercy, I don't want you to marry me!" was the hurried reply. "I want you to marry some other girl."

"Rather hard on the other girl," commented Ted, "considering that I could only offer an empty heart."

"And an empty head," was the caustic interruption. "That's just the trouble, Ted. You are having a lovely time with your heartache, and you don't want to give it up yet, but I can't be really happy with Harvey with the thought of your accusing eyes following me."

"Then forget it," advised Ted inelegantly.

"That's what I want you to do," explained Alice. "You never were really in love with me. I know it, and you know it. That is why we were always quarreling. We used to get along beautifully before we became engaged. Then when you realized the mistake you had made you became ill natured."

"All on my side?" asked Ted.

"I suppose that I was just as mean," admitted Alice, "but it was because we both realized that we had made a mistake. I want you to forget all about it. Marry Beth Agnus or Letty Fredericks or Nancy Bellman."

"What's the matter with Audrey Dunbar?" demanded Ted. "She is the only eligible you left out."

"You wouldn't like her," protested Alice hastily. "I should hate to see you married to her. You would never get along with her."

"She's a nice girl," growled Ted, "but I'm not going to marry any one."

He rose to his feet again and shouldered the bag as an intimation that he was ready to depart, and Alice meekly followed.

Ted carried the bag to Alice's home, and it was fate that on the way they should pass the disputed Miss Dunbar and that Ted should be unusually effusive, while Alice was barely civil.

He did not know that Alice could be so pretty, and he was glad when he could leave the burden on her porch and hurry away before her little speech of thanks was half completed. She came flying after him and reached him before he had opened the gate.

"You won't marry Audrey, will you?" she asked pleadingly.

"I told you that I was not going to marry any one," was the impatient response as Ted shut the gate with a vicious bang and started for home.

He was not yet ready to abandon his grief, but one ray of comfort pierced his once pervading gloom. Ted disliked girls who decried others. He had never known Alice to do it before.

Just to show Alice what he thought of her conduct, he escorted Audrey to the wedding and smiled sardonically when she caught the bridal bouquet, unfailing sign that she was to be the next bride.

However, Alice kissed her in congratulation with a warmth that little suggested the jealousy she felt.

There were three weeks of the honeymoon, and Harvey was giving the news to the new Mrs. Post after his first trip downtown.

"Ted's going to marry Audrey Dunbar," he announced as the choicest morsel.

"No matter was telling me," was the reply. "I expected it, but not so soon."

"I didn't suppose that you would relish such a quick desertion," said Harvey, with a laugh. But Alice only smiled.

She smiled still more broadly when Ted proudly escorted Audrey to call and welcome them home. There was an air of defiance in his manner that was amusing to the girl who knew him better than he knew himself, and Ted did not realize how truthful was Alice's declaration. Audrey was the very girl she would have picked out.

He could not tell that Alice was counting upon his stubbornness to make her happy by removing his reproachful gaze. He only thought that he had shown her that he was a man of his own action, and therein he found great content.

WOMAN WOULD NOT GIVE UP

Though Sick and Suffering; At Last Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Richmond, Pa. — "When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadfully rundown state of health, had internal troubles, and was so extremely nervous and prostrated that if I had given in to my feelings I would have been in bed. As it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very bad in the morning, and had a steady headache.

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was not so bad, I rested better, and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realize that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I highly praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. FRANK CLARK, 3146 N. Tulip St., Richmond, Pa.

HAD WEAK HEART HAD TO STAY IN BED

Many women are kept in a state of fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable, and are unable to attend to their household, social or business duties, on account of the unnatural action of the heart.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief. They do this by their calming, strengthening and invigorating action on the heart, causing it to beat regularly and naturally, and in addition to this they tone up the whole nerve system.

Mrs. J. Day, 234 John St. South, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "I was so run down with a weak heart that I could not even sweep the floor, nor could I sleep at night. I was so awfully sick sometimes I had to stay in bed all day as I was so weak. I used three and a half boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am a cured woman to-day, and as strong as anyone could be, and am doing my own housework, even my own washing."

"I doctored for over two years, but got no help until I used your pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25. They can be had at all druggists or dealers, or will be mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

ANIMALS IN SLEEP

All Sorts of Odd Postures, From Heads Down to Heads Up.

ONLY MAN LIES ON HIS BACK.

Standing During Slumber Is Not Uncommon Among Animals, and Sometimes One Leg Serves as a Support. Poses of the Sloths and the Lemurs.

Sleep indeed is a "gentle thing." It is the supremest form of rest. Our notions of rest during sleep, however, are likely to be a little upset when we come to survey the different postures assumed by various animals during sleep.

To begin with the human race. The majority of mankind probably sleep lying upon the right or left side of the body and with the knees drawn up toward the chin. But certain African tribes, for example, lie upon the back with the head, or rather the back of the neck resting on a bar of wood supported on two short pillars.

The elephant, apparently invariably, and the horse commonly sleep standing. This is really astonishing. Aside from the apparent difficulty of maintaining the balance of the body during these long periods of unconsciousness, one would have supposed that a recumbent position in the case of both these animals was imperative. Cattle and their kind commonly sleep lying down and during many hours of the day they lie down, as when chewing the cud.

More curious still there are creatures which invariably sleep hanging head downward suspended by their hind feet. The bats afford a case in point. Among the birds we meet with the same strange habit in the little hanging parrots of India and the Malayan region. In this they differ from all other birds, which invariably sleep with the head turned tailward over the back and the beak thrust in among the feathers between the wing and the body, not under the wing, as is commonly believed. No explanation has ever been offered to account for this strange habit. It is followed even by the penguins, wherein the feathers are so short as to fail completely to cover even the back. Owls are, perhaps, the only exception to the rule.

And, by the way, the only other animals which thus turn the head backward after this fashion during sleep are certain peculiar tortoises known as "side necked" tortoises. Certain birds sleep while resting on one leg. This curious pose is well seen in long legged birds like storks and gulls. Ducks generally sleep on open water, and to avoid drifting southward, and therefore into the danger zone, they keep constantly paddling with one foot, so that the body always is circling round the chosen sleeping area.

The sloths sleep suspended by their feet and the head tucked in between the forelegs. The no less remarkable African pottos, or slow lemurs, assume a similar pose, but they attach themselves to a vertical instead of a horizontal bough, so that the body rests with the head upward. No animal save man sleeps on his back.

Some animals are said never to sleep and this because the eyes are never closed. The hares, snakes and fishes are commonly supposed to enjoy this unenviable distinction. The notion is, however, quite erroneous. Whale and their kin are often quoted as sleepless creatures. It is supposed that if they made this mistake they would promptly drown!

As a rule darkness induces sleep. With many animals, however, the reverse is the case, as with the bats and owls, for example. This reversal of the usual order has been brought about by the nature of the feeding habits.

Finally one comes to the question, Where does sleep begin? This is by no means easily answered. One is inclined to draw the line at the insects. But since all living things—plants as well as animals—display periodical states of quiescence, perhaps we shall be near the truth in regarding sleep as universal among living things. In the case of plants it is enforced by darkness, save in the case of many bacteria and fungi, which, like evil deeds, grow under the cover of darkness.—Illustrated London News.

Comfort and Cure For Baby's Skin Troubles

Dr. Chase's Ointment Cured When Baby's Body Was Covered With Distressing Eczema

If every mother could try Dr. Chase's Ointment for the chafing, skin irritation and resulting eczema which tortures so many babies, what a blessing it would be for the little ones.

This letter will give you an idea of what a wonderful work this Ointment is doing in the way of bringing comfort to children who are so unfortunate as to contract eczema. It is so easy for this trouble to develop from chafing or irritation caused by the clothing, and so difficult to get it cured, that Dr. Chase's Ointment is appreciated when once its healing qualities are known.

Mr. M. L. Dusclos, Postmaster, Dugnayville, N.B., writes: "I believe it my duty to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for eczema. My baby was seized with eczema and his face and arms were covered with this terrible disease. After trying all sorts of ointments the disease continued to spread until it covered the entire body. When the itching became bad he would scratch himself and was sometimes found in his cradle covered with blood. Hearing about Dr. Chase's Ointment I bought two boxes and before this was all used the child was cured. That was a year ago, and there has been no trace of eczema since. I recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all who suffer from eczema as being the best treatment in the world for itching skin diseases."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is for sale by all dealers at 60 cents a box. It is a good idea to keep it at hand along with the bath soap to be used for roughness of the skin, chafing or irritation. Prevention is so much better than cure. Powders clog the pores, but Dr. Chase's Ointment cleanses the pores and thereby keeps the skin soft and smooth. Sample box free if you mention this paper. POLICE SOLVE GREAT MURDER MYSTERY

HEAD OF BEAUTIFUL VICTIM FOUND ON BEACH PROVES TO BE THAT OF WAX MODEL

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Two excited men informed Policeman Russell that there was the head of a murdered woman on the beach near Hicks Street. He hurried there with them, found what apparently was the head of a young woman from whose face the bloom of youth had not yet faded. She had long auburn hair, but only one golden eyebrow.

Putting the head in a sack the policeman and the two men went to the Hamilton avenue police station, where Lieut. Downey notified police headquarters, the coroner's office and the District Attorney.

Soon the station was filled with police and other officials, and most of them agreed that here was a first class murder mystery, principally because the victim was so young and beautiful, even retaining her charm in death.

Detective Pucenno and Capt. John B. Coughlan, of the Homicide Bureau, considered it odd that her cheeks still retained the peachblown blossom of youth and health, and killed a good mystery story by scratching the beautiful cheeks. The wax was but an inch deep.

"That head probably is part of some department store window model that suffered cut to size, and was drowned," said Capt. Coughlan.

Sir James Watson's Opinion Considered Most Valuable

It is said that the commonest of all disorders, and one from which few escape is Catarrh. Sir James frankly believes in local treatment, which is best supplied by "Catarrhozone." No case of Catarrh can exist where Catarrhozone is used, it is a miracle worker, relieves almost instantly, and cures after other remedies fail. Other treatments can't reach the diseased parts like Catarrhozone because it goes to the source of the trouble along with the air you breathe. Catarrhozone is free from cocaine, it leaves no bad after effects. It's simply nature's own cure.

Beware of dangerous substitutes offered under misleading names and meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhozone, which is sold everywhere, large size containing two months treatment costs $1.00, small size 50c, trial size 25c.

MY TREATMENT IN GERMANY

By F. A. McKenzie.

The man sat in the Kentish garden rubbing his hands in a way the newly blind have. He was a giant from the West, a trapper and a pioneer, able to drive his team of four across the rough lands of the country, and to guide his boat safely down the fierce rapids of the West.

For a few minutes he forgot his trouble as we talked together of the wonderful Peace River country, stretching almost to the Arctic Circle, and of the wild, rich lands beyond Prince Rupert.

The weeks in his prison hospital, with their misery and torture, had failed to take the deep-bitten tan from his cheeks. Even now, once his hands laid hold of a man in anger I would pity the man. Strength was written in every limb.

As he started to tell me in a deep, rich voice of his experiences in Germany, an audience gathered. Comrade after comrade in khaki approached silently, not to disturb him. The scene in that garden, with the throng of angry, strong men standing in a semicircle around, and the blinded giant facing them, seemed to me for the moment to be like a page from one of the great Greek tragedies.

"I was hit outside Ypres on April 24," said Pte McPhail. My battalion came up on the 22nd to hold the line after the retirement of the Algerian troops, when attacked by poison gas. We fought hard for two days. On the 26th a bullet caught me across the face, blinding me. Our boys had to retreat, and two hours afterwards the Germans, who had come up, found me. I was led to a field hospital, and remained there for eight days, receiving no attention. There were so many wounded that it was impossible for the German doctors to see to all. My wound was suppurating heavily, and there was not so much as a rag to wipe it with. Then I was taken to a place called Iseghem, and after being treated there, was sent on to Brussels.

Brutal Beyond Description.

"The treatment at Iseghem was brutal beyond description. They led me to an operating table and put me on it. Three attendants and a sister held me down. The sister asked the doctor a question, and he answered in English for me to hear: 'No, I will not give an anaesthetic. Englishmen do not need any chloroform.' He turned up my eyelid in the roughest fashion and cut my eye out. He used a pair of scissors, they told me afterwards, and cut too far down, destroying the nerve of the other eye. It seemed to me as though he was trying to see how much agony he could inflict upon me. Suddenly I lost consciousness, and I remembered no more all that day nor all the next night.

"They moved me to Brussels soon after this, and here I was sent to a hospital where there was a Dutch nurse. No one could have been kinder to me than this Dutch girl was. Then I was sent on to another Brussels hospital, where a number of Belgian ladies visited the wounded. They pitied me and brought me many things—flowers, fruit and sweets. They were like the Dutch nurse, kindness itself. I was told that I was one of the first in the list for exchange, but for some reason or other it was decided to send me, blind as I was, into Germany. I believe that the German officials disliked giving the Belgian ladies an opportunity of showing kindness to an Englishman.

Robbed the Wounded.

"The Germans at the beginning took all my clothes away, even my underclothing. Before I left for Brussels they gave me my trousers back and an old ragged shirt, not my own shirt, full of holes. There were two waist pockets in my trousers. One contained my watch, my trinkets, and some coins. The other pocket contained a little packet of paper money. The Germans took my watch and trinkets and cash away. I never saw them again. Fortunately for me, they had overlooked the paper money in the left hand pocket. I say fortunately, because when I reached Cologne if I had not had the money I must have starved, as many of the prisoners there were doing. Very few packets of food arrived from England, not nearly so many, I understand, as were sent out. My money enabled me to buy more food for myself and for some of the others there, too.

"My own personal experiences in Cologne were not so bad. I made friends with one of the Germans, a man who had lived in England and who had an English wife, and he was kind to me. But of the treatment of the British prisoners in general in the Cologne hospital I cannot say anything bad enough. I dare not tell you some of the things that took place. I could not see, of course, but I could hear, and time after time the other men came to me and told me what had happened to them.

Deliberate Cruelty.

"There was no doubt that the doctors there treated the British sick quite different from the French or the Belgians. Men were tortured by repeated operations without anaesthetics. Don't take my word for this. Ask some of the other wounded who have returned from Cologne and see what they tell you. A man would have his leg smashed and reset and have to bear it as best he could, without anything to deaden his pain. There were cases, men told me, where the doctors allowed an Englishman's wounds to heal over, and then tore them open. There was one orderly who took it upon himself to probe with the lancet, and which he pierced like it and if the head of one of our men he near, drove him mad.

"Rough, brutal, harsh, unfeeling. That was what they were!" The speaker, be it noted, was not a delicate townsman, but a man unused accustomed to the rough and hard life of pioneer lands. I am not complaining for myself. One of our sergeants would take me out and set me in a chair in the open, and others would come up and talk with me and lead me around. I was able to buy enough to eat. I had, compared with many of them, an easy time.

"But I think of the lot of another blind man, Kennedy. He was taken out each day, left in the open on a mattress, and had two meals brought him, where no one could go near him. There he had to lie alone in the heat all day.

Opinion of the Germans.

"A German doctor said to one of our wounded: 'Well, what do you think of the Germans now?' He replied, 'Not much. The more I see of them the less I like them.' I have not found one who is any damned good yet.' They punished him for this, and cut down his diet for some days, taking away even the little pat of butter that is given to some of the prisoners in Cologne hospital.

An Englishwoman standing by asked, anxiously, "What about your other eye? Is there any hope of saving it?"

The man shook his head in some confusion. "Is there a lady here?" he said. "I hope I have not been cursing and saying anything I shouldn't in front of a lady." The Englishwoman turned on him and caught his fumbling hand strongly. "Curse!" she said. "Haven't you earned the right to curse? My God!"

"Isn't it fierce!" said the sergeant of the hospital corps, who had been watching over the blind man. "Isn't it fierce!" and the Canadian colloquialism expressed more vividly than much profanity could have done the feelings of the listeners.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is sign you have been eating too much meat

When you wake up with the backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and lazy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

TURKS DISCONTENTED BY GERMAN PRESSURE

ATHENS, Oct. 30.—According to Constantinople information, German pressure is causing great discontent there. A group of deputies and senators under the presidency of Ahmed Riza Bey, formerly president of the Turkish Chamber, submitted a question to the Senate asking why Turkey took part in the European war. The Young Turk party, however, prohibited discussion, and an answer was refused.

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

A Bumper Market Last Saturday—Fowl Was Very Plentiful—Sugar Dropping—Fruits and Nuts for Christmas Cake Going Up—Comparison in Prices

Market Features.

Flour has advanced slightly.
Butter and eggs remain firm.
Snow apples are commanding higher prices.
Sugar is going down.
Currants, nuts and raisins have taken a sharp advance.

There was a large market on Saturday. The waggon section was well represented and the basket section too, people were so closely packed together they scarcely had room to move.

Fowl of all kinds were very plentiful and exceeded the demand. One old patriarch, on his way home, was asked by a lady friend what the market was like. With a twinkle in his eye he replied, "Twas most fowl."

Chickens ranged all the way from 90 cents to $1.00 per pair, according to size and quality. Geese brought more standard prices, running from $1.25 to $1.50, while turkeys sold from $1.90 to $3.00 each.

Peterborough is a long way behind other large markets in the method of handling fowl. Many places insist on fowl being dressed before presentation for sale. A few were drawn before market on Saturday, but their appearance was against them. Even among the fowl that were undressed there was a marked difference. Some were well picked and cleaned, which rendered them attractive to the eye of discriminating purchasers, while others were dirty and "woody," which detracted from their selling qualities.

There were only two vendors whose samples were not at all inviting, and the high prices which they were asking and getting ought to be an object lesson to those who offer apples in a dirty or uninviting condition.

The good housewives of Peterborough and district would do well to ponder over the prices of fruits and nuts that form such an important part of the inevitable Christmas cake.

Last year, owing to the war, nuts and almonds were tied up in transit, and many of them did not get to Canada in time for Christmas selling. This may be the case again this year.

The mix-up in the Balkans is bound to make itself felt; also in the currant market. Grecian currants are advancing steadily, and the attitude of Greece is no more promising than it was a month ago. No matter which side she takes and she must fight soon it will mean a tie-up of products. Currants and raisins, which ordinarily sell for ten cents a pound, are now quoted at 13 and 18 cents.

Contrary to the usual habit of sugar "going up" after preserving time each season, it has taken a drop this year. During the past month or six weeks sugar has declined no less than sixty cents a hundred, bringing it down to the lowest point since the sensational advances following the outbreak of the European war last fall. Deducting from the present price the war tax of 70 cents per cwt. imposed by the Dominion Government after the war broke out, sugar would be at an exceedingly reasonable point. The immediate reason for all this flurry is the heavier supplies through increased production.

The future of the sugar market is always uncertain, but it would be no surprise to see another drop or two before the first of the year.

ZEPPELIN CAMPS ALL SHOW ACTIVITY, NEW RAIDS LIKELY

Airships of Great Speed now Being Built for Attacks Over England.

ROTTERDAM, Oct. 30.—A neutral traveler reports that activity at the various Zeppelin centres is now great, evidence of which was noted at the war.

At Berlin new sheds are being erected, while at Friedrichshafen Hamburg and Wilhelmshaven it was observed that work was being pushed with feverish haste.

Passengers arriving at Rotterdam from the Germanic claim that both the North Sea and the Baltic the greatest work is in progress. They believe that as soon as weather conditions permit the Germans will approach Germany with numerous warning. They claim to have sunk Russian submarines and hostile British merchant shipping.

The Germans are convinced that they did more damage in London than is admitted and they hope to do a great deal more. They are awaiting new airships of great speed, now under construction, for work over England.

Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.

Boiler Burst in Cheese Factory

Fortunately No One Was in Building When Accident Occurred—News of Hastings

HASTINGS, Nov. 3.—Posters are out for the anniversary services and annual tea and dinner in connection with the Methodist church on Sunday and Monday, 7th and 8th.

The Adult Bible Class held their regular social and business meeting for the month of October, on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. W. Ward, when a pleasant evening was enjoyed by all present.

Dr. T. W. B. Edmison left on Monday for Kingston, hoping to be accepted for overseas service.

What might easily have proved to be a serious accident occurred one morning last week at Brickley's cheese factory, when the boiler burst and fragments were hurled for some distance. Fortunately the operator had gone to breakfast after starting the fire and no one was in the immediate vicinity when the explosion took place. If he had remained near the spot it is easy to conjecture what the result might have been. As it is the factory is obliged to close down for the balance of the season and the patrons are sending their milk elsewhere.

A large representation of the citizens went to Westwood last week to witness the ploughing match which was held on the farm of Mr. Bread-ridge and which drew an interested crowd of spectators.

Halloween was duly observed by the small boy on Saturday night and it must have meant a hard night's work, judging from the appearance of the streets on Sunday morning, which were in no place completely bestrewn.

The quarterly sacramental service of the Methodist church was held on Sunday morning, Rev. Mr. Snell officiating.

A representative of the Bates Motor Co. was in town during the week in the interests of the firm.

Tenders were attended to on the sale of Mrs. Dalton's effects, which drew a very large crowd.

Mr. Sands Day of Belleville and Mr. Lee of Toronto were the guests of friends in town.

It might be an unusual sight to see the old horse-car tracks in the centre of Front street, but such was observed on the corner of Dundas and Front streets on Monday last week.

Reeve Sprague of Norwood was in town on Friday.

Several hunting parties left on Saturday for the annual deer and partridge hunt.

Mr. E. Nicholl [illegible] spent a short time in Toronto during the past week.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S NORFOLK SUIT.

By Anabel Worthington.

The Norfolk suit is always youthful, and this season it is worn by little girls and by women of maturer years as well. The plainest and most orthodox form of this suit is exemplified in the accompanying illustration. The straight yokes which are shown in front and back are applied and may be either used or omitted. The pleats are entirely separate and are therefore much easier to handle than would be pleats cut in one piece with the rest of the body. These also may be omitted, but they really furnish the character of the coat and should be used if possible.

The neck has the coat finish, with a small turnover collar and little revers of quite mannish effect. The sleeves are also regulation in style and end at the wrist.

An entirely separate skirt accompanies this coat. It has a plain panel front and is side pleated all around the remainder of its width. The closing is in the centre of the back.

It is not necessary to make coat and skirt of one material. Woollen goods are commonly employed for the jacket, while the skirt is of linen, pique or other wash fabric. Again a plain white skirt is liked with a sets of blue, rose, canary and the like.

The dress pattern, No. 7206, is cut in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Medium size requires 4¼ yards of 36 inch material.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

IN SPITE OF THE FOE'S LIQUID FIRE THE FRENCH OCCUPY MORE TRENCHES

Another Important Victory for the Allies is Announced ---German Advanced Trenches Are Captured---More Allied Troops Have Landed at Salonika---Invaders Are Paying a Huge Price for Every Foot of Ground They Have Gained in Serbia.

GEN. MUNRO REACHES THE DARDANELLES

PARIS, Nov. 4. (French Official Communique).—Another important French victory over the Germans in Champagne was announced by the War Office to-day.

"After a violent attack we have re-occupied the major portion of the Germans' advanced trenches in the vicinity of Chausson Farm, expelling their defenders, despite their use of liquid fire.

"On the route to Lillie, south-east of Neuville St Vaast, there has been violent grenade and artillery duels.

"Troops for the Balkan campaign continue to land at Salonika. In the region of Krivolak and Rabrovo, in Southern Serbia, where we repulsed the Bulgarians on November 1, there has been no change in the situation."

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 4.—An official Bulgarian statement from Sofia says King Peter of Serbia has gone to the front to encourage his soldiers and take them the news that the French and British forces are hastening to their assistance.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—The Athens correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company asserts that, following his defeat in the Chamber of Deputies, Premier Zaimis will resign.

PARIS, Nov. 4.—Huge losses by the invaders as the price of every foot of ground they have gained in Serbia were claimed in an official report to-day from Nish.

"On our northern front the enemy (Austro-Germans) have attacked us in great force, especially on our right wing, where fighting is in progress. Our Morava River positions have been assaulted without result. The enemy advanced on Gragujevac and we took up positions south of the city.

"In the Nisava Valley our left wing has been forced to fall back, but our centre repulsed the Bulgars, driving them in disorderly retreat towards Bofa Plant.

"In the Timok River region the enemy has attacked us in the vicinity of Boljevac."

MIDDLESBORO, England, Nov. 4. The British steamship Friargate has been sunk by a German submarine. Five of the crew landed here to-day.

ROTTERDAM, Nov. 4.—Lieutenant-General Sir Charles C. Munro, Great Britain's new Commander-in-Chief on the Gallipoli Peninsula, has arrived at his post, according to the Vossische Zeitung's Sofia correspondent, and made great preparations for the landing of troops.

BERLIN, Nov. 4. The Germans, under Marshal Von Hindenburg, in the Dvinsk district, have re-occupied the twelve-mile line from which it was officially admitted on Wednesday the Russians had forced them to retreat, and re-occupied Mikulishki, the War Office announced to-day.

The Austro-Germans have taken Nishalafat, ten miles north-east of Nish, by storm.

PARIS, Nov. 4. An urgent appeal by the Serbian Legation here was issued to-day on behalf of the refugees fleeing before "the invasion of a pitiless enemy, which seems to exterminate an entire nation."

Thousands of Serbs have already arrived in Greece, nearly naked and in miserable conditions. Both warm clothing and money were declared necessary to save their lives. Princess Demidoff, wife of the Russian Minister at Athens, has organized initial relief, but needs help badly.

BERLIN, Nov. 4.—The capture of more than 800 yards of French trenches in the fighting north of Massiges, in the eastern Champagne region, was announced by the War Office this afternoon.

Twenty-eight Frenchmen, including a major, were captured and the rest of the trench occupants were killed, it was stated.

On the Serbian front, north-west of Kragujevac, the Austro-Germans announced the capture of Valankonje and Coljevac.

GERMAN "SUB." IN DISTRESS.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 4.—A German submarine, in distress, was towed into Terschelling, Dutch Island, in the North Sea, by a Dutch life-boat this morning. A Dutch torpedo boat saw rocket signals sent up by the submarine and escorted her to anchorage. The undersea boat is being closely watched.

GREEK PREMIER'S RESIGNATION COMING.

ATHENS, Nov. 4.—Premier Zamis stated that his formal resignation would be placed in King Constantine's hands to-day.

INTERESTING EQUIPMENT PROVIDED

Three Meal a Day Problem To Be Solved by Mrs. Mary Brown-Lewers

Lectures and Cookery Lessons at Conservatory of Music Free

"THE EXAMINER" INVITES ALL WOMEN TO ATTEND

ARRANGEMENTS are being made at the Conservatory of Music to take care of very large crowds of women who will want to hear Mrs. Mary Brown-Lewers, the Better Foods Better Homes expert who will lecture all next week under the auspices of the Examiner. There will be a complete cookery equipment provided for Mrs. Brown-Lewers' use and on her gas stove and in her gas oven, as well as in the fireless cooker, she will prepare all sorts of good things before the women of the city, and all of these good things will be served to the women in her classes.

Mrs. Brown-Lewers is a good old-fashioned home cook and insists that home cooking is the best. It is her aim in her Better Foods Better Homes Work to inspire women everywhere she goes in this belief. In her lectures and cookery lessons, as she will present them at the Conservatory of Music next week, she covers the whole food situation. Beginning at the very beginning, she tells how to buy foods, how to cook them and how to serve them. In the item of household expense, the purchase of food is perhaps the most important. This will be given detailed consideration in Mrs. Brown-Lewers' course here next week.

She is a famous cake baker and will not only impart to those who attend the Examiner Better Foods Better Homes school the exact methods by which she produces her delicious cakes, but will bake some kind of cake every day to be served to the ladies who attend her school. Further than this, she will give away cakes at nearly every session and one of her most beautifully decorated cakes is to be given away as a souvenir of Friday afternoon's session. Mrs. Brown-Lewers has to an unusual degree the artistic skill of making flowers grow on cakes. Out of sugar and eggs coloured with harmless vegetable coloring, chosen with as much care as an artist uses in the selection of colors for a picture, she makes roses and sweet peas and violets, or any other flower that is requested or that happens to suit her fancy, or that is suggested by the season.

Cake baking, however, is not the only branch to be considered in her cookery course. Every food that goes to make up the properly balanced menu, will be demonstrated at some time during the week and the three meal a day problem will be helpfully discussed in this free course of six lectures.

The Examiner invites every woman in this city not only to attend the lecture and cookery course to be given by Mrs. Brown-Lewers at the Conservatory of Music, but also to co-operate in making her school here the most successful she has conducted this season.

PROVINCIAL LICENSE COMMISSION MEETS HERE FOR FIRST TIME FRIDAY AS 1:30

The first meeting in Peterborough of the Ontario License Commission will be held in the Court House to-morrow afternoon commencing at 1:30 o'clock. The principal business will be the consideration of the applications for the renewal of the local liquor license. Mr. J. D. Flavelle is chairman of the Board, which comprised five members, at least three of whom will be in Peterborough to-morrow. It is practically certain that the County Temperance Association will wait upon the Commission but it is not known what request they will make.

D. A. Thomas Loses Part of His Jaw Bone

NEW YORK, Nov. 4—D. A. Thomas, the wealthy Welsh coal mine owner, who has been in the United States and Canada several months as agent for David Lloyd George, British Minister of Munitions, was operated upon today for the removal of some of the bone of his jaw. The operation was reported to have been entirely successful, and Mr. Thomas is in good condition.

Mr. Thomas and his daughter were passengers on the steamship Lusitania when that vessel was torpedoed and sunk off the Irish Coast.

Old Time Hallowe'en

Monday evening was the scene of a most exciting time, when a number of boys and girls all attired in old time Hallowe'en costumes gathered at the home of Mr. Phillip Crough. From there the crowd called at Mr. E. T. Milburn's, Mr. Gus. White's, and then to Mr. E. R. Milburn's, where a pleasant evening was passed in dancing, card playing and many other amusements. As they were about to leave a vote of thanks was devoted to Mr. and Mrs. Milburn for the pleasant evening that was extended to them. They closed the evening by singing God Save the King.

PARIS EXPECTS GREEK'S ENTRY.

PARIS, Nov. 4.—Greece's entrance into the war was regarded here to-day as almost certain to follow the overthrow of the Zamis Cabinet, announced officially in despatches from Athens. It is not absolutely certain, however.

Eleutherious Venizolos, whom Zamis succeeded, and who assuredly will, in turn, succeed the latter, is known as a war advocate.

The presumption is that, back in office, he will force the country into the struggle very quickly.

Ladies' Ready-to-Wear Department

Barries' Limited first clearing sale of ladies' suits to-morrow and Saturday only, Nov. 5th and 6th. Every lady should see them; it means a big saving.

The house has adopted the business plan of clearing everything in this department in its season. Will not carry over any goods from season to season. We find after a very successful inauguration a few suits left, of which the following will be put on sale to clear. Suits retailing regular at $15.50, $16.50, $17.50, $20.00, $22.50 and $25.00, now at one price, namely, $12.50. Suits retailing regular at $25.00, $27.50, $29.75, $32.50 and $36.00, now at one price, namely, $20.50.

All these suits it is well known are in the very latest styles, and any ladies purchasing on these two days will obtain a most desirable garment at less than cost.

It would be well to remember all woollen goods will certainly command higher prices in the future, therefore the present is undoubtedly the time to buy.

Barrie's stock of ladies' coats and waists cannot be surpassed anywhere, none but the most modern styles being shown. We have no old stock.

Lieut. Widdifield who has just returned from Kingston, was greatly impressed with the work of A company. "There is not a company at Barriefield either in the 80th or the 57th any better drilled than this company," he informed the Examiner yesterday afternoon. Lieut. Widdifield also com-

MURDER HEARING ADJOURNED UNTIL THURSDAY, NOV. 11

NO EVIDENCE TAKEN YET

The preliminary hearing of Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Lindsay before Magistrate Langley in the County Police Court, this morning, was adjourned until Thursday, November 11th, at 10 a.m. in the Court House.

Mr. Gordon, counsel for the defence, was prepared to proceed with the case, but the County Crown Attorney asked that the prisoners be remanded for a week to enable him to round up witnesses. Both lawyers asked the Magistrate to hear the case in Peterborough, and Mr. Langley agreed that the local court conveniences outweighed the minor considerations in favour of the sessions at Havelock.

Sanford Lindsay is charged with murdering his 14-year-old daughter Lillian May Lindsay on Sept. 17 last, with committing incest and with wilfully causing the death of the unborn child of his daughter.

Mrs. Lindsay is charged with murdering her daughter and with causing the death of the unborn child.

The preliminary hearing will apparently deal with the charge of murder against Mr. Lindsay.

CONGRATULATIONS.

The Examiner cordially congratulates Rev. Canon Davidson on having received official notice of his appointment as Chaplain of the 93rd Peterborough, Regiment. He, himself, will be naturally pleased at getting the opportunity of doing his bit in a more direct way than he has been doing since the war broke out. Though not young in years, and not free from large domestic responsibilities, and ecclesiastrate duties, Major Davidson has gamely, if one may so speak, responded to the call of King and country, and with a willing enthusiasm, that might be, and is an example for emulation by younger, more robust, less tied men, to whom the call comes with equal force. As an enthusiastic Canadian Imperialist, Major Davidson has always taken a deep interest in promoting whatever would be for the good of the country, and the Empire, especially in association with military matters. He has been chaplain of the 57th Regiment for nineteen years, with the title and rank of major. He has taken his duties in this capacity seriously and sedulously. His interest in the welfare, moral and physical, of the men of the regiment has always been deep and practical, and in his chance for more direct and concentrated work in actual campaigning, he will be sure to discharge his duties with energy and enthusiasm, and prove himself a true friend of the soldiers, in physical and material things, as he will be faithful and earnest in his clerical capacity. His energy, and his large kindness of heart will find an outlet and expression in the camp as they have done in the community, during his twenty-seven years' residence in Peterborough as Rector of St. John's. While Major Davideon, Chaplain of the 93rd, is to be warmly congratulated upon his enviable opportunity for service; it will be generally felt that the gain of the regiment, and the service will be the loss of the community, where he has been so many years an efficient agent in his spiritual office, that beyond his official responsibility, overflowed in thoughts and in deeds which were the reflection and expression of unconquorable kindness of heart and charitable impulse. Good luck go with him in the name of the Lord.

THE KING'S CALL.

The following, as it appears in the Canada Gazette, is the text of the King's call:

To My People.—At this grave moment in the struggle between my people and a highly organized enemy who has transgressed the laws of nations and changed the ordinance that binds civilized Europe together, I appeal to you.

I rejoice in my Empire's effort and I feel pride in the voluntary response from my subjects all over the world who have sacrificed home and fortune and life itself in order that another may not inherit the free Empire which their ancestors and mine have built.

I ask you to make good these sacrifices. The end is not in sight. More men and yet more are wanted to keep my armies in the field and through them to secure victory and enduring peace. In the ancient days the darkest moment has ever produced in men of our race the sternest resolve. I ask you men of all classes to come forward voluntarily and take your share in the fight. In freely responding to my appeal you will be giving your support to our soldiers who for long months have nobly upheld Britain's past traditions and the glory of her arms.

This is a direct succinct and telling statement of the causes that created the cause for which Britain and the Empire, and her allies, are fighting with all the powers they are able to put into action. It acknowledges the greatness of the voluntary and spontaneous response the people of the British Empire all over the world have made to the call of duty, "who have sacrificed home and fortune and life itself," to make Europe and the world of civilization the continued heritors of the freedom which our British ancestors have won.

The essence of the King's call is his appeal to us to make good the sacrifices that we and the rest of the Empire have made. Unless we come adequately to the rescue, the sacrifices we have made, the blood we have shed, the sufferings those who are fighting for us have endured, will have been a vain sacrifice. If we relax effort now; if we atop short of supplying what is required to gain victory, we lose all; we lose the sacrifices we have made, the work we have done, and leave Germany and the evil spirit that animates Germany, to "inherit the free Empire," which British valour, British statesmanship, and the British spirit of freedom, have built. Unless we make good the sacrifices we have made, the sacrifices of 15,000 brave Canadian lives, the suffering and disability of a far larger number of wounded ,will have been made in vain; the loss of 15,000 or 20,000 gallant Australian and New Zealand lives, the loss of 350,000 British lives, and the wounding and disability of many thousands more, will all have been suffered in vain, if we do not push the battle to victory. As surely as we halt or weaken now; as surely as we fail to supply the means in men and muntions, and money, to overcome the German menace, we shall come under German domination; will not only lose what we have of freedom and happiness, but we shall show ourselves unworthy and faithless stewards of the heritage we have received from our forefathers, and we shall be negatively contributory factors to the enslavement of the world, and the death of liberty, and loss of free institutions, such as we know them under the genius of the British spirit.

It then becomes a most pressing duty upon us all to continue the struggle, with if possible, greater energy than in the past. And the call is to all, the men who can fight with arms, and every citizen who can fight by strengthening and supporting the forces in the field. Every man, woman and child can do something. There is the general call of the King, and there is the specific call of our Government, to increase the Canadian forces under arms to 250,000. This is a call to every man eligible for enlistment to enlist, or for every man needed to make up the quota we are called upon to furnish. Every man owes it to himself, to his family, to his home, to his country, to the Empire, to enter the ranks; every man owes it to the memory of the brave men who have died to make good this sacrifice; they call in spirit from their unmarked graves in foreign soil. Ecery man owes it to the wounded Canadian soldiers languishing in the welter of carnage at this very moment, perhaps, in the blood-stained trenches—to see that his sufferings shall not have been in vain. Every Canadian owes it to every Canadian soldier to help him on the battle line, facing death and wounds; fighting the fiight of heroes against an enemy organized with hellish ingenuity and throughness, to ride over humanity and the liberty of humanity the world over. Every fit Canadian young man is called to come to the rescue, and to strengthen their hands, and show them that while they are risking life and limb, their chums in Canada for whom they are fighting, do not forget neither them nor the duty to stand beside them in the fighting ranks.

Every man, woman and child must make up their minds to help and to sacrifice on their own part. The sacrifice should not be all left to the fighting soldier; nor should the thousands of bereaved wives and mothers be only the ones of our women who make sacrifice. There is a work for all to do, and we who cannit fight with guns, can fight with the weapons ready to our hands. We can supply the wants of the soldiers and provide dressings for their wounds. Every hand can do a little.

Then there are other sacrifices we must be called upon to make in the preservation of our liberties, our homes, our future prosperity and happiness. The question of financing this great war is personal to every citizen. Great Britain has been spending money with lavish hand. Three million men under arms at a cost of $1,500 per head per year gives some idea of what she is spending and will have to spend. Besides Britain is financing her allies, and for this purpose the expenditure for the current financial year will amount to 2,115 millions of dollars; and there is a proposal for a new British loan of 1,250 million dollars.

Canada is also confronted with big expenditure. A despatch from Ottawa states that another year of war will cost this country 250 million dollars, 30 dollars per head of our population. Premier Asquith's statement to the British Parliament also applies to Canada. He told the House of Commons that the British "financial situation was serious," and that "though rich and resourceful" Great Britain

"Cannot sustain the present burdens unless both Government and individuals exercise the strictest economy."

This applies pro rata to Canada. We are not perhaps, rich, but we are resourceful. The field crops of Canada for one year—this year—have a value twice as great as our prospective expenditure of 250 millions for another year of war. Yet, like the British Government and people, our Government and people "must exercise the strictest economy." We must do this in order to meet, not only the burden of our financial responsibilities, but that we may be able to meet and fulfill our share of the fighting—the home share. While our soldiers are making sacrifices in waging their gallant fight, we must be prepared to do our share of self-denial and, if necessary, sacrifice They are fighting for us, and we must not be indifferent spectators—ungrateful recipients of what they are striving to preserve for us; but we must do our sphere of our duty and ability. Nero fiddling while Rome was burning was no worse than our feasting, sporting, pleasure making, consuming the means that we should devote to combatting the great conflagration of war that, unchecked, will consume us. Wide and far-reaching, as well as individually direct, comes to all of us the King's call.

AUSTRALIA'S WHEAT CROP.

The wheat crop of Australia will show an exportable surplus of 90,000,000 bushels, and the Government of the Commonwealth is exercising the most absolute control of the ocean freightage, so that the cost shall be reduced to the barest profitable limit. Has Canada yet done anything along the line of reducing excessive ocean freight rates?—The Globe.

THE TRADE OF CANADA IN RELATION TO THE WAR

From the speech of the Minister of Finance at the Canadian Club to-day it would appear that the war has been a blessing in disguise for Canada. It has effected nothing less than a financial and industrial revolution in this country—and all to our benefit. In 1913 there was a trade balance against us of $300,000,000. That is to say, we imported three hundred million dollars' worth of goods above and beyond the total value of our exports. Obviously we had to pay for this with borrowed money. But we are no lonzer doing this kind of thing. During the past six months we have exported $64,000,000 more goods than we have imported — and the proportion of exports to imports is increasing all the time.

This is splendid. But we hope it is not going to encourage the Government to continue its recklessly extravagant course of expenditure. Mr. White impressed on his hearers the necessity of economy and production. We wish he could have said that he and the Government to which he belongs intended to set an example in this direction. So far we see no indication of it. Cheering as were the figures, Mr. White was able to give it must not be forgotten that they are the result very largely of munition-making—an entirely artificial industry, likely to fade out even more quickly than it has grown. By far the greatest factor in the real prosperity of the country is the magnificent harvest with which the country has this year been blessed. That harvest emphasizes two things — the need of wider markets for our agricultural products, and the fact that farming is the bed-rock foundation of the country's wealth.

Mr. White said that the economic motto for Canada is still "Production, production, and again production." We quite agree. But if that is to be the motto of the people it must also be the motto of the Government: And if it is the motto of the Government it inevitably must find expression in legislation which will help us as a people to increase production. As a nation we cannot increase production by herding the people into cities and leaving our vast agricultural areas either vacant, or so sparsely occupied as to be almost unendurable to the few settled upon them. We recently made an extensive trip over the prairie provinces, and the loneliness and emptiness of vast spaces of this rich farming land was one of the strongest impressions we brought away. One of the great aims of our legislation in the new era on which we are entering should be to dot this country with thriving little agricultural communities rather than with scattered settlers. That way lies production and prosperity, not in the artificial stimulation of urban industries ahead of the basic requirements of the country.—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

Armand Lavergne and Sir Sam; or Recruiting and Bilingualism

Up to thirty-six hours ago, the public were under the impression that Mr. Armand Lavergne, lawyer, member for Montmagny and lieutenant-colonel in the Canadian Militia was far from being a favourite of Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia. But, light has come out. In those circles frequented by Mr. Lavergne, it was a common saying that Sir Sam offered commissions to his favourites only. But now, Sir Sam has offered a commission to Colonel Lavergne; then Mr. Lavergne ranks among the pets of the Minister of Militia and all that he might have said or written against our national Sir Sam is nothing but belly-wash; things uttered merely for the common people who are not in touch with what goes on behind the scenery.

Sir Sam with his well-known spontaneity, has offered Mr. Lavergne the command of a regiment for overseas service; Mr. Lavergne has declined with all the courtesy of which he is so customary, handing his reply to the press before it had reached the minister.

The reasons given by Mr. Lavergne are very simple; he is utterly opposed to Canadian participation to the present war and that is why he refuses his active cooperation. It is the reasoning of a man who would say when facing a fire that threatens to turn into a conflagration: I have no sympathy for those who suffer from that fire, and, besides, I have no use for the fire chief. Hence, I keep quiet. But let the fire reach my property, which is next to that now ablaze and I will show you what a good fireman I can be!

If the member for Montmagny had blundered to that extent only we would not say a word owing to our respect for his liberty of speech and opinion, but there is more than that. Mr. Lavergne refuses a commission offered him by Sir Sam and he gives the minister a call down because the French-Canadians cannot have all the French teaching they claim for their schools. Where is the connection between the Minister of Militia and Regulation XVII? We do not know that Regulation XVII has interfered with the enlistment of Ontario French-Canadians and we fail to see why it would stop Mr. Lavergne.

The pompous drawing-room colonel and member for Montmagny uses his privilege in refusing a commission, but he has no right to place the odious burden on our shoulders, as the French-Canadians of Ontario. We have enough of our own troubles without being the stepping stones for the ambitions of Mr. Lavergne or Mr. Landry, another colonel, whose military operations are confined to Ontario, and of whom the whole artillery is limited to an obselete vocabulary.

Of such friends we have too many. Should the Almighty rid us of them, we could settle with our enemies, and for long we would be having all the French teaching that we desire.

Lieutenant-Colonel Lavergne, colonel (honorary) Landry and many others would do much better in not mixing Ontario French-Canadians with all their oratory or epistolary decoctions. If they feel in need of speaking or writing, let them work for the recruitment. In the ranks of the A.C.J.C. they will find a host of young men eager to devote their energies on something useful and patriotic and, having, like Landry and Lavergne, the habit of coining money on the back of Ontario French-Canadians. That assemblage should make a beautiful regiment.

Unfortunately our advice will not be heeded. Mr. Lavergne and Mr. Landry will continue their speech-making and the "A.C.J.C." shall keep on passing the hat—without rendering account— We shall still be the "wounded of Ontario" and our friends from Quebec shall still show their patriotism by probing our wounds, and practising their amateur dressing of them, and the whole at our own expense.—Le Temps, Ottawa. NO SLACKENING.

If peace were in prospect for next month or next week, or for to-morrow, it would be no excuse for slackening upon the preparations for war. The enemy is not beaten and will not be beaten until he lays down his arms and sues for peace. He is not at that stage yet, but he is headed in what direction.—Toronto World.

PATRONAGE GRAFT IN WAR TIME.

It is not a shame, it is a crime, that in a time of life and death for the nation man should be found trafficking in the country's needs. Such is the declaration of a monthly journal. Men's Wear, published in Toronto by the Acton Publishing Co. It is a journal devoted to the clothing trade; it is discussing soldiers' uniforms, and is supposed to be familiar with such subjects. It goes into particulars:

"The situation is best illustrated by a case that has occurred in the city of Toronto. In spite of the number of bona fide clothing factories anxious to get a share of the work, a large contract for uniforms was recently given to a real estate man, who has had no more experience in clothing manufacture than the member of Parliament who got him the contract. He farmed out the order to a firm of foreigners at a net profit of over twenty thousand dollars, promptly covering his chances for loss with insurance. Here is a man who, beyond perhaps a subscription to the party fund, has never turned his hand in the making of a fortune out of his country's necessity. No doubt instances might be multiplied almost indefinitely. As we have already said, it is not a shame, it is a crime."

It is bad enough—it is worse than bad enough—that at such a time as this the Government of a nation in arms, when men of every creed and party are enlisting, going to the front, fighting and falling, should allow party henchmen to draw up a patronage list of those manufacturers included within one political party with whom all orders for supplies must be placed. That is bad enough, but it is infinitely worse that men who manufacture nothing and fight nothing, are able to wedge in between the workers who make uniforms and the fighters who wear them, and filch fortunes out of the war funds that ought to be spent in arming and supplying those who defend the country.—Toronto Star.

Many advertisers are constantly trying to think up "Something New" or "Different" and the results are startling to be sure, but certainly not convincing nor conducive to increase in the business of the advertiser.

The craze for originality is a mistake. People do not care for stunts or mental gymnastics. They do want to know the facts in regard to your business and whether you can offer better prices or better quality than your competitors.

Tell the facts in a straightforward, unassuming manner. You will gain the confidence of your patrons, and you will find that advertising pays abundantly.

SAVED HIS LOCKS AS AN AMERICAN INDIAN

In a letter from the front The New York Sun's correspondent with the Foreign Legion has the following in one of his recent letters:—

"I must tell you of one I put over on my superiors yesterday. An order was issued that all the men must have their hair cut short (by machine—almost shaved) I went over to the bureau to see the captain about getting exempt.

"'What do you want?" asked the sergeant-major.

"I explained, but he declared it was impossible. 'No excuse. Here! Look! I had to have my own cut!' and he showed me his clipped head.

"'That's all right for you,' I answered, but not for me. It's contrary to my religion to cut off all my hair when I go to war.'

"'What are you?'

"'An American.'

"'But Americans have no such religion!'

"'Ah! But I am an Indian, an American Indian.'

"So I was taken before the adjutant and before the sergeant-major could explain he, too, burst out excitedly; 'Not cut your hair! Look! I had to have my own clipped — every one has.'

"As soon as he got a chance to slip in a word the sergeant-major explained that I was an American Indian and so on.

"'But why?' the adjutant demanded.

"So I explained that the theory was that it was only fair to leave the enemy a scalp as a trophy in case you could not get his. I was taken round to the barber and he was strictly ordered to leave my hair alone. And when the inspection was held later by the lieutenant the adjutant stopped in front of me and explained the whole story to the lieutenant, who seemed deeply interested in the idea of an American Indian coming over to fight for France."

Another legionary, invalided out of the regiment, on reading the above letter laughed and said:—

"That's just like him. I remember when we were drilling at Toulouse and were all tired of barrack life and dying to get to the front one day we were asked who had seen any active service. Every American was ready to declare he had. Your friend was asked where he had served.

"Three years in the Salvation Army, sir!"

And it was gravely noted down, evidently under the impression that it meant some Central or South American state.

HERE TO MAKE WAR ON SCUM

E. Tennyson Smith, English Temperance Orator, to Tour America.

NEW YORK, Nov 3—E. Tennyson Smith, the English temperance orator, who recently induced 10,000 soldiers to sign the total abstinence pledge, arrived in New York from Liverpool to start a campaign in the United States and Canada. He said that the temperance party in Great Britain had been greatly disappointed because the Government had not passed a prohibition act.

"The men of the rank and file," said Mr. Smith, "are serious in their duty and realize that when they leave England for the front they may never return. I visited all the principal camps at London, Colchester, Southampton, Portsmouth, Reading, Salisbury Plain, Colwyn Bay, and other places. There I found that the Government had opened big canteens as if they were designed to ensourage the troops to drink. A Major of the Royal Engineers, who deplored the bad example set to the men by the officers, addressed one of my meetings at Portsmouth and said he knew of one camp where 1,760 soldiers consumed 14,000 gallons of beer which cost 30 cents a gallon.

"I don't know whether I can take the credit of getting King George to sign the pledge, but I can say this: Three days before the King announced that he would refrain from all alcoholic beverages during the war I had sent him a letter to Buckingham Palace enclosing a pledge card and reminding His Majesty that I had written six months before asking him to use his all-powerful influence in the cause of temperance."

Mrs. Smith said that she had not seen much drinking among the soldiers wives, but had witnessed a good deal of it among women of the wealthy classes.

"Society women in England," she added, "do a great deal of work for the soldiers and their widows and orphans and sacrifice their automobiles, jewellery, and lavish costumes, but they still cling to liquor."

DATES FROM GARDEN OF EDEN.

Now Coming to America by Way of Bussorah, British Base.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—One of the results of the war is that England, America and other countries will get their dates from the "Garden of Eden" by way of Bussorah.

Mesopotamia is the supposed site of the Garden, and the date crop is its principal product. This year's crop is to be sent via Bussorah, which is at the head of the Persian Gulf, and is the British base for the operations up the Shat-el-Arab River into Mesopotamia.

The dates do not represent the entire product of the date palm, for every part of it which shows itself above ground is of value. The stems furnish a kind of timber, while the stem fibres can be twisted into ropes. Many a peasant, too poor to afford a house, makes a substitute from the date palm fronds woven into matting. The male buds are considered a delicacy, and the fruit, which is a dessert in Europe and America, is a necessity in Mesopotamia. The flesh is the staple food of man, the crushed stones of the beast.

Garden of Eden dates are prepared according to the market The Indians like them sun-dried, while the English and Americans prefer them 'wet.' For them the natives pile the fruit on matting, trample it into a mass and put the result into a box, which is pressed into shape when the cover is nailed down. To its owner a palm tree represents an average annual income of about $40, yielding, as it does, about 400 pounds of fruit, a habit it takes about eight years to acquire, but when acquired it persists for almost a century.

WAR BONUS DOUBLED FOR RAILWAY MEN.

British Government Expected to Pay Most of $20,000,000 Yearly Increase.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—After protracted negotions, the demand of the English railway men for an increase in their war bonus has been settled. Under the new agreement, the war bonus of most railway employees is practically doubled. The rate granted at the beginning of the war averaged 50 to 75 cents weekly; the revised bonus will, in most cases, reach $1.25 weekly. The adjustment will cost nearly $20,000,000 a year.

Presumably the Government will take over most of this extra burden.

In return for the higher war bonuses now allowed, the men's leaders have agreed not to present any further demands during the time the roads remain under Government control.

TELLS OF SHOOTING OF A BRITISH CREW

DANES GREATLY EXCITED But Realize That to Enter the War Against Germany Would be an Act of National Suicide.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—William Washburn Nutting, editor of Motor Boat, who has just returned from a four months' trip through the Scandinavian countries and Germany, brough back a description of the shooting of the fourteen British sailors, members of the crew of the English submarine E-13, when they were fired upon by a German gunboat in neutral waters off the Danish coast, on the morning of last Aug. 19. This incident of the war and the indignation aroused by it in Scandinavia were reported by cable at that time.

"I left Malmo, Sweden," said Mr. Nutting, "on the ferry to Copenhagen, on the 20th. Reports were prevalent in Malmo that the German fleet of destroyers and gunboats, which had been patrolling the waters of the Baltic for many months, had fired upon a body of English sailors. It was said that the crew of a submarine had been potted in the water as they were swimming away from their boats, and that there was a possibility of complications in the relations of the northern countries and their great neighbor to the south.

"As we passed by the Island of Saltholm, a long stretch of low-lying land on the horizon, about ten miles outside the entrance to the harbor of Copenhaben, we could see two or three of the heavy lighters with their squat hulls which are familiar sights in the North Sea and the Baltic, grouped about a mere speck in the distance.

"The ferry passed near to the shore, and it was possible to make out the framework of the conning tower of the submarine. From the distance at which we passed, the Germans seemed to have caused very little damage to the body of the boat.

"In Copenhagen, which is a hotbed of pro-Ally sentiment, I found the people roused to white heat, not alone against the Germans for having violated their neutrality (for the frequent loss of Danish ships in the nearby waters had rather dulled the ardor of the people in protesting against such accidents,) but against the Germans for having committed so 'unsporting' an act as to have fired upon men when they were 'down.'

"The next day the E-13 was brought in on floats to be patched up at the Navy Yard. Photographs of her were sold in the streets, and all Copenhagen went down to the water to see the craft.

"According to the reports which I heard that day, the E-13 had been one of a flotilla of English submarines which got past the German patrols at the entrance of the Baltic All the others passed through in safety. The waters in the Sound at this point are shallow, and the E-13 ran aground early in the morning on the shoals of Saltholm. Later in the day, as she lay helpless on the shore, her presence was discovered by a Danish patrol boat, which notified her Captain, Lieutenant Commander Layton that he would have twenty-four hours to get off and save himself from the Germans lurking in the vicinity as best he might. What damage the E-13 had received at that time I do not know, but apparently she was quite helpless. In the ordinary course of things she would have been interned by the Danes, after she had been refloated. A protest would have been sent to England, no doubt, and that would have ended the matter till the coming of peace.

"But a German torpedo boat appeared on the scene, hot-foot on the heels of the Danes. She hung about for a short while until she had sized up the situation, and then steamed away in the distance. Act three of the drama was the appearance of either a German Zeppelin or an airship (the accounts vary), which scouted about for a time and then vanished southward.

"Late in the afternoon, while the Danish patrol boats were still standing by, two German torpedo boats appeared. It was said that one of them hoisted a commercial signal. Without waiting for an answer, one of the Germans fired a torpedo at the submarine point blank. The torpedo exploded in the shoal near the submarine, sending water and sand flying in a great tower of spray and mud.

"When the spray cleared away, and the Germans saw that they had missed their prey, they opened fire with all their guns in a terrific salvo. With their boat riddled with shrapnel shot, and afire fore and aft, the Englishmen took to the water, every man Jack of them. While they were in the water, swimming toward the Danish boats, the Germans continued their killing fourteen of the English like rats. They hadn't a ghost of a chance. The other fifteen, officers and men, got away more by luck than anything else, and were fished out of the water by a boat sent out by the Danes, which put out directly between the submarine and the Germans The Germans I suppose, not wishing to risk so flagrant a breach of neutrality as to commit a deliberate act of war upon the Danes, which firing upon the rescue boat would have constituted, turned tail and steamed away

"The next day the bodies of the fourteen sailors were brought into Copenhagen. All flags were at half-mast, and it was reported that a warship of the Danish navy would be commissioned to carry the bodies of the sailors to England.

"The funeral was attended by members of the Danish Cabinet and a number of high officials, and was made a public affair. The whole incident, in Copenhagen, was somewhat similar to our own feeling after the sinking of the Lusitania. The Danes, however, knew that to enter the war against Germany would be practically an act of national suicide, so the belligerent note in the American press at the time of the Lusitania tragedy was absent at Copenhagen. The whole affair did not tend to soften the hearts of a people who still resent Germany's seizure of the rich southern provinces of Schleswig-Holstein and Lauenburg in 1864. The Danes expect England to give them the E-13 to augment their navy."

GREECE IS MORE FAVOURABLE TO ENTENTE POWERS

LONDON, Nov 4 In official Greek circles an attitude more favourable to the Entente Allies apparently has been assumed. Reuter's correspondent at Athens telegraphs that simultaneously with the official denial of reports of Greece's hostility toward the Entente Powers came a change in tone of the Ministerial press, which is now publishing articles in favour of the Allies. These articles presumably are inspired.

Notwithstanding the drift of opinion, it is maintained that the neutrality of Greece will be adhered to as long as possible. The correspondent says there are indications that any attempt to change the policy of the government would result in the fall of the Cabinet.

FOUND RUMANIANS CLAMOURING FOR WAR

Army Ready to Take the Field With Allies, Says G.G. Rice, American Oil Engineer

TEUTONS SHORT OF FOOD No Meat in Diet of Poor—Hungarians Have to Maintain Relatives in Trenches.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—George G. Rice of Texas, an oil engineer, who for several years past has been in the employ of the Rumanian branch of one of the large American oil corporations and who left Bucharest, the Rumanian capital, about three weeks ago, arrived here yesterday and among other things reported that all Bucharest was clamoring for war on the side of the Entente Allies. Mr. Rice traveled with another American engineer who has lived in Rumania many years and came home through Hungary, Austria, southern Germany and Holland. In the first three-named countries he saw signs everywhere of a food shortage.

"In Bucharest," said Mr. Rice, "there are one or more demonstrations every day by the populace, who wildly demand of the authorities that Rumania get into the war on the side of Great Britain, France and their Allies. Up to the time I left not a single demonstration in favor of the Teutons occurred, and to the onlooker it appeared that the entire population was heart and soul in sympathy with the nations of the Quadruple Entente. I have heard Rumanians even go so far as to say that in the event the Government tried to swing the nation to the side of the Teutons there would follow a great uprising to dethrone the King and create a Republic, with Jonescu, the former Premier, as President.

"However, nothing like this is going to happen, for the King has the same views as has the majority of the army, and the army, as everybody knows, sympathizes with the Allies. With the late King Carol, who sympathizes with the Teutons, it was different But Ferdinand is with his people and shares their views on the present war. The warehouses are stocked with supplies and the army is ready to answer the call at a moment's notice."

When he arrived at the Rumanian frontier town of Predeal and crossed into Hungary, Mr. Rice said, his companion and himself were met by Hungarian army officers, who seized their steamship tickets to New York. No reason for the seizure was given, but before the travelers arrived at Budapest they received a telegram telling them that the tickets would be returned to them through the American Counsul General at Budapest. This was done. Mr. Rice does not know yet why they were seived in the first place.

"All through Hungary we were stopped, it seemed every few yards, and examined and questioned by the military authorities," added Mr Rice "and if there is anything in my history or that of my companion that they did not find out I would surely like to know what it is. Of course, I don't blame them for being careful and keeping tab on all strangers, but I think they might let one travel a mile or two, now and then, in peace. The same rigid surveillance was followed as we passed through Austria, and to a perhaps lesser degree during our journey through Southern Germany on our way to the Dutch frontier."

"How about food conditions in the countries through which you passed?" Mr. Rice was asked

"The food situation in Austria-Hungary and in Germany is a very serious problem at this time and don't make any mistake about that," he answered, "and at every place we stopped the evidence that such is the case was to be had. In Budapest, for instance, prices are mountain high. I remembered buying a very small piece of a very small chicken, and it cost me $1.20, and prices for other articles of food were correspondingly high. I also found out while in Hungary that the parents and relatives of soldiers fighting in the Hungarian armies are compelled to furnish or pay for the food eaten by their menfolk who are fighting for Austria-Hungary and Germany. If they can't send the food to the men, they have to pay the Government Commissary for it. You can imagine what a hardship this entails, particularly on the poor people, all of whose able-bodied men have long since been called to the colors."

"How about Austria?"

"We did not stop for any length of time at any of the Austrian cities, but from what we heard the situation is on a par with that in Hungary."

"And how about Germany?"

"I am not a military man, but as it impressed me the situation there is very serious, at least in those parts of the country through which I passed. I was particularly impressed by the extreme youth of the new levies of troops now in training in Germany. At every city and town through which we passed these boys, who appeared to be about 17 years old on the average were drilling.

"At Frankfort, we were stopped for a day or two, I had a chance to look around and observe. The price of food there, especially meat, is already beyond the reach of the poor. Ham costs $1 a pound, and the other meats were correspondingly high. A laboring man with whom I talked to told me that meat was no longer included in the diet of the poorer people."

"Did you note any warlike preparations on the frontier between Hungary and Rumania?"

"Yes, the Carpathian hills on the Hungarian side were just swarming with men. Guns dotted the sides and summits of every hill and every gun pointed toward the Roumanian frontier. The country to which I have reference is that part of the Hungarian frontier of which the towns of Torzburg and Rosenau are the centres."

AUSTRIAN ARTILLERY OFFICER LOCATES ITALIAN BATTERY

Writer in Vossische Zeitung Describes Episode of the Fighting on the Italian Front by Men and Guns That Already Have Served in Other Regions

"Our position on the plateau," he writes, "had been furiously bombarded through the night by the Italian artillery. We were able to locate most of the batteries, but there was one which kept up a incessant fire until dawn, which greatly puzzled us.

"The sun was rising behind the mist in the Adriatic, which we could plainly see from our elevation. I had just been awakened by a tremendous roar, wrapped my blanket about me and came forth to see what it all meant. Captain Laytos was already peering through his telescope. His high coat collar was turned up to protect his throat and ears from the cold, and his hands were buried deep in his pockets. Captain Laytos is a Hungarian artillerynan, thirty years of age; has been twice wounded, and has just been granted a six weeks' leave, but he refuses to leave his battery. He is an ideal soldier, his chest is covered with decorations and he now commands the battery.

"He comes down from his position at the telescope and carefully studies the map. He lights a cigarette and again mounts his high chair in front of the telescope. He calls Prentelli, who knows the location of every stone within a radius of twenty kilometres, and asks about the house. It stands about one hundred metres to the left, near the cross roads, and was painted white a few months ago.

"'Look through the glass and tell me if you see anything strange about it,' said the captain.

"'It is not all white, here and there it is marked by what appear like dark spots.'

"'Precisely,' said the captain. 'That is where this battery is located. The Italians have placed their guns in the rooms of that house. But we'll fix them.'

"Captain Laytos and Lieutenant Wehler study the map, figuring out the distance. The elevation and angle are given over the telephone wire. The captain hands me a cigar.

"'You have time to light a cigar,' he says, 'before we fire. We shall fire in thirty-five seconds. Take a look through the glass and see the result.

"Captain Laytos takes out his watch and begins to count the seconds as I look through the telescope. I see the white house bathed in the morning sunshine, and I see also on the road leading to it a wagon creeping along. I feel like crying out to the wagon party to get under cover, and almost simultaneously I hope that our shells will get them. The captain is at his post looking through the telescope next to mine. I hear the order given to fire and at once there is a roar that shakes the whole mountain.

"'We have hit the mark,'" shouts the captain.

"Almost a minute elapses before the smoke disappears. I look again through the glass. The white house is gone; all I can see is a hole in the earth where it stood and the bare trunks of a few trees still standing.

"'That was good work,' said the captain, handing me a cigarette. 'It was the 1,200th shot of Our Richard, as we call this battery, so named after Lieutenant Richard Karner, who fell in battle a few weeks ago. This same battery was at Liege, at Antwerp, in France, and I don't know where else. Ask Bauer.'

"Bauer, a sturdy young chap tanned by the sun, heard his name mentioned and came forward.

"'Again, I do not see you wearing your Iron Cross and your medals.'

"'And later, when the enemy ceased their firing, I sat down with Bauer, who was in Belgium, France, Poland, Galicia, Serbia and is now here on the Italian front, and had him tell me the story of Our Richard.'"

ZEPPELIN RAIDS ONLY INJURIOUS TO THE ENEMY

LONDON, Oct 15.—The Zeppelin raid which occurred on Wednesday night, 13th inst., was remarkable for the outburst of hate which went up to the enemy in the sky, writes a correspondent to the Mail and Empire. There was no fear or panic, although for several hours there were one or two sanguinary spots in well-known thoroughfares where some unoffending civilian had been the victim of the Huns' murderous attack. It was as though bombs had been dropped at the crossing of Yonge and King streets. The attack was made at 9.30 in the evening, earlier than hitherto, and though the streets have thinned of late in the evening, there were large numbers of people in the theatres and other public places, all of whom issued outdoors to see "the invaders." With a group of night workers your correspondent stood outside and watched the aerial fight. Over our heads the anti-air craft guns were discharging rapidly. On every side of the Zeppelin there were flashes which were so near that once or twice the onlookers cheered, anticipating a fatal wound. With searchlights fixed upon her, the Zeppelin looked like a silver fish gliding through the skies. The numerous turns, ascents and dips showed real fear of the guns. When the people were not cheering they were cursing and using language which promised no mercy if the occupants were obliged to descend. The damage done was slight compared with the previous visit. A great deal of glass from broken windows strewed the streets, though some of this would be due to our own guns.

Experience has proven that the general instinct of the population is to get outdoors when these attacks are made. If the Zeppelin gets overhead one prefers to get inside a tall building, on the ground floor, but not in the basement as the police advise.

The Globe newspaper, which for some time past had been advertising a great meeting at which reprisals were to be advocated, was fortunate in the date selected. The day before the meeting five weeks had lapsed since a raid, and there was some feeling that the meeting would fall flat. The visitation fired the people and the hall of a great city hotel was utterly inadequate to hold the crowd that wished to attend. In scathing language Lord Willoughby de Broke, Mr Joynson Hicks, M.P., Mr Ernest Jardine, M.P., and other speakers chastised Ministers for neglecting this vital phase of modern warfare. Mr Balfour, Mr Winston Churchill and Brig-Gen. Seely were all cited as having promised that our air defences for the city of London would be equal to and contingency. Every person in the meeting had visual evidence that those promises had been falsified. Resolutions demanding the formation of an air Ministry, and also reprisals upon Cologne, Dusseldorf and other Rhine towns were passed. Four or five individuals were foolish enough to dissent. "Germans," shouted the crowd, and while Lord Willoughby de Broke sat impotent, the dissentients were belobored and then removed by the police in a less healthy condition than when they entered the hall.

Considering the very small material damage done, and the absence of any military advantage, it is certain that these Zeppelin raids must redound to permanent hurt to the enemy, since no citizen who has seen anything of these attacks can ever stretch out either the hand of friendship or even of commercial relationship to them again."

SAYS TURKEY WILL LOSE NO MATTER WHO WINS

War Not Popular in Sultan's Land But Men Fight Hard

The Germans own Constantinople right up to its chimney pots, but the wisest would like really to know what kind of pressure was brought to bear on the sublime porte to induce Turkish participation in the war to such an unholy extent. Whoever wins, Turkey loses; and one hears a great deal now about her rather pitiful protesting boast that she is saving the German empire by keeping a great part of the British army away from the Western European battle line.

It does not cost the Young Turk party much to fight. None of them go to the war. They are nearly all the Constantinople men have paid their 45 Turkish pounds, which buys exemption from military duty; and this money is used to bring men up from Asia Minor, good fighting men, but knowing no more in this case about what they are fighting for than I know about God's program for the day of judgment.

They are officered by Germans, but left to wreak havoc—when such a thing is possible—by their own terrific methods. And they will never run. That is not in their book. They will stand to the last ditch, and I do not believe it is an exaggeration to say that to defeat them will mean practically to annihilate them.

They will obey, because the first lesson in German discipline is, "Obey or be shot," but when discipline breaks in the melee, God help the Christian! They will fight on knowing nothing and carrying nothing for anything except the fact that they are fighting Christians. That point is emphasized to what their Mosslem zeal, and they are urged to kill—kill Christians—"all Christains except those with whom we have a covenant!" It will be a fearful victory for the Christian when victory is won.

They say the new troops going down to the peninsula cannot shoot that they are untrained in the use of arms, but I do not know. They will fight anyhow.

I have seen them by thousands—rough, terrible men, going out to war. I have seen them by thousands coming back. I have encountered them in the hospitals, where I have helped to serve their meals.

I have been with them in the operating room and have seen them go under the knife to lose an arm or a leg or to have their ghastly wounds probed and scraped. I have seen them don their ragged uniforms after their wounds were healed and go back to the front with a swagger and a smile, and I have seen just one among all the thousands sick from the shock of battle!

Man for man, I honestly believe they are worth their triple strength in any civilized army in the world; so it is not to be expected that Constantinople will fall very soon. The war is not popular. The men do not want to be sent to fight, but, being sent to fight, they fight.—Eleanor Franklin Egan in the Saturday Evening Post.

WAR FORCES DOWN RENTALS IN LONDON.

Landlords Face Serious Situation Because of Depleted Incomes.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Rentals of business properties in London have decreased during the last year. Even in cases where property is being rented under long-term leases, the landlords have frequently recognized the position in which the war may have placed their tenants, by giving appreciable rebates in the contract figures. In the Stock Exchange district 40 per cent has been knocked off the pre-war rental in many cases, rather than lose a desirable tenant.

Real estate men state that the big reductions in rental values have proved a serious matter to many landlords. The higher range of interest values at the present time, which is practically certain to last for many years after the war, also tends to of all kinds, as there is no likelihood lower the return on rented property of renewal of mortgages at the old rate of 4 or 4½ per cent.

VIOLATED THE PRINCIPLES OF ART

Italian Official Statement Says Trieste Was Not Shelled and No Cause Given For Reprisal.

ROME, Nov. 3.—The following official communication was issued:

"The official bulletins of the Austrians have admitted that the throwing of bombs on Venice October 25-26 was accomplished by Austrian aeroplanes as a measure of reprisal because Italian aviators had previously bombarded Trieste. This assertion is false in substance and equivocal in form.

"The truth is that on the afternoon of the 25th our hydro-aeroplanes bombarded, according to usages of war, establishments at Muggia and Pirano where war material was being prepared but not the city of Trieste, which is at a few and distant miles from the two places bombarded.

"These Austrian aeroplanes on the contrary, bombarded buildings in the centre of Venice and even the Piazza Saint Marco, damaging the church and other edifices to which none would attribute a military character, thus violating not only the most elementary rules of humanity but the open principles of art."

Meetings Continue At Assembly Hall

"The trumpet gave no uncertain sound" in Mr McCrory's address last night, in the Assembly Hall. The burden of the message was the word "afterward." It was impressed that "afterward" of weal or woe, lies at the end of the life of every son of Adam. Three Scripture were cited, giving the "afterward" of three classes of people. That of the Christ rejector, was taken from Hebrews 12-16. "For ye know that afterwards, when he would have inherited the blessing, he was rejected. For he found no place of repentance though he sought it carefully with tears." This has reference to Esau, who, after an unsuccessful and disappointing day in the field, to satisfy a natural craving sold his birthright, thereby making a choice which afterwards, when he sought repentance, or as the margin reads "a way to change his mind," meaning his father, Isaac's, mind, his tears could not avail to change. The inference was implied that many to-day, to gratify the cravings of the natural man for pleasure and sin, are rejecting their doom for eternity, which the "weeping and gnashing of teeth, spoken of in the Scripture, will not avail to change as the day of grace will be passed, and God will be manifested as a God of Judgment. Matthew 25-10. "Afterwards came those other virgins, saying Lord, Lord, open to us," was referred to as the "afterward" of an empty professor, with a name to live while dead." The context shows that they lacked only one thing, oil for their lamps, which is symbolical of the Spirit of God. If any man have not the Spirit of Christ he is none of His. Psalm 73, 23. "Thou shalt guide me with Thy counsel and afterwards receive me to glory" is the happy "afterward" of all Gods true children. All welcome tonight, at eight o'clock.—Com.

SHE SUFFERED 30 YEARS

Zam-Buk Cured the Ulcer in a Few Months

If Mrs. Jeffrey, of 31 French St., Methuen, had known about Zam-Buk thirty-three years ago, she would have saved herself just thirty-two years and some month of pain. Think of it! She says: "Thirty-three years ago an ulcer appeared on my ankle, which, in spite of treatment, continued to spread almost to my knee. I tried remedy after remedy, and was treated by various doctors for over 25 years, but only got temporary relief.

"The pain I suffered day and night was terrible; in fact, as I recall those days, I do not see how I was able to stand it. For years I could hardly walk, and was unable to leave the house. The ulcer extended from my ankle to my knee and was an open sore.

"One day I saw an account of a very bad ulcer having been cured by Zam-Buk. While I had become sceptical of all so-called remedies, I determined to give Zam-Buk a trial. I applied Zam-Buk freely every day, and the sore soon showed signs of healing. The inflammation went away, the pain was eased and I was soon convinced that after thirty years of suffering I was on the road to recovery. I realized that a complete cure could not be effected in a day, and persevered with Zam-Buk. Finally the terrible sore was quite healed. I have waited over a year before writing you, but there has been no trace of the ulcer returning."

For ulcers, abscesses, eczema, scalp sores, piles, cold sores, chapped places, baby's sores, eruptions, cuts, burns, bruises, and all skin injuries and diseases, Zam-Buk is without equal. Sold everywhere, 50c box, or post paid from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. Refuse imitations.

HUNS' SQUADRON BADLY PUNISHED BY BRITISH SHIPS

Von Spee's Boats More Battered Than German Reports Allowed

MONTREAL, Nov. 2.—The cruisers Gold Hope and Monmouth punished the German squadron off Coronel far more severely than was reported by German Admiralty von Spee. Chief Officer McLean, of the steamer Nerine, which arrived here over the weekend, was in Valparaiso when the victorious German squadron was said to be in sight after their victory.

"They did not come into Valparaiso," he said, "nor did they come near enough for anyone to see what damage had been done. The Germans in Valparaiso chartered launches and tugs to go out and gloat over their vessels, but they returned disappointed.

"What von Spee wanted most were steel plates and rivets, also machinery parts of such a nature and in such a quantity that only badly battered ships could have needed them. Fortunately the only firm in Valparaiso that could fill the order was English. The German warships had to go without. The order received by the English foundry indicated that the Monmouth and Good Hope had worked as much havoc as boats of their size could possibly do before superior armament, and the damage they inflicted was serious."

The Nerine is another German prize, captured at Port Said. At the time war was declared she endeavored to intern at Port Said under the Egyptian flag. A whole fleet of German boats eventually gathered there and at the leisure of the British Government they were told one day to get out, after being allowed coal sufficient for 500 miles. Hardly had they got out when a British warship appeared and signalled, "Follow me."

When the warship arrived at Alexandria there were thirty-two German ships behind her, ranging from big passenger liners to ocean freighters. The ships were full of cargo, and represented many millions of pounds in value. The Nerine is one of the thirty-two, and only two of the original fleet are left at Alexandria. The rest are in commission for the British Government. The Nerine was formerly the Helgoland, and is 420 feet long. She has two decks of [illegible] guns on both. The Welshman and Aoristan also arrived in port today.

The Proper Food for "Torpid" Liver.

Do you suffer from a sluggish or "torpid" (really a tired) liver. Many people do, especially those who work in offices or take little exercise. Such people should eat largely of active foods, such as Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal. This food consists of whole wheat and rye berries, deodorized flax seed and 10 per cent wheat bran. It stimulates and lubricates the digestive tract. It prevents decomposition and fermentation within the bowel thus relieving the liver and exercising the bowel muscles. The most active, nourishing and healthful cereal food.

At all live grocers. 10 and 25 cents.

Belgium and Large Slices of France and Russia Wanted.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—"It has been learned from trustworthy, but unofficial sources," says a despatch to Reuters Telegram Company from The Hague, "that at a recent conference in Amsterdam, which was attended by several members of the Reichstag, one of the members stated that Dr Von Bethmann-Hollweg, the Imperial German Chancellor, had declared that Germany was inclined to conclude peace on the basis of the cession to Germany of Belgium and the Meuse line, the cession of Courland, and the payment of an indemnity of [illegible] marks ($7,500,000,000)."

NEARLY $60 FROM AT HOME FOR SOLDIERS' CHRISTMAS

Nearly $60 were the proceeds of last night's patriotic euchre party held in St. Alphonsus' Lyceum for the purpose of obtaining funds to help provide Christmas boxes for the soldier at the front. The affair was largely attended and provided quite an enjoyable time. Miss Lizzie Pope won the ladies' prize, a mahogany tea tray presented by Mr. Gerald McFadden, and the gentlemen's prize, a pipe, presented by Rev. aFther Phelan, went to Mr. Geo. Giroux. Miss Kathleen O'Brien won the consolation prize. Refreshments were served by the ladies and afterwards there was a short programme of dances until midnight. It is felt that the ladies of hte committee deserve special commendation upon the success of the 'at home.'

ELDERLY WOMAN STRUCK ON HEAD WITH STONE THROWN BY HOODLUM

Mrs. P. Couture, an elderly woman residing on Patterson Street, was led by several boys into B. C. Braund's store, yesterday afternoon, and the information was given that she had been struck on one side of her face by a stone thrown by some other boy. She had received a nasty cut. A doctor was called and dressed the wound after which Mrs. Couture was taken home. This incident emphasizes the lawless practice of many boys in various parts of the city of throwing stones along the sidewalk and throwing them at each other, utterly regardless of the damage they may cause to property or the injuries to persons in the streets. It has been remarked that if the police could make an example of some of them this hoodlum play might be considerably lessened.

PROFESSORS TORTURED

Turks Afterwards Put Educators of American College to Death

BOSTON, Nov. 3.—Four professors of the Euphrates American College, founded by American missionaries at Harput, Armenia, were tortured by the Turks before being put to death, according to a letter made public here to-day by the Rev. Robert K. Smith of Westfield.

The hair and mustache of Professor Tenekejian, who had taught mathematics for twenty-five years, were pulled out by the roots. The nails of another were pulled out with pincers Seven-eights of the students were deported, killed, or exiled, and the young girls were carried away to harems.

The letter was written by an American connected with the college, Mr. Smith said, and was addressed to Bishop Casparian of Boston. It is dated July 19, 1915. The name of the writer is withheld for fear that he might be killed by the Turks.

Fourteen Professors were engaged in instructing 180 Armenian students, two-thirds of them girls, when the war began. The Turkish authorities took out seven of the eight buildings of the school. "Seven native Professors, educated in America, were taken from the college," the writer said. "Four were killed; three are still living.

"Professor Soghigian, head master of the college for fifteen years, was taken prisoner May 1, but, having become ill, he escaped torture. He was sent to a Turkish hospital, where later he bribed Turkish officers, and escaped. He is now believed to be in hiding.

"Professor Lulejian, biologist, said to be a graduate of Cornell and Yale, was taken June 8. The soles of his feet were beaten with a club shaped like a baseball bat, several hundred blows on each foot. His feet were so swollen and mashed that he lost consciousness. The Kaimakan himself swung the club until he became exhausted. The unconscious professor was taken to a hospital. One of his fingers were broken during this torture. What has become of him since I have been unable to learn.

INCLINED TO CONCLUDE PEACE

LONDON, Nov. 4—It has been learned from trustworthy but unofficial circles, says a despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company, from the Hague, that at a recent conference in Amsterdam, which was attended by several members of the Reichstag, one of the members stated that Dr von Bethmann-Hollweg, the Imperial German Chancellor, had declared that Germany was inclined to conclude peace on the basis of the cession to Germany of Belgium and the Meuse line, the cession of Courland and the payment of an indemnity of 30,000,000,000 marks ($7,000,000,000)

TELLS OF DAILY RIOTS FOR FOOD IN GERMANY

Dutch Socialist Describes Suffering of the Poor—Cost of Living up 64 Per Cent.

AMSTERDAM, Nov 3—The various messages received recently regarding the distress in Germany owing to the scarcity of food are borne out by Mme. Roland Holst, a Dutch Socialist, who has declared publicly that the extent of the need of the poorer classes in Germany was terrible.

Mme Holst says that food riots are almost daily occurrences. Some have occurred in Berlin, especially in the suburbs where women wait for hours and sometimes all night in front of shops where fat is sold, and yet thousands have to go home without being able to make any purchases. Very soon after the shops open the stocks are exhausted. Then frequently the women smash the doors and windows, and from time to time some of them are arrested.

LARRY DOYLE TARGET IN BATTING SCANDAL RUMOUR

There is just the suggestion of a batting scandal in the National League similar to that which caused the row in the American when Lajoie was allowed to get his eight hits on the final day of the season in St. Louis. The intimation is that they were overly kind to Larry Doyle at Braves field on the final day of the National League race when he registered four hits and thus took the lead in batting for the year

JUSTICE WHITE SUCCORS DISTRESSED OLD "MAMMY"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—An aged "mammy" of the "befo' de war" type waited for a car at Fifteenth street, near the Treasury. Some one jostled her and spilled from the basket she carried a varied assortment of vegetables.

At the moment Chief Justice White of the United States Supreme Court emerged from a shop nearby. He picked up the scattered vegetables, refilled the grateful "mammy's" basket, put it on his arm, politely assisted the little old negress to the car, handed the basket to her and replied kindly to her voluble thanks.

As the car started on, a passenger told "mammy" that it was the Chief Justice of the United States who had helped her. Feminine vanity asserted itself; she exclaimed

"Ma Laud! An' to think I had on dis dirty apron when I has a whole wash line full of clean ones at home. But I knowed he was quality sho' 'cause he's so fine to cullud folks."

THEATRE SCENE A FEATURE OF "BIRTH OF A NATION"

A kind of artistic achievement easy for the film, but impossible for the "indoor drama," is illustrated by the Ford's Theatre scene in "The Birth of a Nation," which opens a three-day engagement at The Grand, Monday, Nov. 15. The old-fashioned drama has long attempted to represent a stage within a stage, and some of such representations have been rather realistic. But in the film scene showing the assassination of President Lincoln, one sees not only the complete stage of Ford's Theatre in April, 1865, but also the auditorium of the theatre, the audience and the historical figures in the boxes.

Laura Keene is playing "Our American Cousin," assisted by E. A. Sothern in the role of Lord Dundreary. They are startled out of their mimic parts by the shot that Wilkes Booth fired. The audience has risen to its feet as the shot is heard and craues forward in a semi-pause to gaze at the great statesman whose head has fallen back in the stage box, and at the assassin, Booth, who is leaping from the box to the stage, and whose spur catches in the box draperies as he jumps, causing him to break his leg. This sort of historical realism has never been achieved before. It is part of what is meant by the so-called "new art" for which D. W. Griffith is responsible.

Spectators gaze at the scene with fascinated horror. It is too terrible, too awesome for applause, yet not a spectator but feels that in this impressive rendition Mr. Griffith has surpassed the greatest previous art achievements of the film drama.

TEUTONS SEEKING GRAIN.

Austria and Germany Look for It in Roumania and Bulgaria.

BERNE, Nov. 3—A deep impression has been made in Austria-Hungary and Germany by Roumania's decision that the prices of cereals for export shall be double the price of those for home consumption, and that payment must continue to be made in gold. The hope of procuring by way of the Danube some of the wheat which it is estimated Roumania has for sale is still entertained in Vienna.

The reason for the scarcity of flour in Austria-Hungary and the commandeering of flour in Hungary, which began Monday, is, according to Dr. Weisskirchner, Burgomaster of Vienna, the scarcity of vegetables, meat, and rice. This has enormously increased the demand for flour.

Dr. Weisskerchner is also busy preparing the public for a further fall in the value of Austrian money, which in Switzerland is now about 76 francs for 100 kronen.

Voice of The People

Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir, I was greatly interested in the announcement that Mr. J. J. Hartley intended to offer himself as a candidate for the mayoral chair for the ensuing year. In my opinion the city is badly in need of a man with calm common sense views, with no personal axe to grind, to fill the position of Chief Executive. I believe that Mr. Hartley fills the bill and those citizens who desire a change from the policy of the last few years cannot do better than support him at the polls next January. A vote given to a member of the present council who may aspire to the mayoral chair, will be a vote given to perpetuate the present system of mud, and waste and junketings at deputations to various parts of the country, without corresponding benefit to the city.

A new man entirely unconnected with the present aldermanic board would be a move in the right direction. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am, yours truly,

R. MITCHELL.

SELWYN RESIDENTS ENDORSE THE RECOMMENDATION FROM BRIDGENORTH

Ratepayers of Smith residing in the Selwyn district heartily endorsed at a meeting last night the recommendation passed at Bridgenorth on Monday night asking the Township Council to levy one mill on the dollar for the British Red Cross Fund. It is understood that this grant will amount to $1,700. Last night's meeting was well attended, and a cordial reception was tendered Judge Huycke and Col. Miller, who in two fine addresses urged the necessity of aiding the British Red Cross. Mr. J. A. Jobe, Deputy-Reeve, was in the chair, and Reeve McKee and Councillors Northey, Moore, and Nicholls were present. A musical programme was presented by Mrs. Clayton Telford, Miss Mahn, and Mr. Fitzgerald.

Premier Confers With Sir Wilfrid Laurier in Regard To Extending Life of Parliament

OTTAWA, Nov. 4.—Tentative proposals have been made by the Prime Minister to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, looking to securing an agreement on the part of the Liberals for an extension of the life of the present Parliament. Sir Robert Borden had a short conference with Sir Wilfrid yesterday on the subject. While of course nothing is being said about it yet by either of the two leaders it is understood that at yesterday's powwow no conclusion was reached nor is it likely that any conclusions can be reached until the government's proposals are formally submitted in concrete form and publicly discussed.

The Government, according to those who are in closest touch with it here, wants a definite agreement for an amendment to the British North America Act extending the life of the present Parliament for the duration of the war and for six months after the conclusion of peace. It will be satisfied with nothing less. Otherwise there will be an election.

That of course is a large order for Sir Wilfrid to make any pronouncement upon offhand, and in view of the fact that the Government need not in any event go to the country for a full year yet, there is no necessity for his giving any definite answer to Sir Robert at the present time. In the first place it may be expected that no agreement can be reached between the two parties until all the conditions are definitely set forth, when they can be publicly discussed and when the whole country can be taken into the confidence of the two leaders. The Government will first have to bring down its resolution in Parliament.

As to the proposal for a early blanche extension for the full duration of the war and six months more, there may be from the Liberals and from the whole country some valid objections, and some very necessary conditions attached. In the first place it may be urged that with the life of Parliament still practically a year to run it might be advisable to wait a while to see how the war goes before making any such drastic change in the constitution, and depriving the people of the right to say how they shall be governed. The life of the present British Parliament expires early next year but there has been no formal action yet taken to extend it. In the next place, it is doubtful if the country would deem it wise to extend the term of Parliament for more than a year at a time, leaving any further extension to the descendant as circumstances warrant. An extension for "the duration of the war" might mean two or three years or even four years, especially in view of the fact that the treaty of peace might not be signed for months after the issue of the war is practically decided. There are also many other considerations to be taken into account such as the Government's legislative programme, and policy on fiscal matters, transportation problems, economy and honesty in handling the public funds, and some definite agreement as to a real political truce with the stopping of all electioneering and election preparations.

The Government has since the outbreak of the war not consulted the leader of the Opposition in matters of legislative or administrative policy. It has put through Parliament fiscal legislation to which the Liberals strongly objected. It has twice contemplated a general election, and has held back only at the last moments because of considerations of political expediency or of an unexpected stumbling block may or of an unexpected constitutional stumbling block. Under these circumstances it is not unreasonable for the Liberals to want some political agreement before agreeing to give the present Administration a free hand for an indefinite period.

LINDSAY MERCHANT HAS DEPARTED

LINDSAY, Nov. 4.—Mr. J. A. Pearks, who bought out the old Terry business from Mr. George L. Stevens last April, and has been fighting a law suit ever since to try and have the lawsuit set aside, has left town. He dropped the $600 which he paid Stevens and left the business as he got it. The store is closed, as the owner of the building has made a seizure for rent.

Father—"Has that young man proposed yet, Gladys?" Daughter (blushing)—"Yes. How did you come to suspect, daddie?" Father—"Oh, he comes around here as if he owned the place.

Ling—"I believe a man should be master in his own house. There can only be one head in a family, and I mean to be it." Wing—"That's a very good idea, indeed! Have you spoken to your wife about it?"

THE LAST CALL

Fight it out in your heart, my lad,
It's time for the final wrench;
Home has its arms about your neck,
But Conscience points to the trench.
Your brothers fought thro' that self-same fight
Ere they rallied to face the Hun;
And where would your home be now, my lad,
If Conscience had not won?

It isn't an easy choice to make,
But is can be made, and must;
Shirk, and you bring the finest thing
In your soul, and ours, to the dust.
Your brothers wrestled with God, and cried
That God should leave them alone;
And where would your soul seek Heaven to-day
Had God been overthrown?

The eyes of our women search your face,
Our children look as you pass;
How does it feel to meet those eyes,
And your own eyes, in the glass?
Hard, hard for you now to meet those eyes
With their challenge, how can you wait?
But where will you hide from your brother's eyes
If you should come too late?

This is the last, the last free call
To go as your brothers went,
To go as heroic Britons should,
Not wait till they're fetched and sent.
Win your first fight, the fight with self,
Be swift with that gallant blow
Then, on to your second fight, good lad,
And crush God's other foe.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Famous Pugilist Having Excitement As Army Aviator

NEW YORK, Nov. 2—Georges Carpentier, the sensational French boxer who before the war was looked on as the most logical man to uncrown Jack Johnson, lost his first "bout" in the world war. Carpentier is now a sergeant aviator in the French flying corps, and has seen extensive service in the air.

In letters to friends here, Carpentier describes his adventures and mournfully depicits the loss of his first brush with the enemy, but he says there will be another battle., and when it comes it will be to a death decision—no throwing in the towel, nor faking.

Carpentier relates that he got his pilot's license after only two months' apprenticeship. He was given a new Maurice Farman 130-horse power biplane and was employed in reconnoitring the Alsace.

One day he was assigned to patrol duty, and while he paced his "beat" high in the clouds a German aviator, or "aviatik" came into view.

"I immediately gave chase," he writes, but the Boche's machine was much fleeter than mine and—rue the day!—he outdistanced me. I can only describe the feeling by saying it was like going into the ring against a man many stones heavier than yourself. I have fought and whipped many adversaries under similar handicaps, but, alas! I could do nothing."

During the chase, Carpentier's machine was hit twice by the German, who fired over 100 shots at him, but he himself was untouched.

Georges has had many narrow escapes during the war, but with one exception has come through unscathed.

The Motor Stopped.

On one occasion, he relates, his motor stopped dead while he was 1,800 meters (6,000 feet) above the earth.

"In all my ring battles," he writes, "I never was so near out, mentally and physically, as then. Then I hung suspended high in the clouds. There was an empty feeling in the pit of my stomach. And there was none of my seconds to toss up the sponge so I could sing away into sweet oblivion. Bombadier Wells, you remember, almost had me out once, but it was nothing compared with this.

"But I brushed the cobwebs away, spread my feet wide apart and hung on for the bell. By skilful manipulation of the levers, if I do say it myself, I managed to glide down. The Vosges country, though, is very rough and hilly, and I hit with a crash!

"The shock of meeting the ground threw me headlong. I was stunned for a moment, but came around nicely long before the referee started counting, and when I took stock of myself in my corner, I found I had a bad gash in the head and a sprained ankle. Quite wonderful, isn't it, that I should escape so easily, when poor, brave Pegoud (famous French aviator) was killed?

"I was found by some of my countrymen and taken to the hospital. I was only there a few weeks, and am now out and looking for another chance to sign up with one of the Boches, or a dozen, for that matter.

"It is quite possible that by the time you receive this I shall have achieved my ambition, and really brought down a Boche aviatik."

Says War Near End.

Carpentier is of the opinion the war is a lot nearer to an end than most people imagine. He compared the German to a boxer who piles up a big lead of points in the first ten rounds, only to be knocked out by one stiff punch in the eleventh. It is not impossible that the young Frenchman had in mind the present allied offensive when he prophesied that the allies still packed a kick in one paw.

The part aviation is playing in the war is tremendous, he says

"My American friends cannot imagine the grandeur, the magnificence of seeing a field of 50 soaring birds sail out into the sunlight, bound for some hated camp of the Boches. No one can. I used to think a ring battle was the most grandly spectacular thing imaginable. But, pooh! it is nothing beside feeling yourself soaring in the clouds after a real enemy—not one whom you have knocked out and you can help to his feet and shake hands.

"There is no handshaking in this ring!

"To my many American friends, au revoir, and wish with me that I may clinch my match with my adversary—and get the decision."

TY COBB TURNS FAME INTO CASH

Gathers Lots of Easy Money Because He is Greatest Player in Baseball

On the Sunday which broke the regularity of the games in the recent world's series, while the two contending teams were making the jump from Philadelphia to Boston, Tyrus Raymond Cobb, who was reporting the games for a syndicate of newspapers, took a hurried trip to Montreal where he received the neat sum of $250 for playing in a game of ball.

On the following Monday evening, while the teams were in Boston, Cobb took a little run down to Providence, where he received $150 simply for being present at a dance given by some benefit organization. So in two days the well-known Tyrus took in the clever amount of $1,000 for doing almost nothing except to show himself to throngs of admirers. At the same time Ty was being extremely well paid for writing or dictating his views and comments on the play of the world's series games.

Why did these easily earned bonuses come to Cobb rather than to some other ball player? He is not a member of a championship team and has not been for six years, yet he receives emoluments of this kind and those who pay him the money feel that they are getting value received.

The answer is very simple. Cobb is the greatest ball player not only of the present day but of all time, according to the judgment of many good critics who have seen them all and are competent to decide. He is in a class by himself as an all-round performer on the baseball field.

No matter where the Detroit club finishes in the American league race, Cobb remains the biggest drawing card in the game to-day. When the Athletics were winning flag after flag a few years ago they never drew such crowds on the road as the Tigers did, solely because they had no wonderful individual athlete in a class with Ty Cobb. Brilliant Eddie Collins has never been so popular a player as Cobb, which makes the fans anxious to see him over and over again.

Other players may be as fast as he, some are better outfielders, notably Tris Speaker of the champion Red Sox, but none has the power to impress the public with his work as does the Georgian.

SPORT NOTES

OFFER PANAMA FOR TRAINING CAMP.

A new Spring training camp was offered to both the Giants and the Yankees recently, R. T. Martin, formerly of New York and now Vice President of the Panama Canal Baseball League, proposed that the two clubs train at Panama next year. He stated that the teams would work under perfect weather conditions. Neither of the clubs, however, could consider the offer owing to the long trip involved. It takes seven days to reach the Canal zone by boat from this city. Other conditions, too, would preclude the possibility of training at Panama, the parks there having no accommodations for the players. Martin considered that the trip of the two clubs would do much to add interest to the sport at Panama. In talking of the situation down there he said that there was now an eight club league, the players being those employed in the Canal Zone, men from the Army and civilians.

ROYCE TO REJOIN GIANTS.

Steve Royce, the Hamilton College pitcher, who signed with the Giants a couple of seasons ago after he had pitched several games in which he struck out many of the batsmen who faced him, has changed his mind about abandoning the game and will go South with Manager McGraw next Spring. In one game two seasons ago Royce fanned twenty-one batsmen. Royce sat for a time on the Giants' bench and got tired of the inactivity. He quit the Giants and began to study law. He was sorry afterward, because the Giants would have been glad to use him this season when they were in the ruck. He has been in communication with Manager McGraw again, and the Giant manager has assured him that he will get a fair trial early in the next season. So next season Steve will lay aside his Blackstone and try for a regular place on the pitching staff.

BALL PLAYERS HUNTING BIG GAME.

Tris Speaker of the Red Sox and Leslie Nunamaker of the Yankees, following the example of many of the ball players, are hunting big game. At present these two are in the wilds of New Brunswick.

SOLDIER TEAMS IN SENIOR O.H.A.

There will be plenty of action in the O.H.A. senior series this season. In addition to the regular teams there will be soldier teams from the various winter camps in the Province.

It has been proposed by the Sportsmen's Association to put teams on the ice in Toronto, Hamilton, and London at this end, and at Kingston and Ottawa, and possibly another city in the east. The hockey teams in these centres would be taken care of by the association branches in each city. The Sportsmen's Association will equip all the teams and furnish a championship cup and medals, apart from the O.H.A. awards, so as to be sure the champions will get prizes, even though they are not able to remain for the finish of the season.

However, in another proposed arrangement of groups by the O.H.A. a better schedule could be arranged, and much money and time saved in traveling expenses.

MAKING LITTLE HEADWAY.

It is said that the Buffalo Feds., who have dropped $40,000, are not making much headway in collecting $30,000 to put the club on a firm basis. The same conditions are reported to exist in Kansas City.

1,000,000 LEFT HOMES AS RUSSIANS RETIRED

NEW YORK, Nov. 2—A movement to help the hundreds of thousands of Lithunians, Letts, Poles, and Jews, who were swept along with the retiring Russian armies will be undertaken here by the Rev. Dr. Anthony Mallauskis, a Lithunian priest, who reached here on Wednesday on the Norwegian steamer Frederik VIII. Before he left Russia he went from Vilna to Petrograd and obtained first hand information regarding the condition of these refugees, estimated at more than 1,000,000 men, women and children. According to the best estimates accessible, these refugees include some 500,000 Lithunians and 300,000 Jews. More than 100,000 families are involved in this exodus caused by the eastern war.

"A Russian General Staff Officer told me," said Dr. Mallauskis, "that as these great crowds of refugees were swept onward by the retiring movements of the troops many of them fell exhausted and died of hunger by the roadside. Others tried to ward off starvation by eating every green thing to be found in the fields and forests. Even the grass and shrubs by the roadside were devoured. In the stress and confusion of the time it was impossible for the military to afford any aid whatsoever, as the latter could not provide for its own needs.

"Some of the few Russian refugees found friends or relatives, it is said, but the other homeless ones, many of whom were swept forward to points as distant as Moscow and even further, found that no provision could be made to shelter so vast a number or to feed them. A majority of them were from the Russian-Lithunian provinces of Kovno, Suwalki and Vilna.

"I was told that thousands of women and children were living in fields and forests without food, many of them ill from privation and exposure on the long and weary flight. All are helpless, for everything they own has been wiped out. With conditions as they are at present, and the vast number of persons to be cared for, it is extremely doubtful if they can expect any aid from Russian charity in the immediate future.

"The condition of many of the people in the Lithunian provinces of Russia, who have been buffeted back and forth between the two great forces in two invasions and many battles, is not a great deal better than that of the refugees. In many cases their homes and property are lost and they are without resources of any kind except the bare land.

FORMER O.H.A. REFEREE.

Lieut.-Col. Hugh A. Rose, formerly a well-known O. H. A. referee, and commander of the 44th Lincoln and Welland Regiment, has been given permission by the Minister of Militia to organize a new battalion, to be known as the Lincoln and Welland Battalion. With 1,585 soldiers already in the field this is an ambitious undertaking, but the officers are determined it shall be accomplished. The regiment, in addition to the men sent for overseas service, has 525 men and 27 officers on canal and frontier guard duty, and has 160 men on the Island as a nucleus for the new battalion.

Of Course!

The magistrate was examining a witness, to whom he remarked:

"You admit you overheard the quarrel between the defendant and his wife?"

"Yis, sor, I do," stoutly maintained the witness.

"Tell the court, if you can, what he seemed to be doin'."

"He seemed to be doin' the listenin'."

THE CITY'S OVERDRAFT HAS BEEN REDUCED SINCE THE FIRST OF CURRENT YEAR

Number of Departmental Appropriations Will Be Overdrawn—Financial Statement Showing the City's Financial Standing at the Close of the First Ten Months—Receipts and Payments.

At the beginning of the year the city started out with an overdraft of $125,772.45. The financial statement issued at the end of October, shows that this has been reduced to $68,448.94. There is every reason to believe that the overdraft at the end of the current year will not exceed the last named amount. This despite the fact that a number of departmental appropriations are overdrawn, including the Board of Works. The last named department shows an overdraft of about five hundred dollars. This is not unexpected considering the amount of extra work that was done throughout the year and which was not provided for in the appropriation. The figures given in the appended report are for the first ten months of the year.

The fire department has over three thousand dollars to its credit while the appropriation for elections and by-laws is overdrawn by nearly one-hundred dollars. The report shows a substantial balance in favour of the administration of justice, while the account for garbage collection is nearing the zero mark. The Canadian Patriotic Fund has bisected its appropriation which is fixed at ten thousand dollars. The interest account has far exceeded the appropriation as the figures will show. The Manufacturers' Committee of the City Council has expended less than one-half of its appropriation.

In the revenue column will be found such items as dog tax amounting to $644, Police Court $1,[illegible]. Taxes for 1914-15 represent a considerable item. Receipts total $[illegible], payments $[illegible], and appropriations $[illegible].

EATING LESS IN BERLIN

First Meatless Day Brought Little Grumbling at Regulations.

BERLIN, Nov. 3—Berlin on its first "meatless day" adopted itself with comparative ease and little grumbling to the new regulations. The effect of the sudden change from a meat to a fish or a vegetable diet was to lessen materially the amount of food usually consumed, which was precisely what the authorities aimed at. It is predicted, however, that the consumption will mount when the people adjust themselves to conditions and become more tested.

Many of the largest popular restaurants specialized in fish courses which included omelets in countless variations.

The scheme is seemingly less successful with that portion of the public which eats at home. The leading shops of Berlin, crowding every available inch of space, and lines of people standing for hours with the intention of buying an extremely small piece of meat to last until Wednesday. Many shops were completely sold out.

BOMBS IN BELGRADE RUINS

BUDAPEST, Nov. 1.—A description of the City of Belgrade is given in an article by Margarete Vesnei, a Hungarian correspondent. According to this account, the shops are all guarded by sentries to prevent looting, and two sentries are stationed before the King's palace, where the staff officers are billeted. The small palace of the Crown Prince, the stairs of which have been blown away by a shell, is also occupied by five officers, judging from a chalk inscription on the wall.

The Russian Legation is in the heart of the ruins. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs, as well as the Austrian and German Legations, are untouched. Only the window panes were smashed by the force of explosions.

"An endless row of supply wagons," continues the article, "is proceeding through the city eastward, another row is moving in the opposite direction, and amid the traffic small groups of Serbian prisoners are being escorted. There are among these numerous soldiers who were cut off from their comrades and were found hiding among the ruins and trenches, waiting for an opportunity to rejoin them. One of them was discovered on Kalimegdan almost buried in earth, but supplied with foodstuffs for fourteen days.

"Two soldiers with fixed bayonets are escorting a strange looking prisoner, a woman at least 70 years old, with hands securely tied. One of the men tells me she climbed a telegraph pole as cleverly as a cat and cut the wires before they had time to fire at her. She was murmuring as they passed, 'I don't mind if they shoot me. I am old enough to die.'

"The outskirts of the town are totally demolished. The Jewish district is a heap of ruins, with not one house in it. The people who remained are only old women and children. The younger women have all left with the men and are fighting with them. Not even boys of 12 or 13 can be seen. They are also on the firing line."

TERSELY TOLD.

Had it not been for the British fleet Germany would probably have won the war in three months.

Germany cannot possibly win the war until the British fleet has been destroyed.

PROMOTIONS IN 93rd BATTALION

Hon. Major J. C. Davidson, rector St. John's church and for nineteen years chaplain of the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers, has been appointed chaplain of the 93rd Peterborough Battalion. Word to this effect was received this morning by Lt.-Col. Johnston from Col. Ogilvie. Hon. Major Davidson has always taken the keenest interest in military affairs and invariably accompanied his regiment, the Peterborough Rangers, on its training trips and visits to other cities. He has been a resident of Peterborough for twenty-five years and his appointment is a recognition not only of his good services to the 57th, but also of the fact that the 93rd is to be looked upon primarily as a Peterborough regiment. Major Davidson is delighted that he is to have an opportunity of administering to the spiritual welfare of the men of the 93rd, many of whom he has been associated with in the 57th Regiment.

The organization of the 93rd Battalion is being proceeded with as rapidly as possible. This morning Lt.-Col. Johnston sent Lieut. Widdifield and Sergt. Oxley to Cobourg to take charge of D company, which is to be located at Cobourg. Lt.-Col. Johnston was in Cobourg the other day looking over the situation there. The armouries are being prepared for a company of 250 men and the work is well advanced, but so far recruiting for the 93rd has not been brisk in Cobourg, there being only three men for D company there when Coll Johnston visited the town. Port Hope has seventeen recruits, who may be sent to D company, although the Hopers are endeavouring to hold them in their own town and have so far been successful. At Lindsay where G company of the 93rd is to be stationed there are at present 40 recruits, so that the total strength of the 93rd at present is about 350 men, of which 300 are in Peterborough.

Douglas Loomis, the Peterborough boy who for some time has been physical director of the St. Catharines Y.M.C.A., is returning to Peterborough this week to enlist with the 93rd Battalion. His services will in all probability be utilized by the 93rd as physical instructor, a position for which Mr. Loomis is peculiarly qualified by reason of his long connection with such work in the Y.M.C.A. Physical exercise and setting up drill are being more and more used in the training of Canadian and British troops.

It is stated that no medical officer will be appointed for the 93rd Battalion until next spring. Major Eastwood and Cameron will carry on the work here and look after the health of Peterborough's soldiers until they are housed in the Armouries.

Major Burritt and Major Hamilton from Divisional Headquarters, are expected in Peterborough to-night to take up the details in connection with the installation of the Peterborough companies of the 93rd into the Armouries. A supply officer from Kingston is also expected to-night. He will institute a branch of the Army Service Corps here to handle the supplies for the 93rd Battalion.

Lt.-Col. Johnston has returned from an official visit to Cobourg and Kingston.

Lieut. Widdifield and Sergt. Oxley left on the 11.40 G.T.R. train this morning for Cobourg, where they will organize the Cobourg company of the 93rd Battalion.

The Peterborough quota of the 93rd Battalion has rounded the 300 mark and is now headed for the 400 buoy. The percentage of Canadian-born among the recruits is steadily on the increase, so much so that although the first 100 recruits in the 93rd were 75 per cent. English born, the percentage is now fifty five for the 300 men enlisted up to the present. Three recruits enlisted this morning: John Abbott of Millbrook, born in England; 18 months' service in Royal Army Medical Corps; Clifford C. Ferguson, 543 Weller Street; two years in 24th Field Battery; and Percy Killingbeck, Hastings, Ont. The last two were born in Canada.

PARIS IN THE GRIP OF A 'SOU FAMINE'

Unprecedented Demand for Coppers Due to Trade, But Attributed to Germany.

PARIS, Nov. 1.—The "sou crisis"—sou is the generic term of copper coinage—has aroused considerable excitement, and the Paris press is devoting columns to the subject. For the past few months the scarcity of small change has been gradually increasing, and it is now culminating in a positive famine. All the big shops are forced to give stamps in change, replying to the complaints: "You can pay with them for what you buy next." Scuffles have occurred on subway trains and in street cars owing to the refusal of conductors to take anything but the exact fare. The railway stations are placarded with notices: "Have the exact sum ready; no change given." The leading shops are forced to buy copper at a premium—fines have been inflicted in provincial towns on persons attempting similar transactions—yet the mint authorities say that never was so large a quantity of copper coinage in circulation as today.

In the popular view German machinations are the cause. The Germans need copper. Sous are copper. Therefore the Germans seize sous. That is the inevitable conclusion. Persons are said to have been arrested on the Swiss frontier laden with sacks of sous. With the British there are nearly 5,000,000 soldiers, including the subsidiary service, all constantly making small purchases and demanding a plenitude of sous. The shortage thus created is naturally exploited by small speculators, who at a premium of from two to four cents on a dollar snatch a scanty living.

A new French three-handed watch tells both 12 hour and 24 hour time, one hour hand being used for each kind on separate dials, while a single minute hand does for both.

STRAUSS PUTS THUNDER MACHINE IN ORCHESTRA

In Musical Uproar "Alpine Symphony" Author of "Elektra" Has Surpassed Himself.

LONDON, Nov. 3—The Daily Mail announces:

"Richard Strauss's latest musical uproar, 'An Alpine Symphony,' was produced for the first time on Thursday by the orchestra of the Dresden Royal Opera, which will now proceed to play it on tour. Advance descriptions in Germany papers which reached London yesterday indicate that the creator of 'Elektra' and 'Salome' has out-Straussed Strauss.

"He has introduced a thunder machine into the orchestra, which consists of 105 musicians in sight and fourteen for supplementary noisemaking behind the scenes. A din will be produced by eight horns, four trumpets, four trombones, two base tubas, two harps, an organ and celesta, bass drums, kettle-drums, bells, cymbals, triangle, tomtom and a shepherd's bell. There are at least eighteen first violins, sixteen second violins, twelve violas, ten violoncellos, eight double basses, two large flutes, oboes and clarinets.

"It is claimed that Strauss has contrived to reproduce the sound of water-falls by the strings, harps, wood, and the dainty clang of the celesta, combined with the tremelo of the triangle."

LITTLE LADY BIRCHES.

Little lady birches, light and silver gray,
Like a fine point etching by a master hand,
Delicate and luminous in the Autumn dawn—
How your gentle spirits seem to understand!

As I lie and look at you, slim and straight and tall,
All the years slip back and back, down the rungs of Time,
In the misty morning, childhood comes at call,
And the woods of Maryland melt into my rhyme.

Little Lady Birches, white and silver gray,
Etched against the pearly dawn, delicate and dear,
All the happy years have gone, swept and swirled away,
By the wind of destiny, grim and cold and drear.

Yet your beauty comforts me, in the misty dawn,
Little Lady Birches, white and silver gray
Bending low and graciously to the winds of morn,
Greeting, woman-tenderly, one more Autumn day.

In the forest shadows, little lady trees,
Slim beside your brother there, yonder stately pine,
You bewitch and hearten me, bending to the breeze,
Trees as chaste as maiden thoughts, shy and fair and fine.

Little Lady Birches, white and silver gray,
With your proud serenity and your dreaming grace
Courage you have given me or Life's sorry fray,
You and I will greet the day with a smiling face.

Elizabeth Newport Hepburn, in New York Times.

FINE SHOW OF "MUMS" AT JORDAN'S GREENHOUSE

Lovers of the large, graceful and picturesque Chrysanthemum, have a treat in store for them next time they visit Jordan Bros.' greenhouses, Argyle street. Just now, the fine showing of these favourite blooms, in several of the greenhouses, is well worth inspection. The display in one greenhouse, especially, filled with many varied colours and species of beautiful blooming "mums," is very fascinating. Among the most attractive and largest of the blooms are "Shaw" pinks, Ivory whites, ping and white, the "Alice Byron" pure white, and "Brutus," a remarkable decorative bronze beauty, just introduced in Peterborough for the first time this season, the flowers of which measure fully six inches across. Another fine specimen, known as the "Willie Turner," is handsomely incurred white, with a very large bunch of bloom measuring seven inches broad by six inches in depth of bloom.

Jordon Bros. seem to have had unusual success with their "mums" this season. Over 5,000 plants are now all in excellent condition, and already the demand for them has become quite heavy. The results are very creditable to our local florists, and especially to the head florist of the firm, Mr. Charlie Clee, whose expert work has produced such good results.

Music & Drama

FELDMAN AND CHRISTE.

Feldman and Christie's musical comedy company continue to gain fresh laurels as their week's engagement progresses. The biggest crowd of the week was on hand last night to see "When Dreams Come True," a sparkling musical comedy that was snappily presented. The drollery of Messrs. Feldman and Christie, the vivacity of Agnes Geary and the singing of Williams and Williams were features in a most enjoyable production. A night at the Grand with Feldman and Christie persisting is a sure cure for the blues. Yesterday afternoon the matinee audience saw a clever presentation of "The King of Tokio." To-night will be military night. "The Girl From Kokomo" will be the attraction and the officers, band and men of the 93rd Battalion will be in attendance, marching to the opera house from the armouries. A block of seats has been reserved for the lads in khaki.

What Some of the Townships Have Done For Red Cross

And the Canadian Patriotic Funds —A Splendid Example to Other Communities Who Have Done Practically Nothing

The splendid results achieved in certain municipalities on behalf of the Red Cross and Patriotic Funds is a reminder of what can be done in every where not an effort has been spared to raise money for either of these worthy causes. The speaker at a meeting at Toronto has sent out canvassers into various districts who have arranged the times at which addresses will be given to the people, setting forth the advisability of contributing to these funds. Such gatherings are followed by a canvass and generally large amounts are collected.

Mr. R. J. Roberts of the Speaker's Parties, Toronto, was in the city yesterday. He has done splendid work in organizing communities for the raising of money for patriotic purposes. He stated that in Hastings a tax of ten mills had been levied on the assessment which would mean $2500. By personal subscription this would be raised to $3,000. Hamilton township would raise $7,000 and the sum to be strived for in Hope township (a rural which it was expected would be raised) was $5,000.

Townships	Population.	Raised.
Cartwright	1 350	$ 4,250
Ledcan	2,105	9,100
Clarke	1 041	7,000
South Monaghan	845	2,800
Hamilton	1,206	7,000
Hope	2,059	5,000
Towns.
Bowmanville	3,200	21,500
Campbellford	1,252	11,000
Port Hope	4,335	10,000

Russians Starting An Offensive at Three Points Advancing on Dvinsk Front

Along the Styr River the Whole Countryside is Covered With the German Dead as a Result of a Russian Attack—Germans Driven From Trenches Near Massiges

ROME, Nov. 5.—The Roumanion Government has replied to the German demands for disarmament of two Russian gunboats on the Danube, by the statement that the Danube was free, and the neutrality of Roumania was not violated. Russia may now send troops via the Danube to aid Serbia.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—Having checked the foe the Russians are starting an offensive at three points. Along the Shyr River the whole countryside is covered with German dead, as a result of a Russian attack. Russians are advancing on the Dvinsk front.

PARIS, Nov. 5.—Germans were driven from portions of advanced trenches near Massiges last night, though they reoccupied a small portion of them by an attack to-day.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The bombardment of Nish by the Bulgarian army is imminent. This army is now less than six miles from the Serbian capital.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—Two more towns have been occupied by the British in Kamerons, German Southwest Africa. Casualties were slight.

ATHENS, Nov. 5.—Alexander Zaimis handed his resignation to King Constantine when Parliament assembled this afternoon. There was a great demonstration in favour of Venizelos, who undoubtedly will succeed.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—British military authorities are forbidding the emigration to this country of young Irishmen seeking to avoid military services, say passengers arriving. This is likely a preliminary step to conscription.

BERLIN, Nov. 5.—Official denial is made of any peace negotiations whatever. All responsible officials here speak of a long war.

PARIS, Nov. 5.—A Berne despatch says the existing state of affairs in the Central Empires would shock the world if known. People are on the verge of a revolution owing to huge losses in the war.

SALONIKA, Nov. 5.—After two days' fierce fighting the Serbs are still holding the Bulgars in check northeast of Monastir. New contingents of Allied troops are arriving daily.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—Marquis of Lansdowne announced in the House of Lords that the Government was firmly of the opinion that no general election would be held till after the war.

SALONIKA, Nov. 5.—King Constantine has assured the French Minister at Athens that should Roumania join the Entente, Greece will be prepared to change her policy. Landing of Russian troops at Varna made a deep impression here.

MOSCOW, Nov. 5.—General Grifforiel, Commander of Kovno fortress, was sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment for surrendering the fortress to the Teutons too soon.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—Measures of utmost importance to the Allies were discussed at the conference of the Cabinet to-day at the first informal meeting attended by Sir F. E. Smith.

British Contingent Has Reached Serbian Soil And Likely Now in Action

British Force Will Act as Separate Unit But in Collaboration With the French Troops—Arrived at Guevgueli

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The first British contingent arrived Friday at Guevgueli in the Serbian theatre, according to a Reves despatch filed Saturday at Salonika but delayed. The British force will act as a separate unit but in collaboration with the French troops. Guevgueli is just across the Greek border, 40 miles northwest of Salonika.

Gen. M. P. E. Sarrail, Commander of the Allies' expeditionary forces in Serbia, returned Friday from a hasty inspection of the French front from Guevgueli to Krivolak. He was favourably impressed with the French front from Guevgueli to Krivolak. He was favourably impressed with the French positions which are strongly held on the heights of Babrovo, Gradek, Domir and Kapou.

The French forces advancing northwest from the Greek frontier have not yet effected a junction with the hard pressed Serbian army in the vicinity of Veles. The fighting in this district has been desperate and the Serbs once re-captured Veles after it had fallen to the Bulgars, only to lose it again on Oct. 31. This town, 23 miles southeast of Uskub, is on the railroad to Salonika.

SERB CIVILIANS IN TRENCHES

Fighting in Serbia has been far more desperate than in any former Balkan war, according to telegrams from the Bulgarian front received at Budapest by way of Sofia and forwarded by the correspondent of The Post. M. Momtchillow, President of the Sebranje, who has just returned from the front, is quoted as saying:

"In all Serbian towns and even in the trenches our soldiers found women, children and old men who had been trained as bomb throwers and who generally were quite expert. The civil population is taking a large share in the fighting and is even more desperate than the soldiers.

"There was not one Serbian village which Bulgarian soldiers entered—except in Macedonia—where they were not received with bombs and hand grenades from the hands of the civil population. Great numbers of bombs were found in almost every Serbian house. In many cases the Bulgarians were obliged to annihilate whole villages, the residents of which after apparently having surrendered, threw bombs into the streets at the entering soldiers. Even Serbian officers after being taken prisoner frequently hurled bombs into the faces of their captors. In Macedonia the civil population has not taken any part in the fighting."

AN ENVELOPING MOVEMENT

The gradual enveloping movement whereby the Austro-Germans and Bulgarians hope to surround the retreating Serbian army and cut off its line of retreat into Montenegro, is brought into clearer view by despatches printed in the morning papers. If Berlin telegrams received by way of Amsterdam are correct, the Bulgarians now are threatening Pristina, which provides an opening into Montenegro, probably less than seventy miles west of the Serbian retreat.

At the other end of their long, crescent-shaped front the Bulgarians are within sight of Nish from the top of the watershed between the Svrljig and Nishava Rivers, 12 miles from Nish. On Plesh Mountain they are within gunshot of the Nish electric works at Svetapetka, in the valley below. Heavy fighting is reported near Bela Palanka, a little further east.

ALLIES WERE IN TIME.

In the centre of the crescent the threatened Bulgarian advance from Veles towards Monastir has been arrested by the timely arrival of Allied reinforcements, but news of a Bulgarian column creeping around by way of Kalkandelen and Krushevo to take Monastir in the rear, has thrown the inhabitants in that city into a fresh panic.

The most important feature of the Austro-German advance is considered to be the strengthening of their hold on Western Morava by the capture of Uzice on the railroad, which is the chief trans-Serbian line. Uzice and Pirastina may be regarded as the northern and southern points of the pincers which the enemy is endeavouring to close on the Serbian army.

SERBS CHECKED THE ENEMY.

In their race against days—and even hours—that are to bring them the promised aid from the Allies, the Serbians have in the last 48 hours scored two important successes. First, they managed, with the help of valiant and violent rear-guard fighting, to extricate their main army from the net that had been spread about it by the Teuton invaders from the north and the Bulgarians from the northeast, east and southeast; second, they checked the onrush of the Bulgarian Pirot army toward Nish, and even forced them to retreat.

Both these successes are admitted by the Germans.

SERBS FIGHT MUTINEERS

Albanians living in the Suhagora and Krusevo districts of Serbia have revolted, according to a Durazzo despatch to Rome. A desperate battle between Serbian troops and rebels has been fought north of Tirana. The anti-Serbian movement has spread into Northern Albania.

BULGARS ONLY SIX MILES FROM NISH

According to An Official Report From Berlin

BERLIN, Nov. 4.—A statement dealing with the Balkan campaign follows:

Near Gradsko [illegible] operations of the army under our troops are pressing forward through the heights of the Kozjuk Mountains directly north of Kratovo. To the west that of the Zaturnsk-Petsa-Angelina line has been crossed. The enemy is retreating east of the Morava, our troops following. Six hundred and fifty prisoners were taken.

The army of General Kyaptsoff (Bulgarian) has taken Valakenje and Boljevac, on the Zepevar-Paracin highroad and is advancing from the Svrljig-Kalaint, six miles northeast of Nish, has been taken by storm."

AGED SERBIAN KING GOES TO FRONT

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 5.—An official Bulgarian statement, received here to-day from Sofia, says that King Peter of Serbia has gone to the front to encourage his soldiers and take them the news that French and British forces are hastening to their assistance.

TWO DIVISIONS OF BRITISH TROOPS

ATHENS, Nov. 5.—Two divisions of British troops are on their way from Salonika to-day to the Bulgarian frontier.

VESUVIUS AGAIN IN ERUPTION

ROME, Nov. 5.—Vesuvius is again in a violent eruption. Several villages are threatened to-day by advancing lava streams.

Panic stricken by their danger people are fleeing from towns and vine yards in the mountain vicinity. The roads are filled with fugitives carrying their household effects.

DOESN'T BLAME LIBERALS.

Earlier Efforts Were Not Favourably Received, says Northrup.

TORONTO, Nov. 4.—Mr. W. B. Northrup, M.P. for East Hastings, called upon Premier Hearst today, being in the city on private business. "There was every prospect of the parties getting together and agreeing to an extension of the terms of the present Government," said Mr. Northrup. "I myself urged that upon Sir Robert Borden. The Opposition appeared to be willing to meet us half way. But some of the Ministers were strong for an election last June, and the parties drifted apart. I don't blame the Liberals if they should be

ACID STOMACHS ARE DANGEROUS

A famous physician said in the course of a recent lecture that nearly all intestinal troubles, as well as many diseases of the vital organs, were directly traceable to a deranged condition of the stomach which in turn, was due nine times out of ten to excessive acidity, commonly termed sour stomach or heart-burn, which not only irritated and inflamed the delicate lining of the stomach, but also set up gastritis and stomach ulcer. Remarkable results have been obtained by the use of ordinary bisurated magnesia, which, by neutralizing the acidity of the food, removes the source of the trouble. It is foolish to treat the stomach itself, neutralize the acid and the stomach trouble will disappear. Irritating medicines and medical treatments are useless so long as the contents of the stomach remain acid; remove the acidity, and there will be no need for medicine. The inflamed lining of the stomach will then heal itself. Sufferers from acidity, sour stomach or heartburn should get a small bottle of pure bisurated magnesia from their druggist, and take a teaspoonful in a glass of water after meals, repeating in fifteen minutes if necessary.

Bisurated Magnesia is [illegible] St. N.Y.C.

TRAVEL WITH A ROPE.

Be Sure You Have One Handy if You Take a Trip to Italy.

The following extracts from an article in the Woman's Home Companion explains why no one should travel in Italy without a rope:

"Let me urge the tourist not to fail to provide himself with a stout rope—a piece of clothesline is excellent—with which to tie up the trunk which is to go into the Italian baggage car. If you do not you may miss many train connections. It is a trick of the canny Italian baggage master.

"When you go to check or 'register' your trunk at the railway station this crafty robber will try to stick his fingers under the lock or under the staples at the sides. Then he will shrug his shoulders and tell you blandly that he cannot accept the trunks for registration, as it is not fastened securely enough and if the baggage-man store any of your effects while en route the railroad would be responsible. The trunk must be tied with a rope and sealed, he will tell you.

You have no time to go rope hunting. You have to buy a rope from him. He charges you what he thinks he can make you pay. The price depends on how many minutes you still have to catch your train. Then he clips on a little leaden tag where the rope is knotted, and your trunk is officially sealed. It is a very serious offense to break this seal.

"Now, then, if your trunk is roped when it reaches the hands of the boss baggageman he is required at your request and upon payment of 2 cents to affix the official seal, etc., as aforesaid word, don't forget the rope!"

Momentum and Velocity.

In answer to the question "Is it not velocity that produces gravitation? If we throw a stone against a window of sufficient resistance with too little velocity it will not break, but if we throw it with sufficient velocity the window will break," the New York American says:

"We do not know the cause of gravitation nor of anything, but the increase of speed of a stone thrown is not the cause of gravitation; it is the cause of momentum, which is a product of mass multiplied by velocity. Momentum would be the same if the stone were thrown close to the earth, where the full attraction of its gravitation would be felt, or out in space trillions of miles, where the earth's gravitation would be almost infinitesimal—that is, the glass would break by increasing the speed of the stone as here on earth."

A Clear Wind Shield.

A doctor living in a rainy climate whose calls took him out often in wet weather undertook the problem of maintaining clear vision through the wind shield of his automobile regardless of rain, and he succeeded in making a prescription that would do the work. The prescription calls for one ounce of water, two ounces of glycerin and one dram of salt. This is poured on a piece of gauze and then wiped over the glass, care being taken to have all the strokes downward. The effect of the treatment is to prevent raindrops from clinging to the glass.—Saturday Evening Post.

Crafty Woman.

"What an insufferably conceited air Pinkley has!"

"It's all his wife's fault."

"What has she done?"

"She makes him believe she is horribly jealous."

"Jealous of Pinkley! What's her object?"

A PROMINENT NURSE SPEAKS.

Many Nurses in Canada and Elsewhere Say the Same.

Chatham, Ont.—"Being a nurse I have had occasion to use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription quite a lot. I always recommend it to my patients and it has been a wonderful help to many of them. I never knew of a case where it failed. I have a patient who is using it now and she is doing fine since taking it. I have taken it myself and got the very best results. I consider it the best medicine there is to-day for women who are ailing."—Miss. Edith Moore, 30 Dagge St., Chatham, Ont.

THAT WEAK BACK

Accompanied by pain here and there—extreme nervousness—sleeplessness—maybe faint spells, chills or spasms—all are signals of distress for a woman. She may be growing from girlhood into womanhood—passing from womanhood to motherhood—or later suffering during middle life, which leaves so many wrecks of women. At any or all of these periods of a woman's life she should take a tonic and nervine prescribed for just such cases by a physician of vast experience in the diseases from which women suffer.

Dr. Pierre's Favorite Prescription has successfully treated more cases in the past 50 years than any other known remedy. It can now be had in sugar-coated tablet form as well as in the liquid. Sold by medicine dealers or trial box by mail on receipt of 50 cents in stamps. Dr Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

SLEEPING IN CHURCH.

Men Do It Because They Are More Attentive Than Women.

A German professor who has been making a study of the problem declares that men fall asleep in church because they pay more attention to the sermon than do the women. Further, he declares the average woman does not try to grasp the purport of the sermon, that she is far slower of understanding than man.

The man will watch the minister every minute, he will concentrate all his mind upon the preacher and what he is saying, he will watch his every gesture and every motion of his lips and listen to every word until finally he drops off to sleep simply because he has watched so steadily, gazed so intently, that he hypnotized himself.

If the woman does not grasp the meaning of the sermon so readily, if her mentality is not quite so keen and quick, one would think she would fall asleep. But the fact remains that she has plenty to interest her. A man cannot look about the church and be interested in John Jones' cravat or William Smith's vest or Sam White's cuff buttons. He doesn't care anything about them, but a woman will sit quietly in church, she will hear what the minister is saying without giving much thought to it, but she will be interested in everything every other woman is wearing, and there is enough to keep her just moderately entertained and wide awake.—Chicago Tribune.

HAD FAITH IN HIS IDEAS.

Jules Verne Felt the Things He Wrote Would Come to Pass.

Anything new about that wonderful man, Jules Verne, is invariably interesting. And in the Paris Temps Feliz Duquesnel, who knew the author well, tells quite a lot about him that is "not generally known."

"I believe I invent possible things," Verne used to say, "which is very naive of me, because all that I write will be realized. Human knowledge will demolish the impossible." But if he believed in the realization of his imaginings his friends did not at first believe that he would be successful as an author.

One day, according to M. Duquesnel, when Verne was in the company of a number of his friends, he exclaimed with great seriousness:

"Mes enfants, I think I am about to leave you. I have the idea which, according to Girardin, is necessary to a man if he is going to make his fortune. I am going to write a romance in a new form of my own invention. If it succeeds it will be, I'm certain, the lode of the gold mine."

The friends laughed. "Laugh away," said Verne, "we shall see who laughs last." A few weeks later "Five Weeks in a Balloon" appeared and was an immediate success. He had found his "lode," which he continued to develop for half a century.—London Letter in Milwaukee Sentinel.

Promises in Politics.

During a municipal campaign in Chicago a politician dropped in one morning to see a certain grocer. During the conversation that took place the politician asked, "And I may count upon your support, may I not?"

"Why, no, I am sorry to say," replied the grocer. "The fact is, I have promised my support to the other candidate."

The politician laughed. "Ah," said he, "in politics promising and performing are two different things."

"In that case," said the grocer cordially, "I shall be glad to give you my promise, sir."—Lippincott's.

"Painting the Town Red."

"That expression, 'painting the town red,' is not," writes a correspondent, "the creation of some unknown cockney genius, as some would seem to infer. Its birth has been traced to 'The Divine Comedy.' Dante, led by Virgil, comes to the cavernous depths of the place swept by a mighty wind where those are confined who have been the prey of their passions. Two faces arise from the mist—the faces of Francesca and Paolo. 'Who are ye?' cries Dante in alarm, and Francesca replies sadly, 'We are those who have painted the world red with our sins.'"—London News.

Shattered.

He was a Hollander, just arrived in this country to seek his fortune, and he had much to say to his host. But he had great difficulty in regulating his pronunciation, and at times his words were almost unintelligible to his host's small boy, who sat in a corner of the room somewhat mystified. At last the Hollander departed, and the small boy said to his father:

"Daddy, is he a broken Englishman?"—New York Post.

Lost.

The mistress of the house had mislaid her eyeglasses. She asked the old negro servant if she had seen them.

"No'm, honey," said Aunt Missouri, "I ain't seen 'em. But I'll fin' 'em fo' you. Jess tell me now was dey in de shell?"—New York Post.

Not So Sudden.

"I have saved up $500 so that I could ask you to be my wife."

"This is rather sudden."

"Sudden? I've been scrimping for three years."—Pittsburgh Post.

WHO STANDS FORTH?

Lo, stand they forth! From sea and land they rise,
Clothed with the light of Freedom's holiest suns.
From sea and desk and mine and field and fire
Spontaneous springs the Legion of the Line!
They were pioneers and they fought for the trench,
They carved a way where the Flag fain led,
That the rest might go where they could not reach,
With One Flag nodding at overhead!

Who stands forth from those left behind?
Who is at liberty? Who for life?
The victor bugles are on the wind?
The dead are crying from lands of strife!

And never a cannon booms, but you
Must stir in your case, and never a roar
Of regiments thundering the battle through,
But you know they are calling who went before!

Who stand forth? And was India aflame?
Melbourne and Ottawa rose with a shout
Shoulder to shoulder, let loose they came!
Who stands forth? And the Empire's out!

Who is for victory? Who for right?
The Grey Mothers calling from east and from north!
The sea winds bear it, the stars in the night
Cry, Who is for liberty? Who stands forth?

Nice Griddle Cakes.

One and one-half cups rich sour milk, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon soda dissolved in 1 teaspoon cold water and 1 1-2 cups of flour. Beat and smooth and then add 1 heaping cupful blueberries. Stir it lightly and fry on a hot, well greased griddle. This rule will make four cakes fully as large as a teaplate. Pile on a hot plate with plenty of butter and sugar between and a tiny grating of nutmeg.

CHILE'S CITY OF HILLS.

Valparaiso Is One of the World's Architectural Curiosities.

The city of Valparaiso is built upon nineteen hills like Rome upon her seven. It is one of the most curious cities in the world. Its hills rise from three to eleven hundred feet high, and the city is ranged upon them, tier above tier, in sections that are separated by deep gullies, through many of which flow lively little rivers. Winding streets climb, as in Lisbon, the aid of stairways, lifts and inclined tramways up from the docks to the hilltops. The houses are modern, but not notable architecturally. Those of the wealthier people are mansions and have fine grounds, though many of the aristocratic families spend most of their time at Santiago or at summer villas farther south.

Everything in Valparaiso is distinctly a part of the twentieth century restless business world. The traveler finds as many comforts though far less of luxury that at Buenos Aires, which lies 1,200 miles away at the opposite end of the great Transandine Railroad.

The poorer people live on the lower levels of the city not far from the narrow strip which contains the shipping offices, shops and banks. They are industrious, steady workers, and gave me the impression of a virile, worthy, thrifty folk.

The tramway system was put in by Germans and is still owned by a German syndicate. The cars are double-decked, and some genius divided them into first and second class compartments, the first-class passengers riding inside and the second class climbing up by a winding narrow staircase to seats on the top. First class fare is 5 cents, second class half fare is 2½ cents. And what Anglo-Saxon would not prefer the fine sight seeing seats on top? Most of the conductors are women. During the campaign against Peru and Bolivia it was necessary to have women for car conductors, the men being away at the war. The women proved to be more efficient and honest than the men, and they have been continued ever since.

Immensities and Eternities.

Herschel in his day revealed the immensities and the eternities as they had never been revealed before and to us of the present day the universe is much greater than to Herschel and his contemporaries. Five hundred millions of stars are known—500,000,000 flaming suns whirling through space and carrying along with them in all probability systems of planets and satellites. There are stars at all stages of development, from the nebulous mass at the beginning of its star life to the dim red variables flickering as they die out into the darkness. This is the universe, "grand, splendid and sublime," which Flammarion reveals to his readers.—London Everyman.

Fighting Fires With Chemicals.

That chemicals will entirely take the place of water within the next five years as a means of fighting fire was the prophecy made at a recent convention of fire-fighters. In the large cities most of the small fires are now put out with chemicals, and it is not a big step from this to the use of guns for shooting powdered chemical or chemical bombs into buildings for putting out big blazes. As an argument against the use of water, a case was referred to where in a small fire the fire loss was $5,000, while the loss due to the water poured on the flames amounted to no less than $20,000.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Love and the Locksmith.

By Edward Waring.

"Jimmie!"

Little Mrs. Barron's voice rose shrill and anguished.

"I don't care," insisted Jimmy Barron. "I said 'darn that lock,' and you ought to be glad that I said no more!"

"It is the first time you ever darned anything I wanted you to do," reproached Mrs. Barron. "You don't love me any more, Jimmy."

"Great heavens!" cried the exasperated Barron. "Of course I love you, Nettie, but when you ask me to stop and fix this lock when I have an appointment with Chilvers at the office at 10. Anyhow, it's the janitor's business to keep the locks in repair."

Nettie turned away with a little, hurt cry. This was worse than the remark which had started the trouble.

To leave her to the tender mercies of the janitor was rubbing salt in the wounds, and as Barron gave his wife a hasty kiss and hurried down the stairs he told himself that he would send a locksmith around to attend to the matter at once.

Of course the janitor was there to make repairs for the tenants, but he was a surly fellow whose breath smelled strongly of drink, and Nettie was afraid to admit him to the cosy little apartment they called home.

For more than a week they had been having trouble with the lock that Barron had added to the fastenings provided by the landlord. There was a burglar scare in the city, and apartment houses were the favorite points of attack.

Jimmie felt that, having spent the better part of Sunday afternoon putting the lock on, Nettie could not very well expect him to keep it in repair. Thus had started the first quarrel they had had since their marriage, and Barron took the car downtown feeling anything but at ease with all the world.

The Chilvers interview was satisfactory in the extreme. It was late in the afternoon when the details were concluded, and Jimmie had entered upon a contract which meant the successful outcome of the business venture in which he had engaged.

To cap the climax it had been arranged that Chilvers, who was an out of town man, should spend the evening at the club with Jimmie, so it was past midnight when Barron reached home.

The elevator stopped running at 12 o'clock, and Jimmie toiled up the three flights of stairs to his apartment. Pinned to the door was a sheet of paper, and on it the words, "I have gone to mother's."

Jimmie felt the cold perspiration below his forehead. It had come, then. He always had thought that "going to mother's" was merely a creation of the newspaper humorist, but it was true. Nettie had probably grieved over his refusal to fix the lock and had ended by going home to her mother.

Mechanically he turned and descended the stairs. He did not want to enter the deserted apartment. It was home no longer with Nettie gone. He did not know just where he wanted to go or what he wanted to do, but he wanted to get away from the place where they had been so happy together, he wanted to walk in the cool night air and to realize what it all meant to him. He was passionately attached to Nettie, and he had not dreamed that they ever could be separated.

He thought dumbly of the dark, silent apartment and shuddered. He would have to move from there and go to a hotel to live. He never could enter the deserted home again. It would be like violating the tomb of their dead happiness.

He did not blame Nettie, but he bitterly reproached himself. He knew how timid Nettie was. She had feared the surly looking janitor, and she could not even speak of burglars without a little shudder, and her husband had brutally told her that he would be darned if he would fix the door and had flung away, leaving her with only the insecure protection of the flimsy lock provided by the landlord. And this was a lock that even a child could open with the blade of a knife when the Yale lock would not work.

Perhaps the burglars had come. He rather hoped they had. He hoped that they had taken everything. It would be horrible to have to give directions for the storage of the furniture which they had selected with such loving care.

There was a sentiment attached to every chair, and tears started in his tired eyes as he remembered the little footstool Nettie had insisted upon buying, though she would not tell him what she wished it so particularly for.

It had become her favorite seat when he came in tired from the office, and she cuddled down against his side, the golden head resting comfortably on his shoulder while he told her the story of his day. He changed his mind about the burglars. He did not want them to carry off the little footstool.

As he pondered the situation Jimmie trudged onward and gave no heed to his direction. It was almost with a shock that he found himself turning in at a gate and realized that mechanically he had walked all the way to Nettie's mother's, three long miles.

There was a light in the window of the room that had been Nettie's in their courtship days. He recalled the nights when he had passed the house just to see the light in the window and to know that all was well with her.

Now there was the light, but nothing was well. For an instant a woman's form was silhouetted against the shade, and Barron came to a sudden decision. There was an all night drug store on the corner. He would call her up and sue for pardon.

It seemed hours before there was an answer to his ringing, but at last it came, and it was Nettie's sweetly serious voice that replied.

"It's Jimmie," he said brokenly. "I got your note."

"It served you right," said Nettie severely.

"I know it does," admitted Barron. "I really meant to send a man around, but the Chilvers matter drove the thought from my head and I forgot all about it."

"You have only yourself to blame," she reminded. "I asked you hundreds of times to fix the lock."

"Only about eight," corrected Barron, "but I was a brute not to do it the first time you asked. After this you won't have to ask me to do a thing a second time, dear."

Barron regarded himself in the mirrored wall contentedly. It was an inspiration to treat the matter as though there had been no separation.

"Did the burglars get in?" asked Nettie interestedly.

"I don't think so," was the eager response. "But look here, Nettie. If I promised that I will always do the thing you ask me to will you—be friends again, dear? When I came home and found that you had left me I broke down. I walked out here from our place and never realized that I had walked so far until I found myself turning in at your gate."

There was a choking sound over the wire, and Jimmie looked hopeful. If she was crying it was a sign that she might relent.

"Where are you now?" asked the voice.

"Down at the corner," was the prompt reply. "Won't you let me come over and see you, dear?"

"You may come," assented Nettie, and Jimmie tore out of the place without even stopping to hang up the receiver. He sped up the street, and a few moments later he was on the steps and Nettie was standing in the doorway to welcome him.

As the door closed behind them a pair of soft arms were thrown about his neck and soft lips pressed his cheek.

"Jimmie, you're the absurdest boy," declared the little wife lovingly. "You didn't even try to get in the flat, did you?"

"What was the use when you were not there, sweetheart?" he asked fondly.

"You would have found out why I came to mother's," she explained. "Your horrid lock worked when I went out, but when I came home not even the janitor could make it unlock, and it was too late to find a locksmith, so I came on to mother's and left that note for you."

"And you were not angry? You didn't leave me?" demanded Jimmie.

"How could I?" she asked simply. "You were a bad boy, Jimmie, but I love you, dear."

Jimmie took her in his arms. "I want you always to love me," he said, "and I'm going to buy you a dozen locks in the morning. What is that quotation about love and the locksmith?"

Up a Starfish Ladder.

Fishermen say that starfishes are gregarious; that you might find on the bottom an acre covered so thick with them that you couldn't walk without stepping on them, but not find another starfish for hundreds of acres around. This characteristic gregariousness the starfishes in captivity at the aquarium sometimes show, as when they assemble, as they may, all in one corner of the tank in the angle, tightly holding on there, one above another irregularly, but still close together from the bottom of the tank to the top.

And when they have assembled thus you may see another curious thing there—namely, green crabs climbing from the bottom to the top of the tank up this starfish ladder. The green crab is not one of the swimming crabs. When it goes anywhere it has to walk or climb, and so on the bottom it walks along, to climb when it comes to rocks or other obstructions. It cannot, however, climb up a vertical wall like that of a tank. But here the starfishes, one above another in the corner, make with their bodies and projecting arms convenient ridges that the green crabs can hold on by, and so they climb there up this starfish ladder, finding in this, it may be, some diversion, while as for the starfishes, they don't seem to mind it.—New York Sun.

Men's Evening Clothes.

The masculine dress suit, if not beautiful, is democratic. It puts all men at a social function on a level with one another and saves them from the bitter rivalry of dress. You never find a man dejected and bad tempered because the fellow sitting opposite has a better tailor than his or has been able to spend more money upon his dress tie or shirt. The vanity of male youth must express itself in socks or his ordinary attire. The democratic dress suit is sacred.

When Prices Are High.

To get the best prices for eggs have them to sell in December and January. Chickens are highest in May and June. Butter rises and falls with eggs and that sold in December and January brings the best prices. Potatoes reach their highest about Aug. 1 and fall like a rocket every day after. Of course, all these things are highest when we haven't got 'em, but it's the business of every one of us to try to have 'em when the price is high, if we can.—Farm and Fireside.

A Lamb In the Street.

"Didn't you hear? He foolishly took a steer from a bull on the bear market."

A PAIN IN THE BACK COMES FROM THE KIDNEYS.

When a pain asserts itself in the back you may rest assured that it comes from some derangement of the kidneys, for were there not something wrong with the kidneys the back would be strong and well, and would be without a pain or an ache.

For backache, lame or weak back, there is no remedy to equal Doan's Kidney Pills.

They take out the stitches, twitches, and twinges, limber up the stiff back, and give perfect relief and comfort to all poor, suffering women who suffer so much from a weak, lame, aching back.

Miss Iva A. Ferris, Mill Cove, N.B., writes: "I suffered for two years from pains in my back. I tried several kinds of patent medicines, and was almost discouraged until I noticed your advertisement of Doan's Kidney Pills. I thought it would not hurt to try them. I had only used two boxes before I noticed a great difference, and after I had taken four boxes I was completely cured. I would not be without them in the house. I can recommend them to all I know."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE BERLIN TREATY

Signed in 1878 by Representatives of the Great Powers

The Berlin Treaty, the famous "Peace with Honor," was signed at Berlin, July 13th, 1878. The representatives of the Great Powers at the Berlin Congress here very well known names, for Germany was represented by Prince Bismarck, Russia by Prince Gortschakoff, Austria by Count Andrassy, France by M. Waddington, and Great Britain, of course, by Lord Beaconsfield and Lord Salisbury. The results achieved by the British plenipotentiaries were received at the outset with the greatest enthusiasm in Great Britain. Even Mr. Gladstone said that, taking the whole of the provisions of the treaty together, he was thankful to acknowledge that great results had been achieved "towards the establishment of human happiness and prosperity in the East."

Why Lord Beaconsfield allowed the golden moment for a dissolution and for an appeal for a fresh lease of power to go by, critics seem unable to agree. It would certainly appear now that had he gone to the country at once he would have remained Prime Minister until his death, and the great Liberal victory of 1880 would have been a thing unknown. But the most likely explanation of Beaconsfield's failure to back his luck was loss of nerve through increasing years, and so the opportune moment passed, never to recur.

Hugo Swiss Trade Gone

The committee of proprietors of some of the 3,500 hotels devoted to the tourist trade in Switzerland have asked the government to create a system of mortgages on their furniture and buildings, interest to start two years after the war. Their condition is desperate, as business has dropped to nothing. Every year tourists paid a hundred million dollars to Switzerland. The hotels had a capital of a quarter of a million dollars and a pay-roll of 43,000 persons.

CRIME IS REDUCED BY ENLISTMENTS

New Liquor Laws and Labour Demand Also Help to Decrease British Court Cases.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The report of the Prison Commission shows that in 1914 sentences were imposed on 114,283 persons in the United Kingdom, a decrease from the previous year of more than thirty-seven thousand. The change is ascribed mainly to enlistments, with the restriction of the sale of liquor and the great demand for labour as contributory causes.

The report chronicles two curious incidents in connection with enlistment. One man who had offended against the law procured by a cash payment a substitute who said he had committed the crime, enabling the real culprit to enlist. Another man made off with a bicycle in order to ride to a recruiting station twenty miles away.

YOUR BRONCHIAL TUBES

When a cold settles in the bronchial tubes, with that weakening, tickling cough, immediate treatment is very important. The breath seems shorter because of mucous obstructions; usually fever is present, your head jars with every cough and your chest may ache. This is no time for experimenting or delay—you must get Scott's Emulsion at once to drive out the cold which started the trouble, and it will check the cough by aiding the healing process of the enfeebled membranes.

If you have any symptoms of bronchitis, or even a stubborn cold, always remember that Scott's Emulsion has been relieving this trouble for forty years. It is free from harmful drugs. Refuse substitutes.

ARMENIAN ATROCITIES.

No Males Over 11 Years of Age Among the People Driven From Their Homes

Eyewitnesses of the horrors of the Armenian atrocities have sent to the American committee on Armenian Atrocities further accounts of the massacres and pillaging to which those people were subjected by the Turkish authorities. The following stories were told by subjects of the Allied nations who were permitted to leave Turkey and were landed at Alexandria by the American scout cruiser Chester. The committee's statement was given in the New York "Evening Post," says:

"There are at present in Aleppo more than 6,000 Armenian widows and children brought from the six Armenian vilayets. No male child over eleven years old exists among them. There are also 3,000 or such widows and children at and around Hama, 1,000 at Resel-Ain, and 3,000 at Der-el-Zor, 13,000 in all. These people were taken from their homes about four or five months ago, and forced to march all the way without adequate food and clothing, and many times were robbed by bands of brigands. Once or twice the government has given them rations for nourishment. It is computed that the number of widows taken from the six vilayets toward Aleppo is more than 60,000. Those who have already reached this city are mostly sick and emaciated, many of them have swollen and sore feet. Hardly 40 per cent of whatever male people were taken from their homes reached Aleppo. The rest of them were murdered on the way by the gendarmes escorting them. Practically all the young women and good-looking girls were carried off.

"These exiles are being separated and sent to Hama and Mosul in small batches. It is impossible to describe the attrocities and outrages committed on them. At every halting-place they are searched and plundered of whatever is found on their person. In many cases they are not allowed even to drink water to quench their thirst. The River Euphrates has been the grave of thousands of Armenians. Hundreds of children have been thrown into the water or left on the plains by their own mothers. The foreign travellers were horrified by the sight of decapitated bodies scattered everywhere. A Russian Jew testifies to having seen, on his way from Urfa to Aleppo, three heaps of human bodies, each formed of sixty or seventy corpses.

"It seems to be a verified fact that Zohrab, Cartkes, and Dr. Dagavarian, former members of Turkish parliament, have been shot by the gendarmes, together with their five companions, at a spot called Sheytan-Deressy (Devil's Valley), between Urfa and Severek, which has been a slaughter-house also for hundreds of Armenians of Urfa. All the Armenians of some importance and position at Urfa, including Rev. Ardavazt, the head of the Armenian church, were imprisoned and after horrible tortures brought to the above named place and murdered. All the property of the Armenians was confiscated by the government.

"It was reported that at Diarbekir, 1,000 Armenians were butchered. The tortures under which Rev. Mgurditch, the head of the Armenian church, succumbed, is beyond description. No male Armenian over thirteen years old is left in the towns of Behesni, Adyaman, and Severek. The corpses, mutilated and bound to each other, have been thrown into the river. Caravans of helpless and miserable women and children are reaching Urfa every day to be sent to the deserts of Mesopotamia.

"Three-fourths of the Armenians of Aintab have already been deported. An eighty-five-year-old blind women and a nine-year-old blind girl, were forced to leave with them, notwithstanding all efforts to secure their exemption. The magnificent and costly Armenian church, which had taken about twenty years to construct, is converted to a mosque and the Mohammedan feat of Kourban Bairan was celebrated in that edifice."

DECLINE IN IRELAND'S POPULATION IS LESS

In Political Sense Country is Becoming Self-supporting.

Dublin, Ireland, Nov. 3.—Ireland is gradually becoming self-supporting in a political sense, the latest revenue returns showing that for the past year the taxes come within $1,300,000 of equalling the expenditures. For 1913 the deficit was $6,100,000 and for 1912 it was over $7,000,000.

An official report on relations between Ireland and Great Britain shows how the proportion of the population of Ireland has fallen in relation to that of the United Kingdom as a whole, as follows.

Census	Great Britain.	Ireland.
1841	18,500,000	8,175,000
1861	24,109,000	5,800,000
1881	29,709,000	5,175,000
1901	37,000,000	4,460,000
1911	40,830,000	4,390,000

THIS SCHOOL GIRL HAD BAD FAINTING SPELLS

Was Weak and Run Down. But Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Made Complete Cure

The most critical time in a girl's life comes during the school age, when she is impelled by rivalry to put forth her best efforts in studying for examinations. At the time she should have healthful outdoor exercise and abundance of fresh air, to keep the blood pure and rich, she is confined to her studies. Is it any wonder that she becomes run down in health and suffers from headaches, indigestion, loss of appetite and spells of weakness or fainting?

The case described in this letter is a good illustration and you can read here the splendid results of using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to help through this critical period.

"While attending school my daughter became weak and very much run down. She was frequently troubled with bad fainting spells, and nothing we tried seemed to do her any good. We were advised to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and did so with most satisfactory results. I am pleased to tell you that after using five boxes of the Nerve Food she was completely cured, and has no return of the fainting spells."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Hamilton Houston, Justice of the Peace.

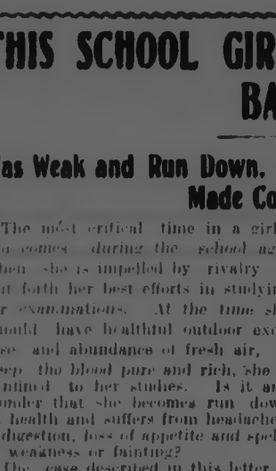
The reason Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is so effective in cases of this kind is because of its extraordinary blood-forming influence. By creating an abundance of rich, red blood it strengthens the action of the heart, revitalizes the exhausted nerves and builds up the system in every way.

The appetite is restored, digestion improves, you rest and sleep well, and the new vigour and energy is felt in every organ of the human body. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is doing wonders for men, women and children whose systems have become weak and run down. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S COAT.

By Anabel Worthington.



Such a coat as the one selected for our illustration is susceptible of several changes, giving in reality more than one design in a single pattern.

As shown the garment is full length coat has a double breasted closing with a wide ribbon sash slipped through slashes at the waistline, fastening in a bow at the side. The neck is high, with a large coachman's collar covering the shoulders. The outer edges of this collar may be left plain or finished with scallops, as shown. A double row of stitching is always good when there is a tailored effect. The sleeves are full length, made in the accepted coat sleeve shape and finished with a cuff at the wrist. This cuff may be omitted and plain stitching or a straight stitched band, with rounded edge, substituted.

By way of variation the coat may be shortened to the line of the hips, and in place of the wide shoulder collar the sailor collar may be used. This at once produces the reefer which is much liked for children. When this mode is adopted the collar and cuffs may be of contrasting material, and trimming will be an appropriate trimming.

The coat pattern, No. 7305, is cut in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. Medium size requires for long coat 2 yards of 44 inch material, with 2 yards of ribbon for sash.

For short coat it will require 1¾ yards of 44 inch material.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and specify a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

MAGIC BAKING POWDER

POPULAR PLUMER

A Sketch on the Poltest Man in the British Army

"This retirement, carried out deliberately with scarcely any loss, and in the face of an enemy in position, reflects the greatest possible credit on Sir Herbert Plumer and those who so efficiently carried out his orders." Such was one tribute which Sir John French recently paid to General Plumer in despatches concerning a western front battle.

Plumer is fond of saying that the only way to learn the art of battle is to fight. To him an hour of experience is worth a year of text-books. General Plumer's record of service dates back to 1884, when he took part in the Egyptian campaign, and fought with such gallantry that he was mentioned in despatches, and received the medal with clasp and the Khedive's Star. It was in the Matabele campaign and the Boer War however, that he made his greatest name.

"Tommy" has always regarded Plumer as the soldier's friend, although, on account of his regard for dress, he is known as the "Dandy General" and the politest man in the British army. He loves to hear a boy say "please," even at a cannon's mouth. When he was in South Africa it was always a case of, "Sergeant, just see that cloud of dust on the right." Try a little pom-pom, please. Thank you; that is very nice. Just a little more, please—a little to the right. Thank you." Mayfair could not have been more polite.

Much of General Plumer's popularity is due to his happy temperament and keen sense of humor which has led him to collect quite a number of military stories, chiefly of his campaigns in Rhodesia and the Transvaal. One which he is particularly fond of telling relates to one of his men who was in hospital, being treated for a wound in the thigh received on the march to the relief of Mafeking.

After dressing the wound, one of the surgeons handed to the soldier a battered sixpence, which had been driven by the bullet through the pocket into the wound, where it had been extracted by the doctor. "Ah, I know all your R.A.M.C. tricks," cried the wounded man, on receiving the coin. "Give me the other nine and a tanner. I lost half a quid."

OLD TIME RECRUITING

Methods of Enlisting in the Good Old Days

In view of the taking of a National Register in the United Kingdom, it is interesting to recall how armies were raised in the old days. In 1757, for instance, new rules were drawn up for the "better ordering of the militia forces in the several counties of that part of Great Britain called England."

To begin with, the chief constable or other officer of each respective hundred, or other division within their respective counties, had to make a return of "all persons between the age of eighteen and fifty years." The authorities at that time did not ignore questions of health as they are ignored in our national register, for the officers making the return were directed to state "which of the persons so returned labor under any infirmities."

Then when the lists were complete the men who had to serve were chosen by lot out of the whole number of men liable to serve. The men so chosen were then enrolled to serve as private men for three years or to provide fit substitutes. But of course all sorts of people were exempted, and here is a list of them:

"All peers of this realm, members of the universities, clergymen, teachers and preacher of separate congregations, constables and other peace and parish officers, articled clerks, apprentices, seafaring and seafaring men."

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair

You can turn gray, faded hair into beautiful dark hair, lustrous and soft, overnight if you will get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea Recipe are sold annually, says a well-known druggist, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied.

Those who value a youthful appearance of their hair realize that the gray hair must be restored or else prematurely aged looking. Now that we are all using this delightful old-time recipe, which is known to be one of the best, we can have our hair as we want it, without a bit of risk.

A Sure Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff, once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this just get about four ounces of plain common liquid arvon from any drug store; this is all you will need. Apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most if not all dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and scaling of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

LONDON'S GUARDIAN

A Sketch on the Life of Admiral Sir Percy Scott

Admiral Sir Percy Scott, head of gunnery defences of London, is probably the greatest gunnery expert in the world.

Sir Percy Scott is, indeed, the creator of modern gunnery. He invented a system of directing the fire of heavy guns in warships which was promptly adopted by the navy and copied by every foreign navy.

It was in 1896 that Sir Percy Scott electrified the heads of the world's navies by the remarkable shooting record of the ship Scylla. When he joined her the average of hits was 31 per cent. When he left her it was over 80 per cent.

It was Sir Percy Scott who invented the famous "dotter" target, by means of which Jack Tars have become the most deadly shots in the whole world. If it had not been for that, and one or two other ingenious target inventions by Sir Percy Scott, the gunners would not have begun hitting at a range of nearly ten miles, as they did in the Heligoland battle.

Two years earlier Sir Percy Scott had become Director of Target Practice, and the gunnery returns of the fleet jumped up so much that the German Admiralty ordered a secret inquiry and quietly asked the high percentages it had noted to please be explained to the public.

Among the more recent innovations in gunnery is a system of electrical fire control which was actually being fitted to big battleships when war broke out. Naturally this system is quite secret, though it is known to be one by which one officer can control a whole broadside, instead of each gun having to be sighted separately by a gun layer.

It was thanks to Sir Percy Scott that Ladysmith was able to hold out. Sir George White found that he had no guns to compete with those of the Boers, and wired to the Terrible in Simon's Bay for a few of their cast-off guns. Up came 4.7 inch guns.

During the siege he invented a new gun carriage, and before another twenty-four hours had elapsed two 4.7-inch guns and four twelve-pounders were on their way to Ladysmith.

Sir Percy enlisted at 17 years, and fought in the Ashanti and Egyptian wars. He retired in 1913, but was appointed to "special service" in November, 1914.

Wire in Warfare

Barbed wire was invented by a farmer about fifty years ago for the simple purpose of preventing cattle from breaking their way through fences, but the ingenious Yankee who first thought of separating this from its opponent. The information is supplied to the gunner who has the telescope sight attached to his gun on the desired object. This sight magnifies the size of the opponent and brings its characteristics close to the eye.

Paper automobile tires, made experimentally in Europe, seem to have the strength of metal and the resiliency of rubber.

TRICKY FILMS CHECK CANADA'S RECRUITING

Lying Pictures Supplied Free by German Agents to All America—Going Bismarck One Better

Bismarck, but why not? Bismarck was the man who added to German diplomacy the art of cooking, trucking, and ambooching and who established subtle laws by which Germans could with confidence and impunity lie and cheat. Bismarck died but in the last few months Canada simply ravished Canada has been the victim of the Bismarck policy. One fine day a good citizen of Toronto, enjoying a quiet hour in a movie theatre found himself strangely moved by a film that showed the pathetic life of a young man who had joined the army. The young man found the army cruel, hard, its discipline vicious, its officers heartless and the young man deserting. It showed his brother helping him to desert. It showed him fleeing to his mother, a fugitive, and him holding his weeping mother in his arms. Oh, it was sad! And it showed the brother who helped the boy escape a prisoner in a cell, to be dishonorably discharged from the army.

Police Found Plot

The good citizen was deeply affected. But when he got outside, and the cars went banging by, and the crowd went busily plugging along, and amid the crowd any number of happy soldiers, the good citizen reflected and remembered that the uniforms in the film were British uniforms. The more he reflected the less he liked the film. And when he passed recruiting sergeants standing dejected on the street corners he grew hot under the collar. No wonder there were no recruits with such a film as that to scare a man or a man's wife or mother! The good citizen discussed it with others and then took it to the authorities. The police did some investigating. They found, for example, films that showed in striking dramatic form the cruelty of the Russians, the wickedness and treachery of the French.

And then, to top it all, they discovered the Bismarckian plot! German agents and forces were and are at work in the United States deliberately manufacturing films that set Russia, France, and Britain in the worst possible light. There was art in it Bismarckian art. They were not out-and-out pro-German dramas. In fact, no Germans appeared in them. They were entirely set in Russia or in France or Britain. But so designed to show those countries as mean, cruel, cowardly, ignoble. Some designed for Canadian consumption showed the terror of war, the evil of the army deliberately aimed to discourage recruiting. The police have stated these things. They have the proof of them.

Power of the Movie

Bismarck corrupted the newspapers until his "reptile press" of papers bought and controlled by him in every country of Europe, became a by word. But what more subtle course could have been followed than this latest one? Newspapers, tracts, speeches could never reach the masses of people the way a movie film can. And a movie film is gripping, dramatic, a condensed argument, straight to the heart. The German agents did not get very far with this work in Canada. It was a little too thick. But they must be having great success in the States, not hindered by any law. They can go ahead and drive the notion of Britain's perfidy, France's treachery, Russia's debauchery into millions of heads, and so almost unconsciously, create an anti ally sentiment as no other means could do. It is its very silence, its dramatic simplicity that is so deadly.

The police information is that these German agents give these films free to the exchanges, making the system the more perfect. The Board of Censors in the various provinces are now barring all motion pictures dealing with war, or its side issues. And they are making so very careful as the Germans would be quite content, if only the interest of Britain and the allies gets past. Every little counts. That's the Bismarckian way.

Our Naval Marksmen

The fire of a naval gun is directed from the fire-control station, a small box on the mast. Here is the range finder, a large telescope pointed at right angles to its object. This telescope consists of a series of mirrors of various sizes and curves which [illegible] and six times between the gunner and the object so that he can get the range by a simple calculation and can tell at almost the exact place separating him from his opponent. The information is supplied to the gunner who has the telescope sight attached to his gun on the desired object. The British constitutional theory of Cabinet responsibility makes all members of the Cabinet responsible for the acts of each member. THE GRECIAN KING DEFYING THE WAR PARTY

BRITISH TROOPS HASTEN TO ASSIST SERBS

KING CONSTANTINE IS EXPECTED TO DISSOLVE THE PARLIAMENT OF GREECE

Will Not Make Venizelos Premier Again it is Feared---Man Whose Defiance of War Party Overthrew Zaimis Cabinet Has Been Appointed Aide-de-camp to King--Allied Fleet Bombarding Bulgarian Coast Preparatory to Landing Troops.

A FORMIDABLE INVASION OF BULGARIA

ATHENS, Nov. 5.—King Constantine apparently means to defy the Greek war party.

To-day, the entire press and everybody in political circles have reached the conclusion that His Majesty will dissolve Parliament instead of making Venizelos Premier again.

ATHENS, Nov. 5.—King Constantine has summoned the leaders of all parties to confer on the situation resulting from the overthrow of the Zaimis Cabinet, and it is expected the Ministerial crisis will end within twenty-four hours.

ATHENS, Nov. 5.—After the Allies' naval guns have cleared Dedeagatch and its environments of Bulgarian troops, it is believed to-day that French and British forces will be landed there.

The fleet is still bombarding the port furiously, under the direction of aviators, who hover over the town, signalling the range to the gunners. Military men do not think the shelling would be so persistent except as preliminary to land operations.

The Bulgarians have been driven by the bursting shells a short distance into the interior, but are said to be near enough to be ready to resist a landing. The Sofia Government has already taken over the railway through southern Bulgaria, and has tracks of reinforcements throwing up entrenchments and mounting guns on the Greek frontier.

PARIS, Nov. 5.—(French Official).—"A fierce and ineffective attack was delivered on our lines on Thursday night between the Aisne and Oise, in the regions of Puisaline and Quennevieres.

"We repulsed two grenade attacks, supported by liquid fire, against La Courtine, in the Champagne.

"In Alsace our aviators bombarded the Germans' asphyxiating gas plants."

PARIS, Nov. 5.—The French War Office this afternoon gave out the following official report on operations in the East:

"The day of November 3 passed quietly along the front of the French sector in Serbia. The Bulgarians are in front of Krivolak, and entrenching themselves 200 yards from our advanced posts, and are directing an artillery fire against our positions there.

"During the day of November 3rd fighting took place to the north of Rabrovo and still continues. Our troops gained possession of the bridges over the river Cerna, to the north-west of Krivolak. In the fighting in the Babuna Pass, the Bulgarians have been defeated after three severe battles."

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 5.—King George's appetite is better to-day. He passed the night more comfortably than heretofore since he was hurt in France, and his condition generally is improved, his doctors said.

It is admitted, however, that he still suffers considerable pain, especially when he moves.

SALONIKA, Nov. 5.—To help the Serbians who are defending Prilep, 30 miles north of Monastir, against the Bulgarians, the French extended their east and west front in Southern Serbia to-day as far east as the Babouna Hills, in which Prilep's guardians are entrenched. The town is safe temporarily.

ROME, Nov. 5.—Albania is on the verge of an uprising. Newspapers here are urging the Government to-day to fortify the country back of the Albanian port of Avlona, which the Italian troops hold.

The trouble is due to the attempts by Serbians, whom the Teutonic invaders are driving out of their own country, to cross the Albanian frontier.

Essad Pasha, who claims to govern Albania, is anti-Austrian, though himself a Turk. He favours the Serbs and wants to admit them. As most Albanians are anti-Serbian, however, a rising against Essad has resulted, and in their first battle the rebels beat him. That they will attack the Italian forces at Avlona is feared.

ATHENS, Nov. 5.—The thirty-six hundred British troops on their way from Salonika to-day to the Bulgarian frontier are followed by more soldiers.

The force, by a short overland march, can make its crossing into Bulgaria from the south near Strumnitza, where French troops are already operating.

It is considered certain that the plan is to divert the Bulgarians from their operatings in Serbia by a formidable invasion of their own country.

From the British forces' move in Bulgaria's direction, it was surmised here that assurances had reached England of completed Russian arrangements to strike the Bulgars from the northward.

PARIS, Nov. 5.—The Bulgarian artillery are violently bombarding the advanced forts of Nish, on the Nishava River Wednesday, says a Salonika despatch. They captured Nish-Kavola.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The Greek and Serbian Ministers have conferred to-day, presumably with reference to Greek help for Serbia, which the Serbs are admittedly hopeful will result from the Athens Cabinet crisis.

THE EXAMINER'S NEW SERIAL

The Examiner's new serial story, "Gordon Craig, Adventurer," will be commenced to-morrow and promises to be one of the most interesting in the long series of successful serials published by this paper. The story is cleverly written and full of exciting incidents, of romance that is calculated to drive away the blues and keep the interest at fever heat from the first paragraph to the final sentence. Don't miss the opening instalment of "Gordon Gray, Adventurer," in the Examiner to-morrow.

SERGT. COOPER GASSED AT YPRES HAS REACHED HOME

First of Peterboro's Artillerymen in The First Contingent to Come Back From The Battlefields of France Arrived This Morning

A VETERAN SOLDIER

The first Peterborough artilleryman to return from the front is Sergeant J. R. Cooper, 147 Hart Avenue of the 4th Battery, C.F.A. He arrived in the city this morning and went direct to his home. Sergeant Cooper is suffering from the effects of gas caused by the high explosive shells used by the Teutons. Prussic acid is said to enter into the manufacture of the shells referred to. It has a serious effect on the lungs. Sergeant Cooper was gassed at Ypres last May and is yet far from recovery. He experiences some difficulty in breathing and also a numbness of the hands and feet.

An Old Veteran.

To return home from the battle-front is no new experience for Sergeant Cooper, as he has been through at least two previous campaigns. It is twenty-six years since he first associated himself with soldiering. He subsequently saw service in Egypt, and was one of the few who survived the famous charge of the 21st Lancers, on September 2nd, 1892. Later he saw service in South Africa, and on August 17th, 1914, left Peterborough for overseas service in the present campaign. At that time Sergeant Cooper was employed in the Canadian General Electric Company's works. He was one of the first to enlist and is the first of the 24th Field Battery's quota to return from the front.

Sergeant Cooper was connected with the 4th Battery, which comprises men from Peterborough, Cobourg and Port Hope. He saw service at Neuve Chapelle and later at Ypres. They entered Ypres on April 23rd and came out on May 9th. Here they had a pretty strenuous time. The harness remained on the horses, as long as fifteen days at one stretch. Sergeant Cooper saw his battery depleted as the casualty list grew from day to day. Among those he remembers as having been killed was Sergeant "Dickby" Boone, Gunner O'Toole and a number of others. Sergeant Cooper has nothing but praise for the men who comprised the 4th Field Battery. He says they showed undaunted courage under all conditions and were never known to flinch. Their work was of the best, said Sergeant Cooper. "What 'Bill' didn't do 'Dick' did" he added.

NEW SHOE STORE

To-morrow morning the new Fienberg Shoe Store will make its first bow to the public. It will open out at No. 285 George Street, next to the corner of King Street, with an entirely new stock of footwear. The prices are calculated to interest bargain buyers, as will be seen by the leaders offered for the opening day. See the advertisement in another column. Mr. Charlie Feinberg is a progressive young man, and with the knowledge he seems to possess as a footwear buyer should entitle him to a share of public patronage.

PETERBORO' COUNTY MAY RAISE WHOLE 93rd BATTALION

Authorization of a Regiment in Victoria and Haliburton Makes Probable That This District May Be Called Upon to Supply the Complete Establishment of the 93rd—Splendid Start Has Been Made--Supplies Arriving at the Armouries---To-day's Military News.

That Peterborough city and county will be called upon to raise the entire 93rd Battalion, instead of two companies, as originally planned, is the next development to be expected in local military circles. As at present organized the 93rd is scheduled to consist of two companies raised in Peterborough county, one located in Lindsay to be raised in Victoria and Haliburton counties, and the fourth in Cobourg to be recruited in the counties of Durham and Northumberland.

It is announced now however that Lt.-Col. Fee, commandant at Fort Henry, Kingston, and formerly the officer commanding the 45th Victoria Rifles, is to command a new overseas battalion to be raised in Victoria and Haliburton, in which case the Lindsay company scheduled for the 93rd will undoubtedly be transferred to Lt.-Col. Fee's new battalion. It is also stated that there is an agitation along the lake front to raise a battalion in the Cobourg district which would embrace the Cobourg company of the 93rd. This would leave the task of completing the 93rd to Peterborough county.

It has been estimated that Peterborough should enlist 800 men in the next five months to keep up the percentage already set for enlisting here. The recruiting of a complete battalion here would therefore not be any greater task than the authorities have had before them already. For the 93rd Peterborough district has already raised one full company, the first platoon of a second company is organized; a splendid band has been formed, and new instruments are on the way. A fine lot of non-commissioned officers has been uncovered, and there is a wealth of good material from which to develop more non-coms. The prospect of having to completely organize an overseas battalion in this county is, therefore, one that the military authorities and Speakers' Patriotic League are looking forward to cheerfully but determinedly.

A Barriefield despatch says:

Barriefield Camp, Nov. 3.—Lt. Col. Fee, now in command of Fort Henry, has been offered the command of a new regiment to be organized in the counties of Haliburton and Victoria, and has accepted the offer made by the militia department. This is the first step towards the organization of the new force that Canada will contribute to the empire in the present war.

Lt.-Col. Fee formerly commanded the 45th Regiment of Lindsay, and came to Barriefield camp in May last to organize the base battalion. When the base battalion was turned into the 59th battalion and Lt.-Col. Dawson given command of the same, Lt.-Col. Fee was given command at Fort Henry, where he has been since last July.

At the Fort he has administered the affairs of the prisoners in a manner satisfactory to both General Otter and the prisoners themselves. It is understood that Col. Fee's entire Fort staff will go with him to his new command. Lt.-Col. Fee was in camp this morning conferring with Colonel Hemming.

Lieut. Raymond of Trenton, reported for duty to Lt.-Col Johnston at the armouries this morning. He will be detailed to one of the platoons.

Capt. Carew of Lindsay, paymaster of the 80th Battalion, C.E.F., paid a visit to the officers of the 93rd Battalion at the armouries to-day.

Signs that it will not be long before Peterborough soldiers will be housed in their barracks at the armouries are not lacking. Lieut. Hill, who will be the supply officer at the head of the Army Service Corps work here, has arrived and a staff from the C.A.S.C. will be here on Monday. Supplies are coming in to-day, a carload having reached the city. Already the pillow slips and the ticks have arrived at the armouries as well as a quantity of kitchen utensils and dishes. Eighteen hundred blankets are being supplied for the Peterborough soldiers. The local contractors are well through their respective contracts and to-day the furnaces to heat the main drill hall arrived. The woodwork is practically complete and the kitchens will soon be ready to turn out the "skilly and beans."

Ed. Dillon, the veteran Peterborough rugby and lacrosse player, and equally well known as the trainer of Peterborough's hockey players for many years, has undergone an operation at St. Joseph's Hospital to fit himself for active service, and will join the 93rd Peterborough Battalion as soon as he leaves the hospital. His decision to look after the Germans instead of the hockey players, causes another break in the old guard of the Peterborough Hockey Club. Since last season, Skid James and Maurice Park of the intermediates, and Cyril Giroux, the 1914 intermediate captain, have enlisted, as well as Harold Knapman and Harold Morrow of the juniors, Orme Cavanah the former defence player, and Walter Flowers, the former junior and intermediate goaler. In addition to these another familiar figure will be missing from hockey circles this year in the person of Mart. Kennedy, for many years the handy man and mascot of the local club and who accompanied the intermediates and juniors on every trip out of town. He is now in England as a motor truck driver with the Canadian Army Service Corps.

In the list of officers and non-commissioned officers of A company, 93rd Battalion, published yesterday, the name of Company Quartermaster Sergeant J. H. Williams was omitted.

The rain yesterday interfered with the schedule of the 93rd battalion soccer league. No. 1 platoon are just spoiling for a game and will likely get an opportunity to-night.

There are two Peterborough officers and two Peterborough non-coms. on the strength of the 80th Battalion.

Canvas Yesterday Although Done Quietly and With No Special Appeal Had Very Successful Results—Many Are Paying Monthly Subscriptions.

LAST NIGHT'S MEETING

Forty-eight hundred dollars was the amount subscribed to the Peterborough Branch of the Red Cross Society as a result of a canvas that was made yesterday and which culminated in a meeting held last evening in the City Council Chamber. Mr. W. B. Travers, who occupied the chair, opened the meeting with a few remarks relating to the work undertaken by the Society. He was of the opinion that the Society would have little difficulty in raising six thousand dollars which ensures the Society a working fund of five hundred dollars a month for the next year.

Good Knitters Wanted.

Mrs. J. C. Davidson, President of the local branch of the Red Cross Society, reviewed the work accomplished by the organization. She made an appeal for more workers, especially those of the male species. Monday, Wednesday and Friday of each week are devoted to the work; which is carried on at the Public Library. The most pressing need at the present time was socks and good knitters. Peterborough, said Mrs. Davidson, is one of three cities in Canada whose work is accepted without inspection, and is forwarded direct to London, England.

A Charter Branch.

In response to Mr. C. H. Pennefather's request for information concerning the manner in which the funds of the Society are disbursed, Miss Marion Rush said that the local Red Cross Society was a charter branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society, the latter being a branch of the International Red Cross Society, with headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland. "We represent the largest organization in the field, said Miss Rush, and the policy of the Society is to undertake the work of manufacturing dressings, etc., and leave the manufacture of garments to the auxiliaries. By purchasing supplies in large quantities the society is able to economize to a considerable degree. In one instance, the Society made a substantial saving by purchasing a quantity of material out of town until one local merchant volunteered to supply the goods on the same basis. The society operates according to instructions that are forwarded from headquarters, from time to time.

Mr. W. H. Dunsford paid a glowing tribute to the good work undertaken by the Society. He was followed by Mr. Pennefather, who spoke along similar lines.

A Voice From the Front.

Mr. W. C. Ackerman, brother of Capt. Charles Ackerman, lately returned from the front, said that his brother held up the Red Cross Society as one of the best organizations working in the field. All supplies were carefully checked by a trained staff of auditors who had given their time freely to the work and there was no possible chance of the funds being misused.

Mr. Travers said it was the intention of the Society to appoint collectors who would make weekly or monthly collections of the amount subscribed.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem and three cheers for the King.

The Subscriptions.

The following subscriptions were collected by the Advisory Board composed of Messrs. Travers, Deane,

PTE. ROBT. LEVOIR OF 2ND BATTALION HAS PASSED AWAY

One of Three Brothers Who Enlisted in First Peterborough Contingent Succumbs to Illness—Another Brother is on Way Home From Front

A MILITARY FUNERAL

After an illness extending over several months, Private Robert Levoir passed away yesterday afternoon at his home, 389 Harvey street. Deceased together with his two brothers, William and Thos. Levoir, left Peterborough with the local detachment of the 2nd Battalion, First Canadian Contingent, Overseas Expeditionary Force. Later Pte. Robert Levoir was invalided home from Salisbury suffering from an illness that culminated yesterday in his death. Pte. William Levoir went over to France and has since been wounded and invalided home. Word was received on Monday that he had reached Quebec. He failed to reach Peterborough in time to see his brother before he died. Another brother, Corp. Thomas Levoir also of the 1st Contingent, is at present in a military hospital at Epsom, England, due to sickness, resulting from exposure in the trenches. The wife of Corp. Levoir passed away three months ago, so that each of the three brothers has borne a large share of sorrow.

Deceased was thirty-eight years of age. He leaves a wife and two children, namely, Eva Dorris and Kathleen Lilian. The late Pte. Levoir was born in England, but for the past number of years has resided in Peterborough, where he was well and favourably known. He was a member of St. John's Church.

No arrangements have as yet been made for the funeral which will be delayed until the arrival of Pte. Wm. Levoir from Quebec.

Deceased will be given a military funeral by the members of the 93rd Battalion, at which Ptes. Mesley, Stenton and Phipps, former comrades of the 2nd Battalion, will attend.

THE GRECIAN KING DEFYING THE WAR PARTY

BRITISH TROOPS HASTEN TO ASSIST SERBS

KING CONSTANTINE IS EXPECTED TO DISSOLVE THE PARLIAMENT OF GREECE

Will Not Make Venizelos Premier Again it is Feared---Man Whose Defiance of War Party Overthrew Zaimis Cabinet Has Been Appointed Aide-de-camp to King--Allied Fleet Bombarding Bulgarian Coast Preparatory to Landing Troops.

A FORMIDABLE INVASION OF BULGARIA

To-day, the entire press and everybody in political circles have reached the conclusion that His Majesty will dissolve Parliament instead of making Venizelos Premier again.

ATHENS, Nov. 5.—King Constantine has summoned the leaders of all parties to confer on the situation resulting from the overthrow of the Zaimis Cabinet, and it is expected the Ministerial crisis will end within twenty-four hours.

ATHENS Nov. 5.—After the Allies' naval guns have cleared Dedeagatch and its environments of Bulgarian troops, it is believed to-day that French and British forces will be landed there.

The fleet is still bombarding the port furiously, under the direction of aviators, who hover over the town, signalling the range to the gunners. Military men do not think the shelling would be so persistent except as preliminary to land operations.

The Bulgarians have been driven by the bursting shells a short distance into the interior, but are said to be near enough to be ready to resist a landing. The Sofia Government has already taken over the railway through Southern Bulgaria, and has forces of peasants throwing up entrenchments and mounting guns on the Greek frontier.

PARIS, Nov. 5.—(French Official).—"A fierce and ineffective attack was delivered on our lines on Thursday night between the Aisne and Oise, in the regions of Puisaline and Quennevieres.

"We repulsed two grenade attacks, supported by liquid fire, against La Courtine, in the Champagne.

PARIS, Nov. 5.—The French War Office this afternoon gave out the following official report on operations in the East:

"The day of November 2 passed quietly along the front of the French sector in Serbia. The Bulgarians are in front of Krivolak, and entrenching themselves 200 yards from our advanced posts, and are directing an artillery fire against our positions there.

"During the day of November 3rd fighting took place to the north of Rabrovo and still continues. Our troops gained possession of the bridges over the river Cerna, to the north-west of Krivolak. In the fighting in the Babuna Pass, the Bulgarians have been defeated after three severe battles."

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 5.—King George's appetite is better today. He passed the night more comfortably than heretofore since he was hurt in France, and his condition generally is improved, his doctors said.

It is admitted, however, that he still suffers considerable pain, especially when he moves.

SALONIKA, Nov. 5.—To help the Serbians who are defending Prilep, 30 miles north of Monastir, against the Bulgarians, the French extended their east and west front in Southern Serbia to-day as far east as the Babouna Hills, in which Prilep's guardians are entrenched. The town is safe temporarily.

ROME, Nov. 5.—Albania is on the verge of an uprising. Newspapers here are urging the Government to-day to fortify the country back of the Albanian port of Avlona, which the Italian troops hold.

The trouble is due to the attempts by Serbians, whom the Teutonic invaders are driving out of their own country, to cross the Albanian frontier.

Essad Pasha, who claims to govern Albania, is anti-Austrian, though himself a Turk. He favours the Serbs and wants to admit them. As most Albanians are anti-Serbian, however, a rising against Essad has resulted, and in their first battle the rebels beat him. That they will attack the Italian forces at Avlona is feared.

ATHENS, Nov. 5.—The thirty-six hundred British troops on their way from Salonika to-day to the Bulgarian frontier are followed by more soldiers.

The force, by a short overland march, can make its crossing into Bulgaria from the south near Strumnitza, where French troops are already operating.

It is considered certain that the plan is to divert the Bulgarians from their operatings in Serbia by a formidable invasion of their own country.

From the British forces' move in Bulgaria's direction, it was surmised here that assurances had reached England of completed Russian arrangements to strike the Bulgars from the northward.

PARIS, Nov. 5.—The Bulgarian artillery are violently bombarding the advanced forts of Nish, on the Nishava River Wednesday, says a Salonika despatch. They captured Nish-Kavola.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The Greek and Serbian Ministers have conferred to-day, presumably with reference to Greek help for Serbia, which the Serbs are admittedly hopeful will result from the Athens Cabinet crisis.

THE EXAMINER'S NEW SERIAL

The Examiner's new serial story, "Gordon Craig, Adventurer," will be commenced to-morrow and promises to be one of the most interesting in the long series of successful serials published by this paper. The story is cleverly written and full of exciting incidents, of romance that is calculated to drive away the blues and keep the interest at fever heat from the first paragraph to the final sentence. Don't miss the opening instalment of "Gordon Gray, Adventurer," in the Examiner tomorrow.

SERGT. COOPER GASSED AT YPRES HAS REACHED HOME

First of Peterboro's Artillerymen in The First Contingent to Come Back From The Battlefields of France Arrived This Morning

A VETERAN SOLDIER

The first Peterborough artilleryman to return from the front is Sergeant J. R. Cooper, 147 Hart Avenue of the 4th Battery, C.F.A. He arrived in the city this morning and went direct to his home. Sergeant Cooper is suffering from the effects of gas caused by the high explosive shells used by the Teutons. Prussic acid is said to enter into the manufacture of the shells referred to. It has a serious effect on the lungs. Sergeant Cooper was gassed at Ypres last May and is yet far from recovery. He experiences some difficulty in breathing and also a numbness of the hands and feet.

An Old Veteran.

To return home from the battle-front is no new experience for Sergeant Cooper, as he has been through at least two previous campaigns. It is twenty-six years since he first associated himself with soldiering. He subsequently saw service in Egypt, and was one of the few who survived the famous charge of the 21st Lancers, on September 2nd, 1892. Later he saw service in South Africa, and on August 17th, 1914, left Peterborough for overseas service in the present campaign. At that time Sergeant Cooper was employed in the Canadian General Electric Company's works. He was one of the first to enlist and is the first of the 34th Field Battery's quota to return from the front.

Sergeant Cooper was connected with the 4th Battery, which comprises men from Peterborough, Cobourg and Port Hope. He saw service at Neuve Chapelle and later at Ypres. They entered Ypres on April 23rd and came out on May 9th. Here they had a pretty strenuous time. The harness remained on the horses as long as fifteen days at one stretch. Sergeant Cooper saw his battery depleted as the casualty list grew from day to day. Among those he remembers as having been killed was Sergeant "Dickby" Boone, Gunner O'Toole and a number of others. Sergeant Cooper has nothing but praise for the men who comprised the 4th Field Battery. He says they showed undaunted courage under all conditions and were never known to flinch. Their work was of the best, said Sergeant Cooper. "What 'Bill' didn't do 'Dick' did" he added.

NEW SHOE STORE

To-morrow morning the new Fienberg Shoe Store will make its first bow to the public. It will open out at No. 203 George Street, next to the corner of King Street, with an entirely new stock of footwear. The prices are calculated to interest bargain buyers, as will be seen by the leaders offered for the opening day. See the advertisement in another column. Mr. Charlie Feinberg is a progressive young man, and with the knowledge he seems to possess as a footwear buyer should entitle him to a share of public patronage

PETERBORO' COUNTY MAY RAISE WHOLE 93rd BATTALION

Authorization of a Regiment in Victoria and Haliburton Makes it Probable That This District May Be Called Upon to Supply the Complete Establishment of the 93rd---Splendid Start Has Been Made--Supplies Arriving at the Armouries---To-day's Military News.

That Peterborough city and county will be called upon to raise the entire 93rd Battalion, instead of two companies, as originally planned, is the next development to be expected in local military circles. As at present organized the 93rd is scheduled to consist of two companies raised in Peterborough county, one located in Lindsay to be raised in Victoria and Haliburton counties, and the fourth in Cobourg to be recruited in the counties of Durham and Northumberland.

It is announced now however that Lt.-Col. Fee, commandant at Fort Henry, Kingston, and formerly the officer commanding the 45th Victoria Rifles, is to command a new overseas battalion to be raised in Victoria and Haliburton, in which case the Lindsay company scheduled for the 93rd will undoubtedly be transferred to Lt.-Col. Fee's new battalion. It is also stated that there is an agitation along the lake front to raise a battalion in the Cobourg district which would embrace the Cobourg company of the 93rd. This would leave the task of completing the 93rd to Peterborough county.

It has been estimated that Peterborough should enlist 800 men in the next five months to keep up the percentage already set for enlisting here. The recruiting of a complete battalion here would therefore not be any greater task than the authorities have had before them already. For the 93rd Peterborough district has already raised one full company, the first platoon of a second company is organized; a splendid band has been formed, and new instruments are on the way. A fine lot of non-commissioned officers has been uncovered, and there is a wealth of good material from which to develop more non-coms. The prospect of having to completely organize an overseas battalion in this county is, therefore, one that the military authorities and speakers' Patriotic League are looking forward to cheerfully but determinedly.

A Barrisfield despatch says:

Barrisfield Camp, Nov. 3.—Lt.-Col. Fee, now in command of Fort Henry, has been offered the command of a new regiment to be organized in the counties of Haliburton and Victoria, and has accepted the offer made by the militia department. This is the first step towards the organization of the new force that Canada will contribute to the empire in the present war.

Lt.-Col. Fee formerly commanded the 45th Regiment of Lindsay, and came to Barrisfield camp in May last to organize the base battalion. When the base battalion was turned into the 59th battalion and Lt.-Col. Dawson given command of the same, Lt.-Col. Fee was given command at Fort Henry, where he has been since last July.

At the Fort he has administered the affairs of the prisoners in a manner satisfactory to both General Otter and the prisoners themselves. It is understood that Col. Fee's entire Fort staff will go with him to his new command. Lt.-Col. Fee was in camp this morning conferring with Colonel Hemming.

Lieut. Raymond of Trenton, reported for duty to Lt.-Col. Johnston at the armouries this morning. He will be detailed to one of the platoons.

Capt. Curow of Lindsay, paymaster of the 59th Battalion, C.E.F., paid a visit to the officers of the 93rd Battalion at the armouries to-day.

Signs that it will not be long before Peterborough soldiers will be housed in their barracks at the armouries are not lacking. Lieut. Hill, who will be the supply officer at the head of the Army Service Corps work here, has arrived and a staff from the C.A.S.C. will be here on Monday. Supplies are coming in to-day, a carload having reached the city. Already the pillow slips and the ticks have arrived at the armouries as well as a quantity of kitchen utensils and dishes. Eighteen hundred blankets are being supplied for the Peterborough soldiers. The local contractors are well through their respective contracts and to-day the furnaces to heat the main drill hall arrived. The woodwork is practically complete and the kitchens will soon be ready to turn out the "skilly and beans."

Ed Dillon, the veteran Peterborough rugby and lacrosse player, and equally well known as the trainer of Peterborough's hockey players for many years, has undergone an operation at St. Joseph's Hospital to fit himself for active service, and will join the 93rd Peterborough Battalion as soon as he leaves the hospital. His decision to look after the Germans instead of the hockey players, causes another break in the old guard of the Peterborough Hockey Club. Since last season, Skid James and Maurice Park of the intermediates, and Cyril Dinoux, the 1914 intermediate captain, have enlisted, as well as Harold Knapman and Harold Morrow of the juniors, Ornie Cavanah the former defence player, and Walter Flowers, the former junior and intermediate goaler. In addition to these another familiar figure will be missing from hockey circles this year in the person of Murt. Kennedy, for many years the handy man and mascot of the local club and who accompanied the intermediates and juniors on every trip out of town. He is now in England as a motor truck driver with the Canadian Army Service Corps.

In the list of officers and non-commissioned officers of A company, 93rd Battalion, published yesterday, the name of Company Quartermaster Sergeant J. M. Williams was omitted.

The rain yesterday interfered with the schedule of the 93rd battalion soccer league. No. 1 platoon are just spoiling for a game and will likely get an opportunity to-night.

There are two Peterborough officers and two Peterborough non-coms. on the strength of the 59th Battalion.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, NOV. 5, 1915

GRENFELL TO GO.

We may some of us think — the lawyer in leaving his briefs; the merchant surrendering his gains; the person resigning his flock—that we are making sacrifices by spending a few months of our life in the strenuous game of war. We commend these men for the sacrifices they are making; but they are not doing as much as others. Dr. Grenfell, the "pastor of Labrador," has spent the flower years of his life and his private fortune, in work as strenuous, as self-sacrificing, as arduous, as work in the trenches; but his appetite for sacrifice for the good of humanity is insatiable. He will soon leave for active service in France in hospital work. If we all did our bit, there would need to be less sacrifice made for the cause, and the triumph of the cause would be hastened.

WOMEN AND MEN.

True reform makes slow headway against entrenched wrong. Woman's way to the franchise is not strewn with roses. In the recent United States elections the popular vote was against woman suffrage. The electors preferred keeping the woman as "boss" of the home, so that the political "boss" should not be disturbed. Men know, especially politicians, that women in possession of the franchise would not vote at the behest of the party heelers, that bedevil politics, but would vote for righting wrong and for moral improvement, that would remove the crooked politician. The question of woman's right to vote is one that cannot be denied; woman's ability to vote intelligently is not so universally recognized. But when we see their resourcefulness, their energy, their capacity for organization in the interests of effective work in promoting war measures of the subordinate kind, we should be blind to the lesson such things teach if we do not recognize women as mentally and intellectually equal to men, as they are, as a body, infinitely superior in moral qualities, moral courage, and impatience with wrong. The world to-day is battling for the triumph of right, and the triumph will not be complete unless it brings recognition of the right of women to a larger share in deciding the beneficent administration of the free institutions, we are fighting—and women, in their way, as earnestly as men—to preserve.

AN OPENING AND MEN TO FILL IT.

In Brantford the Ministerial Association, in conjunction with the Young Men's Christian Association, is looking after the entertainment and comfort of the soldiers, who are to be quartered in the city during the winter months. This suggests inquiry as to what the Ministerial Association of Peterborough is doing in an organic capacity to help in meeting the conditions created by the war, and our share in it. Of course we know they are preaching war sermons and making patriotic appeals. That is, however, a part of their regular duties, and in this great crisis, we have to go beyond the path of mere routine duties, to do something beyond the ordinary. We are all of us confronted with the duty of doing double duty; doing our part from day to day in the ordinary course of life, and doing our bit in an extraordinary way—working, as it were, double shifts.

And two members at least of the Ministerial Association, are doing double duty. Rev. Canon Davidson, of John's, and Rev. James Rollins, of St. Andrew's. One is chaplain, and one is preparing himself to resign for the moment his place in the ranks of the church militant, to enter the ranks of the army militant, the army on active service. He is emulating, but with a more studied purpose, the pugnacious zeal of St. Peter, who with an excusable chivalry, took the sword to chop off the high priest's ear; and we can all applaud Rev. Mr. Rollins for buckling on the sword in the same cause as St. Peter, to defend the Christ incarnate to-day in the Christianity and the Christian civilization, that is, from the human viewpoint, in sore peril. But these reverend gentlemen are only two out of fifteen or twenty, and it is left the latter to do their bit in some other way. The King's call comes to them in a special way. They obviously can't all enlist. They may, as they have been doing, preach patriotic sermons; but the fighting parsons, to speak without irreverence, will be doing the same during the winter, while at the same time they will be discharging their military duties. Both these gentlemen as well as one or two other city ministers, have been addressing recruiting meetings; but so far as known the Ministerial Association of Peterborough as an organization, has not undertaken any specific auxiliary war work.

With no desire to teach them their duties, or add to them, one may suggest that the Ministerial Association is splendidly qualified to undertake and head some special work of war usefulness or relief. They are, by virtue of their office, leaders of men; they have a definite influence upon their flocks—they command a large army of potential workers, who though many of them are already in the ranks in some way or other, have among them many still unattached—doing no definite work of the kind the time demands. Through some supplementary organization of the Ministerial Association these, so far, latent forces might be brought into play in some capacity of usefulness, not now organically looked after. It may seem impertinent to suggest such things to such men; but in these days everything is pertinent to the promotion of work in helping on the war, or caring for the results. Everybody is called upon, and one is justified if an opening for usefulness presents, to try to see that it is occupied.

THE WILL OPENS THE WAY.

When ladies go shopping these days they are told that there is a scarcity of black dress goods of all kinds, owing to the supply of black dyes being cut off by commercial non-intercourse with Germany, which in times of peace has had a monopoly of dyes—dressing women in black as they have a responsibility for plunging half the world of women in mourning to-day. This is one of the causes of scarcity of black dress goods, so many millions of women wearing mourning for lost relatives. But the condition of dye scarcity mentioned will be, and is being, remedied, chemical research showing that where there is a will there is a way. The following article from the Globe will interest the ladies interested in dyes and dress goods:

War's sudden interruption of the supply of dyes has stimulated research in Britain, and the Laboratory of Leeds has met with phenomenal success in seeking substitutes for the German products. As it was in the Leeds Laboratory that the composition of the famous "aniline black" was discovered, success in solving the problem of various fast colours was naturally to be expected. A number of important intermediate products have been worked out, the processes having been for many years trade secrets of German manufacturers. One of these is the product from which a dye known as "indanthrene" is made. It is the most permanent blue known, being a faster colour than indigo. The Manchester Guardian, deeply interested in Britain's textile industries and all attendant lines of manufacture, regards discoveries in this field as highly important, and publishes many technical details of progress already made.

Investigation has been successful in discovering the composition of "stilbene," a product from which many permanent yellows and oranges are made. Chemists and manufacturers in Leeds have also succeeded in meeting the military demand for exact conformity to the standard shade of khaki. The chief difficulty has been in regard to colour bars in worsteds. The wearing qualities of worsted make it eminently desirable for military service, and it can now be produced with the uniform standard shade demanded by the military authorities. The work of the Leeds Laboratory has been directed toward supplying the immediate need for dyes and also toward putting the British dye industry on a safe footing. Adaptability minimizes the loss through trade obstruction, and it may be that British dye manufacturers will be able to meet home demands after the channels of trade are again opened.

GERMANY AND GREECE.

ROME, Nov. 5.—Colonel Falkenheim, the German Military Attache at Athens, who went to Sofia immediately before Bulgaria's mobilization as bearer of an autograph letter from the Kaiser to King Ferdinand, has unexpectedly returned to Athens accompanied by two members of the staff of the German Legation and several German officers. They are reported to be entrusted with a secret mission.

The arrival of Colonel Falkenheim is considered most significant and probably heralds important decisions, since, if Greece's neutrality is to be maintained throughout the war, as is now hinted, demobilization is bound to follow. It is only delayed with the object of justifying Greece's demand for payment of the second instalment of the French loan, a sum of $5,000,000, half of which has been already advanced.

GERMANY BEGINNING TO FEEL THE PINCH OF FOOD SHORTAGE

A German Under-Secretary of State may say that which is true, but, as Junius puts it, "it must be received with caution, as coming from the devil." If the truth serves his purpose better than a lie he will tell the truth, no matter how it hurt his delicate sensibilities. But it takes a much cleverer man than the average German under-secretary to make a really talented liar. Any fool could tell the truth if he wanted to; because the truth will always square with itself. The trouble with the under-secretary is that that is exactly what he doesn't want to do. To tell the truth is pain and grief to him. He would rather tell a hundred lies than cut down one cherry tree.

The Under-Secretary of State Walmschaffe has issued a statement regarding Germany's food supply which probably contains some truths, but cannot be all true, because, as usual with German official utterances, it contradicts itself. He says: "Especially in the foreign press there are appearing statements about a shortage of food, especially milk, butter and meat, in Germany. They are intended to show to the rest of the world that the starvation plan of our enemies is an accomplished fact; that the Germans and their cattle are hunger-stricken, and that the Germans want specially to make peace." To prove the utter falsity of these statements about milk, butter and meat, Herr Walmschaffe claims that Germany raised 1,200,000,000 hundredweights of potatoes last year, and that this abundant crop will be apportioned out from an Imperial potato centre to the Empire at definite prices. He does not, however, deny that there have been riots and window-breaking in Berlin and other big cities by people who yearn for other food than potatoes, or else for more potatoes. To show how abundant is the supply of butter and meat the Under-Secretary explains how the Government is going to forbid the sale of meat and trying with fat in restaurants for several days a week, "so as to provide that all who need them will receive bread, potatoes and all other foods."

Why on earth do people in this land of plenty riot and smash stores and put the Government to the expense of placarding the towns with scarlet-coloured warnings about the dire penalties provided for mobs who riot and loot, and smash things in order to get a few more potatoes? The condition of affairs described by the Under-Secretary does not seem calculated to make the war popular in Germany.

Will History Repeat Itself— Darkest Hour Before the Dawn?

The story goes that in one of the darkest hours of the American civil war, Frederick Douglas, the leader of the negro race, was addressing an audience of his countrymen at Washington in a very doleful tone when an old "mammy" in the audience brought him to his senses by calling out, "Frederick, is God dead?" God was not dead, and the abolition of slavery was very much nearer than seemed possible at the time. The cause of the Allies in the present war is passing through no such trying experience, but the fact that Germany is meeting with some temporary successes, because of her preparedness, has led some of the American newspapers to draw comparisons between these successes and those won by the Confederates in the early days of the Civil war in the United States.

For example, the Chicago Evening Post of a recent date, deals at length editorially with the "Discouragement of the North after two years of civil war." McClellan's inactivity had been followed by successive reverses to the North until the defeats of Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville. After Fredericksburg, the war correspondent of The London Times, "Bull Run Russell," wrote to his paper: "This is a memorable day to the historian of the Decline and Fall of the American Republic," while Joseph Medill, of The Chicago Tribune, wrote, "The defeat leaves us almost without hope." The Democrats openly attacked the administration, just as Northcliffe is attacking the British administration to-day, while even Horace Greely lost heart and advocated the mediation of a friendly power. But the tide turned, as it was certain to do, sooner or later, and the North, because of its greater resources in men and money, won out through attrition." The Post sums up:

"It may be argued with truth that what nations have done nations can do. This country, in its great war ploughed through victory from a situation that was internally more discouraging than that which faces the Allies to-day. . . . A war is won or lost when it ends. To forecast the outcome of so involved a struggle as the great European conflict on the basis of the military situation to-day is as impossible as it would have been to forecast the outcome of our civil war when the armies of the North had been driven back into Washington and the armies of the South were in full tide of successful invasion."

History will repeat itself. The Allies just now are having their Chancellorsville and their Fredericksburg, but their Appomatox will assuredly come.—Brantford Expositor.

CARBOLIC ACID TEN TIMES DEARER SINCE GERMAN SUPPLY CUT OFF

Potassium Salts Were Also Made in Cermany and Prices Have Been Steadily Going Up—Even Cod Liver Oil Has Advanced.

Advances in the wholesale prices of drugs and chemicals are gradually extending to the consumer as the retailers' stocks become exhausted and require to be replaced. Carbolic acid, for example, is now ten times higher, or has gone up in price 1000 per cent. Before the war Germany manufactured practically all the carbolic acid used by the world and the present attempts on the part of United States manufacturers to meet the demand are rather feeble. Besides, potassium is used in carbolic acid, and here again the isolation of Germany is felt in this country, for the supply of potassium salts came mostly from Germany. This applies particularly to potassium bromide, chlorate, etc. The wholesale price of potassium bromide had advanced from 70 cents to $4.50. Quinine is at least six times higher than formerly. Salicylate of soda is nearly off the market, and your stand old cod liver oil is considerably dearer. These are only a few of the price variations which illustrate the chemical market trend. As a result of the new conditions, the public should recognize that the retail price is gradually advancing. Prescriptions containing articles that have become dearer will naturally cost more than formerly, especially if the retailers' stocks have become exhausted. Purchases of the separate drugs or chemicals will reveal the same increasing prices.

BRITISH TAKING TO READY TO-WEAR

Custom Tailors Lose Ground —Little Probability of the Clothing Coming Here

The great development of the ready-made clothing trade in Britain was recently made the subject of a lecture to the classes in the south of Scotland Technical College, Galashields, by Dr. Thomas Oliver, the president, and is reported in substance by Consul Rufus Fleming, stationed in Edinburgh.

The new conditions in clothing manufacture in Scotland were thus described by Dr. Oliver:

"Thirty years ago, Glasgow was a very important centre of distribution of wool cloths for the tailoring trade, but the merchant trade of Glasgow has largely disappeared, owing to so many of the firms taking up the ready-made line. The rise of the ready-to-wear branch of the industry has made a strong temptation to the economical buyer. If he can buy a satisfactory suit at 25s ($6.08) to 30s ($7.30), there is little likelihood that he will invest 60s ($14.60) to 80s ($19.46) in a suit.

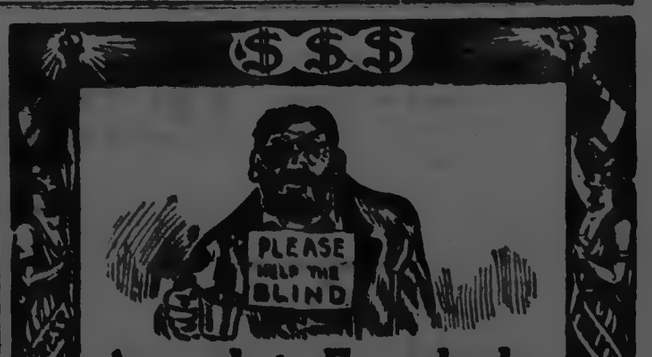
"So a tailoring business which at one time employed about forty hands is now reduced to, say, three men, while the clothier is everywhere in evidence, offering the ready-to-wear garments. Some of these are marvellous productions. Last year, before the war, a firm in Leith was offering suits made to measure at 15s ($3.65) from cloth on view in the shop. The cloth was not the old-fashioned article with cotton warp and weft, but consisted of a twist made up of woollen and cotton threads in both warp and weft, and was a good imitation of a fancy woollen cloth.

"Last month in another city I saw that one tailor was offering a very fair production at 16s 11d ($4.11), made to measure. I handled the cloth, and, even allowing that the price was a special offer during the cheap sale period, I cannot figure out where the profits came in to the various firms concerned. Division of labour is nowhere in greater evidence than in the manufacture of clothing. In the recent boom in army requirements clothing firms have been constrained to sublet part of their contracts. They have allowed sub-contractors 5s 6d ($1.34) per overcoat, and about the same price for a suit, for making, with all material supplied. Before the war lower prices were obtained.

"A method which is gaining ground in the provincial towns is for tailors, instead of ordering cloth from the merchants, to send the measurements of their customers to the clothing manufacturer, who in a few days sends back to the tailor the finished garment. The tailor may make any slight alteration required, and the customer is under the impression that the suit is made on the tailor's premises. The system has the advantage that the garments are well made and allows the tailor with a small knowledge of the business to get along without engaging an experienced cutter, and he is not burdened with keeping a number of tailors who would be only irregularly employed according as the fluctuations of the season imposed. The same system has also been introduced in costume departments, but has not gained such a foothold, because the ladies usually are not satisfied unless they get a number of 'fittings on,' with numerous alterations, and those who are less fastidious can buy from a draper of garments ready to wear."

The enormous amount of cheap female labour in London has determined, it seems, the flow of the clothing trade in that channel, and now London competes with Leeds for the honour of having the largest clothing trade in the United Kingdom. There are also to be found the very cheapest grades made up with the help of the low-priced labour offered in the East-end of London.

Some years ago suits were made to sell to the wearers at 9s ($2.19). The cloth could be bought in Leeds at 6¾d (13 cents) per yard, fifty-four inches wide; three and one-quarter yards of cloth were required, so that the cloth cost was 1s 9d (42½ cents) per suit; the cost of making and trimming amounted to 3s 2d (79 cents), for the most part made on sub-contract in "sweatshops." The clothing manufacturer was thus enabled to sell to the retailer at 6s 9d ($1.64), but the increase in the cost of material has changed these figures, and now prices are 30 to 50 per cent higher.



Appeals to Everybody.

Many people overlook the advantage of newspaper advertising. If the farmer has stock to sell, he can find buyers, if he wants to buy, he can have the sellers come to him. When anything is lost or found, when help is wanted, or a position is sought; when any article from a baby carriage to a pet fox could be exchanged to advantage, a small advertisement in the newspaper will accomplish the desired result.

Nearly everybody can use the advertising columns to advantage at some time, and every person will profit by reading the advertisements regularly.

A Complete Analysis of the Soil of Ontario Farms is Being Made

Prof. Harcourt of the O. A. C. Outlines the Work That Has Been Undertaken and the Benefits That Will Result

A complete soil analysis of the province of Ontario, which it will take two or three years to complete, but which will be of inestimable value to the agricultural forces of the province, is the ambitious programme launched by Prof. H. Harcourt of the chemistry department of the O.A.C. In the preliminary surveys, so far taken, over 9,000 miles have been covered since the inception of the campaign in June. When the map is completed it will show the nature of the soil on nearly every farm in the province, the crops that will produce the biggest results for the farmer, the fertilizer that is best adapted to get the maximum yield, and whether the drainage is sufficient or otherwise.

GROWING WRONG CROPS

"Much of our farm land is growing the wrong crops at present, even where there is a crop rotation fairly well established. I am fairly convinced also," added Prof. Harcourt, "that it will be found that some of our waste land, with proper treatment, will be found to produce some of our very best crops. For instance, here's an example that will explain what we have in mind with our soil analysis. At Walsh, in Norfolk county, we have a plot in potatoes this year, and from it we have taken 600 bushels to the acre of marketable potatoes. Last year the man who owned the land attempted to grow oats there. He put on fertilizer worth $4.50 per acre, and when he cropped it he found that he had barely got his seed back out of his oat yield. It is such things as this that we want to correct. Some land will never grow oats, other tracts would never grow potatoes. Our idea is to have all that information charted and listed so that it will be immediately at our disposal.

EXTEND PLOT SYSTEM.

Prof. Harcourt intimated that it was the intention of his department to extend the experimental plots to many points outside the college. The idea will be to use these plots to verify the conclusions we arrive at in the laboratories here. It is not enough for us to state, for instance, that Carleton township in Middlesex county will grow fine potatoes, or that a group of farms in another corner of the province are adapted to the growing of oats and wheat. The old method that we have been following of having all our experimental plots right here at the Guelph farm has not produced the best results and we have in view the establishing of many of these plots, probably in five acre tracts, in soils of different texture at points where they will reach the greatest number of farmers.

THE GROUND COVERED

A military map was used for the making of the preliminary survey. When the work is completed the data contained in the drawings will be complete to the finest detail. It will show the road forms, hilly or flat portions, soil types and everything that can possibly be of assistance to the department. The first work was done in Ontario county, since which portions of the following counties have been covered: York, Peel, Halton, Wentworth, Lincoln, Welland, Haldimand, Norfolk, Brant (in part), Oxford, Middlesex, Essex, Kent, Lambton. The western and southern section of the province will be covered first, especially the sections where farming is the most intensive, and where it is found that the land is most in need of a stimulant.

SHORT OF LIME

"It is not exaggerating to state," said Prof. Harcourt, "that there are great areas of good farming land in Ontario that are beginning to show in a very marked degree the need of lime. The soil tests that we make for the purpose of analyzing are taken at a depth of forty inches with an ordinary auger of large size. In very many cases it has been found that for a depth of from 20 inches to two feet there is no lime at all to be found. Lime is very easily detected and the test is simple. There is plenty of lime in the subsoil, as you can see by much of our water, but it has got too down to be reached by vegetation. That is a defect that will require a lot of attention from Ontario farmers, and it is our desire to assist them in overcoming or remedying this condition."

MAN IN CHARGE LEAVING

The services of Dr. Geo. M. Colloy, of the Agricultural College at Urbana, Ill., and formerly of the Bureau of Soils at Washington, were secured for a month to assist in mapping out the campaign with Prof. Harcourt. The carrying out of the scheme has been deputed largely to Mr. A. J. Galbraith, lecturer in the chemical department at the college. A few weeks ago the Manitoba department took Prof. Reynolds, head of the English staff at the O.A.C., and next week Mr. Galbraith leaves for the same place to take charge of the soil survey branch of the Manitoba Agricultural College. Apparently Ontario is being robbed of its trained men in this important institution for the sake of a few hundred dollars a year.

The policy of extending the experimental plots outside the college will be followed this year by one in "muck" soil at Leamington, in Essex county, and one in heavy clay at Stevensville, in Welland. One is already in successful operation at Walsh, near Port Rowman, in Norfolk county.

THE RUSSIAN SPIRIT.

—Russian Army Headquarters, Oct. 15.—In travelling here from Moscow by motor car I purposely covered many back roads in order to question the peasants, so that I might form some conclusions as to whether this war is really backed by the people themselves. On the high roads I passed, without exaggeration, above 100,000 refugees, and I have questioned great numbers of these poor people about their opinion of the war and its outcome.

After talking to groups of these homeless wanderers, amounting to hundreds, I found not a single one who expressed a wish that the war might terminate before the Germans are defeated utterly. I have heard the same comment again and again—"We must win now, regardless of the cost and the time it takes. The sacrifices we have suffered are too great to hesitate at anything short of victory."

In general I find the peasant refugees are extraordinarily well informed regarding the war and the Russian policy of retreat.

The peasants of the villages in the interior, though they are ignorant of the conditions and causes of the present position, show the same stubborn qualities and the same willingness to make sacrifices that one sees in the soldiers at the front.—London Times.

HAD SALT RHEUM ON HANDS.

Could Not Do Her Work.

Eczema or salt rheum is one of the most common of all skin diseases. It may centre itself on any part of the body, but there are certain places where it most usually begins, such as the bends of the elbows, the backs of the knees, the groove behind the ears, the scalp, on the palms of the hands, between the fingers, or on the soles of the feet.

It is, as a rule, not dangerous, but is very irritating and annoying to the sufferer on account of the terrible itching and burning sensation it causes.

It is impossible to eradicate this trouble from the system by external applications, as it is caused by the blood being in an impure state. What you need is a good blood cleansing medicine such as Burdock Blood Bitters. A medicine that will drive out all the foulness from the blood and make it pure and rich.

Mrs. Adelard Theriault, Theriault, N.B., writes: "Some time ago I was troubled with salt rheum on my hands, and it was so bad I could not do my work. I tried several medicines, but they all failed to help me. One day a friend told me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got a bottle, and before I had taken it my hands were better. I am not afraid to recommend B.B.B. to anyone."

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past forty years, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Italians Are Fighting Two Wars on Enemy's Territory

One Amid Snow Fields and Glaciers, the Other Under a Tropic Sun—Progress Slow, But Great Natural Barriers Have to Be Overcome.

AUSTRIANS HAD THE INITAL ADVANTAGE

IN THE ITALIAN WAR ZONE, Sept. 9.—Italy along her northern frontier is fighting two distinct wars—the one amid the snows and glaciers of the high Alps which guard the Trentino, the other under the tropical suns of the Carso leading to Trieste; the former a defensive tenacious 'holding' campaign to protect her flank, the latter an impetuous though carefully planned offensive. The first is waged on craggy mountain peaks, in passes and narrow valleys, where only a few battalions can be deployed, while the troops have to cross fathomless chasms, where batteries must be transported by muleback and heavy guns dragged up by hand, where food and munitions must often be hoisted in baskets by ropes and pulleys up to men stationed on almost inaccessible cliffs. The second is fought on a gently sloping, treeless, rocky plateau, where whole army corps can manoeuvre at ease. The Italian campaigns present at close proximity the greatest differences, create the most diverse problems of strategy and tactics, which nevertheless require co-ordinate solution.

The almost insurmountable natural barriers of this battle-line, which is nearly 300 miles long, make rapid progress impossible, every step of the advance has to be fought over foot by foot. In the Trentino every crag and gully, easily held by a corporal's squad of the enemy, must be taken by surprise, or assault, or destroyed by artillery fire. Along this front only troops trained in mountain warfare can be usefully employed, and the task is intrusted chiefly to the Alpini regiments recruited for the most part among hardy mountaineers who know every track and trail of the country in which they are fighting. Dressed in heavy gray-green uniforms, wearing soft felt hats, sugar-loaf crowns, a single long feather stuck jauntily on the right side of each, they swagger about, reminding one of Robin Hood's men. To them the war has all the exhilaration of a big game expedition.

"The Austrians had mounted a machine gun on the top of a high cliff, which rose over 200 feet sheer from the valley below," he began, quietly. "The gun was raking with a deadly fire a stretch of open road along which our supplies had to pass. Our artillery had failed to silence it. To dislodge the enemy was essential. Four of my men volunteered to do the work. Under cover of darkness, by removing his boots, one man, a former guide, was able to clamber up the face of the cliff. Arriving at the point above the position where the Austrians were intrenched, he found the five men who manned the gun asleep. They had posted no sentry feeling sure that they could not be molested. With a loud shout, the Alpini sprang into their midst and demanded their surrender. Astounded and dazed to see the enemy spring down on them as it were from the skies, the Austrians surrendered without a show of fight, and, machine gun and all, were marched off as prisoners to our camp."

Every one I met had a tale to tell of the prowess of the Alpini, though all expeditions are not so successful as this one, and many are those who have volunteered for such work who have never returned, whose bodies now lie in the crevasses and ravines of the snow-capped mountains. For the war in this zone is being waged at an altitude of from 8,000 to 10,000 feet, among the mists and clouds, where snow lies perpetually, and new snow has already begun to fall.

At the outbreak of the war the Austrians commanded every dominating height, and had so arranged the intrenchment line as to control the heads of all the passes leading into Italy. For years past magnificent roads had been carved out of the mountain side, under Austrian direction. The "Dolomitenstrasse," over which so many Americans have motored, as well as other wonderful highways throughout Tyrol, were planned solely with an eye of their ultimate strategic value in a war with Italy, which every Austrian knew had to come some day.

For months past the Austrians have been fortifying all points of vantage. Ingeniously, they have devised concrete fortifications, masked by rocks and boulders, at every turn of the roads and trails leading southward. They have mined the paths leading to the commanding heights, and at every advance of the Italians they dynamite great avalanches into the valley, hoping to engulf the enemy.

Yet to-day the Italians are everywhere fighting on enemy soil. Progress is slow and cautious, the more so because the Trentino is in reality a purely Italian province, and it is the one aim of the Italian General Staff to spare the conquered territory all the hardships possible. Ala, a place of some 5,500 inhabitants, situated ten miles from the frontier, was captured three days after the outbreak of the war, and has served as a base of operations for the Italians in the Adige Valley. Here at last the Italian flag flies proudly over the Town Hall. Ala has been "redeemed," and only twenty miles north lies Trent, the capital of the Trentino. The road up the sunny valley of the Adige lies open, inviting an advance, yet to advance means more than a mere march up the broadening valley; it means the conquest, one by one, of the strongly fortified heights held by the Austrians that dominate the vine-clad plain. The task is a stupendous one, and the season for accomplishing such a feat is rapidly drawing to a close. Until next spring it will be impossible to make much progress along this front, and the Italians realizing this are preparing to hold the line they have conquered. Already they have equipped their men with warm woollen, and fur clothing, snowshoes and skis. Provisions are being assembled in specially constructed weather-resisting huts; munitions and medical supplies hurried to sheltered positions along the edges of glaciers and mountain passes, already shrouded in snow-laden clouds, and the Alpini are actively preparing for their long winter vigil, which will soon set in.

No other campaign of the European war is being carried out under more difficulties created by the hand of Nature than this one along the long Alpine battle line. Nowhere are the combatants more evenly matched.

The Austrian "Kaiserjager," the crack regiments of the empire, made up of Tyrolese mountaineers, are as courageous, valiant and resourceful as their Italian opponents, the Alpini. Warfare here is not the impersonal bloody slaughter of the other campaigns of this war. It is more akin to guerrilla warfare. Here the men feel a keen personal responsibility and interest. Victory does not consist in piling up the dead or burning a village, but in dislodging the enemy or in occupying a more dominating height.

But if the struggle on the Trentino front is fraught with almost insurmountable difficulties, the fighting along the Isonzo River and the Carso Plateau is equally tremendous. Here the main Italian offensive is concentrated. Here General Count Cadorna Commander in Chief of the Italian armies in the field, has determined to strike the blow that will not merely free Trieste, but bring complete victory to Italian arms.

The Carso is a high plateau of solid limestone formation. Treeless and bleak, it is often swept by terrific cyclones and gales. The Italian advance has up to the present been checked as much by geological formation as by the Austrians. Rapid intrenching is impossible, and to capture the prepared positions of the Austrians is too costly in human life. Hitherto Italy has been content to occupy Monfalcone on the coast some twenty miles from Trieste, and pushing the phalanx slowly forward under the protection of ceaseless artillery fire, General Cadorna has been able to gain a firm foothold on the plateau. Further north, the Isonzo, a narrow stream running between steep banks, flanked by high hills, has greatly impeded Italian operations.

Along this Carso front troops from the south of Italy are in action. With the temperature often at 100 degrees in the shade, the men find even the cotton uniforms with which they are outfitted too warm. These men seemed smaller, more frail than the sturdy Alpini; their faces were worn and pale from the unaccustomed hardships of the campaign. The war here is the usual campaign of nerve-rending watchfulness, and it is telling on the men after a hot summer under tropical skies.

On both fronts of the Italian war the Austrians have a decided strategic advantage. The country is admirably adapted to the defensive campaign they are fighting. Italian progress is slow, too slow for many Italians, to whom the results achieved during the first months of war seem negligible. But General Cadorna would appear to have adopted General Joffre's tactics on the Teutonic flank, a holding campaign on the Carso, an offensive of attrition.

LOST ON WHEAT PURCHASE

New Zealand Ordered Grain Here at High Price.

Ottawa Nov. 3. When the Government of New Zealand went into the business of buying wheat in Canada it got stung. A million bushels were ordered and nine hundred thousand of these are in the Montreal elevators. Not a clearance has been shipped.

The unfortunate part of the affair for New Zealand, is that it paid a high price (around $1.70) and ever since then the market has tailed away while the wheat bought on account of that Government is still in store in Montreal, this season's crops in New Zealand are large.

The grain was to be delivered in the spring. It was delivered. The shipments were to be at such times as New Zealand decided. It asked that a hundred thousand bushels be sent over and they were sent. As to what is being done with the balance it is up to the Government of the Commonwealth to say.

As far as the authorities here are concerned they simply carried out the request of the New Zealand Government.

WARNS RICH GERMANS

Under the caption "A Gentle Warning to Rich Folk" the German Social Democratic central organ Vorwaerts in its issue of September 11th just received here, asserts that the rich people of Germany are being unduly spared in connection with the raising of the war loans.

"Rich people want to be handled with kid gloves," it says, "and therefore the Bourgeois press avoids calling energetically upon those who are best fitted to render service in subscriptions to the third war loan. A warning to fulfill this duty, which after all should be self-evident to the propertied class, is clothed by the Vossische Zeitung in this form:

"Up till now the German Empire has approved 30,000,000,000 marks (£7,500,000,000) for war expenses. Without counting the third loan now ready for subscription, to the amount of 10,000,000,000 marks, there were paid in for the first two loans 13,000,000,000 marks. This payment represents a mighty achievement for all sections of the population of the German Empire. In view of this sum there arises involuntarily the question as to what relationship this amount bears to the wealth of the German people and what is to happen in the event of making loans continuous at the same rate for a short time more. Therefore it will serve to reassure many to learn that the 13,000,000,000 marks constitute only half of the wealth that is owned in Prussia by the millionaires alone."

According to the statistical year book for the Prussian State there were in Prussia in 1911 only 3,789 taxpayers having incomes of more than 1,000,000 marks (£250,000). The total wealth of these millionaires amounted to more than 20,000,000,000 marks (precisely 20,714,000,000 marks). Of this there were 18,000,000,000 marks in the city and 2,000,000,000 marks in rural communities and landed estate districts having more than 2,000 inhabitants and 6,000,000,000 marks in other rural districts and landed estates.

"There were 250 taxpayers having individual fortunes of more than 10,000,000 marks, five having fortunes of more than 100,000,000 marks, the five together having 1,058,000,000 marks. The aggregate wealth of all taxpayers having individual fortunes of more than 6,000 marks was in the year reported in Prussia more than 117,000,000,000 marks (£29,250,000,000). Of the sum 60,000,000,000 fell to the cities, 17,500,000,000 marks to rural districts and districts having more than 2,000 population, and 34,000,000,000 marks to other rural communities and landed estates."

For signalling a pocket flash light has been invented with interchangeable colored lenses mounted on the end of a movable arm.

THESE DARK DAYS

The process of making and fitting Dr. W. H. Lacey's eyeglasses and spectacles is scrupulous, exactness and precision characterizes every step. Our service invites comparison. Our examining room is so lighted and arranged that any hour of the day or night is equally good for examinations and fittings. These dark days cause some to notice any defect in vision or eye strain. It is a mistake to suppose that an examination can only be made on bright days. We use a dark room and artificial light, so we can give a goodly sized residue on the dark, cheerless days of November as on bright, sunny days. "See us and see better." 340 George street, successors to Tait Optical Co., opposite Examiner Office.

EDITH CAVELL, MARTYR

Commemoration Service Held in St. George's Church --Pathetic Speech by His Honour Judge Haycke

The cold, wet, inclement weather of yesterday no doubt militated against the attendance at St. George's Anglican Church last evening, on the occasion of the memorial service for the late Edith Cavell, Red Cross nurse and martyr.

We do not in these materialistic and prosaic days have many opportunities, either of witnessing martyrdom or of posing as martyrs ourselves. It needed the outbreak of war, as at present waged, to show that savages, worse by far than brute beasts, or uncivilized heathens, yet exist, although covered with the thinnest possible overlay of veneer spelled "Kultur!" a culture about as thick and solid as would be the wash of gold over a bracelet bought at a ten-cent store.

Notwithstanding the weather, a goodly attendance of sympathetic souls was in evidence at the little church, lying between Braidwood Ave. and McGill St. Preparations had been made to meet contingencies by the choir being located in the sanctuary.

The city—and hence the citizens—was represented; the law by His Honour Judge Huycke, Crown Attorney Hatton and City Solicitor Gordon. His Worship Mayor Buller and City Clerk Armstrong were the representatives of the Patres conscripti; Chief Howard was a fine deputation from the Fire Department; Mr. Gillespie, M.P.P., represented the Government, and Private Phipps was present on behalf of actual combatants.

The unpretentious service was commenced by the singing of the well-known hymn, "Abide With Me," written during his last few days on earth on Brixham Head, Devonshire, England, by the late lamented Francis Lyte. This hymn was sung by Edith Cavell and her chaplain the night before she was murdered. Then came the opening sentences from the burial service of the Anglican liturgy, the general exhortation, the general confession, Lord's Prayer, versicles, and Psalms 23 and 130. The lesson taken from the burial service, found in the First Epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians, chapter xv., was read in a very sympathetic manner by Mr. C. A. Spence, the lay reader in charge of St. Alban's Mission, Brownton. "Nearer my God to Thee" was then sung, followed by special prayers. Then was sung that grand hymn, "Now the labourer's task is o'er."

Here Mr. Price made a short address to the congregation. He reminded them that he had no need to tell them the object why they were gathered together that evening. It was a sad night, and he was glad to see so many congregated together. He was glad to welcome Mayor Buller, as also His Honour the Judge, and the member of Parliament, Mr. Gillespie. What were we to think about this matter? Let us look at it from a righteous way, in the sense that she, whom we were commemorating, gave up her life for right, as she considered it between created and God. She was murdered! Let us imitate her by living up to her standard. He would soon call on the Judge, Mayor and member for their remarks. This service was held to express our own indignation at what had transpired. It was identically the same service as was held in the Metropolitan Cathedral of St. Paul in London, England, on which occasion only about one in eleven could gain admission; huge crowds, such as had never before been seen in London, being reluctantly turned away. There addresses were given by the Lord Chief Justice and the Lord Mayor of London; so that in the service this evening, we were only following precedent. Not only in every English Cathedral but in nearly all the cathedrals in the United States, similar services word for word had been held. We were to-night taking part in a service millions have taken part in, the same prayers, the same hymns.

"The National Anthem, "God Save the King," was then sung.

Judge Haycke, in a magnificent, heart-touching, pathetic speech, said, in part: "We are gathering here on a sad and mournful occasion, at the sad and mournful tale of heroism and self-denial. He only wished there had been a big civic service, in the largest building in the city, to do honour to a princess among women, a martyr to liberty, a martyr to freedom. Such a service has been held in every town in Great Britain and across the seas. Perhaps in one way it was a good thing that this service had been held in this little church dedicated to St. George. St. George's was a most suitable place, for he was the Patron Saint of dear old England. St. George went to fight the dragon. This was an act of self-denial, for he was fighting for innocence and right. He went to this fight in an unassuming way, with his vizor over his face so that none should know him. The only thing which identified him was the emblem on his armour—the Red Cross—for he was a Red Cross knight out to sustain innocence and protect virtue. When we think of Edith Cavell, it is eminently fit to meet in St. George's Church, the church under the banner of the Red Cross on the white ground: for Edith Cavell was a Red Cross nurse.

"The greatest crisis we have ever known has brought out all that is good in the English race. Some may have begun to fear this race might have degenerated; we might have become too commercial, too materialistic; but this war has shown how the heroes—known and unknown—had come forward. He was glad to see one (Private Phipps) here to-night.

"Edith Cavell was a Red Cross nurse, giving her life to nurse the wounded and relieve the distressed, and to train others to do the same. She wore the great symbol! She went to Europe at the beginning of the war, placed her services at the disposal of any one who wanted her. The Red Cross is a comparatively new movement, unknown even sixty years ago. She placed her services in the hands of her country. She went to the front. She nursed British, French, Belgian and German soldiers. She cared not who they were; any who needed her. Then she went to Brussels; she was not a spy or guilty of espionage in any way. She was busy in hospitals, but she knew that some Belgian and English soldiers wanted to get away from the Germans, and she gave them such information as enabled them to regain their freedom!

"For this she was brought up and judged (?). No evidence could be adduced that she was a spy. All that could be shown was, that as a Britisher, she was glad to help her fellow-countrymen. To the honour of manhood, in no civilized people would such a deed merit such punishment as was afterwards meted out. I exclude Germans from the term civilization—they are horrors.

"It was for her to show herself as the brightest star, and her name will be honoured by our children's children. Two days were allowed her, and in the dead of night she was taken to execution, ordered to be blindfolded and shot. She, with all the fortitude and independence of a British woman, refused to be blindfolded; so she was ordered to walk to the place of shooting, but tottered and fell.

"We have been trained to look upon soldiers as knights of chivalry, having respect for women. But in the prison yard this noble woman failed to rouse any feeling of sympathy from the brutes around her. Then a high officer drew his pistol and shot her dead.

"A thrill of horror at this deed went throughout the whole civilized world. To his honour, Brand Whitlock did all he could, but without avail, to save her life.

"There is a legend of a noble warrior who went forth to fight a dragon. He conquered and slew him and cast his many teeth in all directions. This legend goes on to say that where each tooth fell, a body of armed men sprang up. There is a lesson to be learned from this myth. Although Edith Cavell can do nothing herself, yet for every drop of her blood there will spring up a British soldier to avenge her. She is a martyr and will always be looked upon as one. This is the sad story, the tragic story, of good, brave, unselfish Edith Cavell."

His Honour was listened to with rapt attention. There were eyes in which tears glistened, and had it been in any secular place, the judge's remarks would have been applauded to the roof.

Mayor Buller said he was very glad to be present as representing the City of Peterborough at this beautiful memorial service. Edith Cavell has taught a lesson to all British men and women. We have listened to a very able speech from our Judge. We have Private Phipps, who has been to the front, among us. He has seen for himself what has been done by brutal Germans. But the British flag will float at the top of the mast for all time.

Mr. Gillespie, M.P.P., felt he could not add to what had been said, more than to say that he had been very pleased to attend. Judge Huycke had uplifted our minds and made us feel more determined than ever. We all admire Edith Cavell, but the brute who shot her is not worthy to bear the name of man. He was glad to have joined in a service to commemorate such a magnificent woman.

The "Dead March in Saul" was then played on the organ, all standing. The offertory for the Red Cross Fund was collected, the benediction pronounced, and as the closing voluntary, Handel's "I know that my Redeemer liveth," was played.

The hymns used in the service were 18, 362, 240, 25.

So ended a pathetic, heartfelt service in commemoration of a noble woman.

TWO FATALITIES AT CORNWALL BREWERY

Second Occurred to Man Who Was Showing How First Took Place

CORNWALL, Nov. 4.—Last night a fatal accident occurred at the St. Lawrence Brewery, when Louis Chevalier lost his life. Chevalier went into the brewery some time during the evening and proceeded to the mill room. He was alone then. Shortly after 9.30 the night watchman, while on his rounds, found the body of Chevalier lying near the electric switch, his thumbs being badly burned. Coroner Hamilton decided that an inquest was unnecessary. Chevalier was about 34 years of age. He is survived by his mother and two brothers in Montreal.

This evening as Omer Latour who is in the bottling works at the brewery, was explaining how the accident to Chevalier happened, he also received a shock which resulted in his instantaneous death.

WILL CASE IS DISPOSED OF

Re Hamilton Trusts.—R. D. Hall (Peterborough), for Royal Trust Co., moved for directions. J. A. Worrell, K.C., for Mrs. Cyril Hill. R. R. Hall (Peterborough) for Mr. Hamilton.

Judgment: What the will gives and withholds is the determining factor, and this has been already defined by the court. It is not expedient that I should attempt to define it again. It is clear enough and ought to satisfy all parties. I might without infringing any rule say that I see nothing in the judgment differentiating between corpus and income. There will be no order as to costs.

IN REGARD TO BILLETING

In asking the people of Peterborough to take boys to billet for the Boys' Conference it was quite generally announced that the boys would have to pay for their dinner on Saturday up town. It is now discovered that that arrangement conflicts with the plans of the committee in Toronto who give out the credentials to the boys, and it is hoped that those who have so kindly consented to take boys to billet will not be put to great inconvenience in giving the boys a lunch or dinner at noon on Saturday. The banquet at night will be gone on with according to the arrangements made.

The billeting committee desires to thank the people of the city for the generous responses that has been given in soliciting the boys. We require quite a number of billets yet but the people of our city have proved so hospitable upon so many occasions that I feel these will be readily secured. The boys will come Friday evening and will probably remain until Monday morning, but will not require a meal on Saturday evening at their billets.

ANIMALS ARE READY FOR WINTER

The old trappers and hunters predict a heavy winter on account of the animals being all fat and their fur so thick.

This is not in keeping with the latest predictions which are almost in direct opposition to that expressed by the hunters. It is just a question whether the bear or woodchuck knows more than the average weather prophet.

It is the opinion of many that the wild animals "hang the can on" most of them when it comes to facing the weather six months ahead and doing it with something like accuracy.

The trees in the forest know a thing or two about the coming winter and are heavily protected with moss on the north side.

PRIVATE CAILLARD GETS DISCHARGE AFTER RECOVERY

Local Bank of Montreal Boy, Wounded at Langemarck, Was Hit By Piece of Shell on Right Shoulder

EXPECTS COMPLETE RECOVERY

Private Harry Caillard, who was on the staff of the local branch of the Bank of Montreal, prior to his enlisting in the 1st local contingent, is another of the Peterborough boys wounded at Langemarck, who has received an honourable discharge.

In a recent letter to Rev. Father Phelan, rector of St. Peter's Cathedral, he wrote that he expects to regain the full use of his right arm. Private Caillard was hit on the right shoulder by a piece of shell and has been under hospital treatment and convalescing during the past six months. Doctors had told him that it would be two years before the use of his arm would be completely restored, but he states that he can now raise it, and expects an earlier recovery. This is the first news from Private Caillard since his name appeared in the casualty list. Before coming to Canada he spent five years in the University of Louvain, which the Germans destroyed. His knowledge of the language enabled him to act as one of the interpreters for the 2nd Battalion in France and Belgium.

CONSTRUCTION OF OUTFALL SEWER

City Engineer is Confronted With Many Difficulties—Board of Works May Close The Season Without An Overdraft

Progress is being made on the construction of the new outfall sewer. The pipe has been laid as far as the De Laval Company's plant on Park street and will be continued up to Rink street, where a junction will be made with a number of the old mains. The work which is being done under the supervision of City Engineer Parsons, is sometimes hampered by quicksand. Steel piling is erected along the line of excavation, yet it sometimes fails to exclude the quicksand which pours in. The estimated cost of the work is in the neighbourhood of $72,000. There is every reason to believe that the actual cost will exceed the estimate.

Work Completed.

The Board of Works has ceased the construction of sidewalks for the current year as the season is too far advanced to permit of any more work of this nature. The paving contracts are also finished, and nothing now remains but the usual routine operations common to the season.

In the city's financial statement published yesterday it was estimated that the Board of Works was facing an overdraft of five hundred dollars. From information obtained to-day it is learned that the Board is still solvent, and has hope of winding up the season on the right side of the ledger.

MORGAN HARDWARE CO. WINTER CAMPAIGN

The excellent business clientele which has steadily grown up with the hardware business of the firm of The Morgan Hardware Co., under the management of its senior member, Mr. H. P. Morgan, has developed the necessity for increasing the sales end of the business. At a recent meeting of the company it was decided that Mr. C. McGibbon, the head salesman in the store, assume a responsible share of the practical management of the business. With this end in view, Mr. McGibbon is initiating an aggressive weekly campaign, and has started with a special end-of-the-week publicity feature which should prove a business stimulator. The attention of the reader is directed to the firm's announcement in another column in which attractive figures to buyers are quoted. Mr. McGibbon is a popular and efficient salesman, and will no doubt make good in his new position.

MEETINGS AT THE ASSEMBLY HALL

Those who were at the meeting last night in the Assembly Hall were well rewarded for their braving the inclemency of the weather, by "a word fitly spoken," which the wise man says in Proverb. 25 11, "is like apples of gold in pictures of silver." Four things that the children of God are looking for were dwelt upon. In Titus, 2:13, "Looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour, Jesus Christ," are two things. It was stated that the "appearing of the glory" had been the subject of old Testament prophecy, while the "blessed hope" was referred to only in the New Testament introduced by the Spirit of God through the Apostle Paul, the Apostle to the Gentiles. This has reference to the rapture of the saints mentioned in 1 Thessalonians, 4:17.

In 2 Peter, 3:10, it was stated that we look for the dissolution of creation and in v.13, after the millenium mentioned in verse 12, one day being with the Lord as a thousand years (verse 8), for a new heaven and a new earth, "wherein dwelleth righteousness." It was told of the late Dr. W. P. Mackay that after seeing some magnificent work in France said he could see the words, "Reserved unto fire" (verse 7) written over it all.

Some errors occurred in last night's report, which it might we well to correct. It was intended to read that men and women to-day to gratify the cravings of the natural man for pleasure and sin are rejecting the salvation of God, thereby sealing their doom for eternity.

It also stated that Esau had a "rational" craving. This should have read "natural." The "afterward" of weal and woe is at the end of the "seed of Adam," not the "sins," as was stated.

THE REQUISITION OF SHIPPING

Government Plans Criticized — American Vessels Exempted.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—The government's plans for requisitioning mercantile shipping in cases of emergency, the morning papers complain, are still too "patchy" for a comprehensive scheme to deal with the problem. The establishment is urged of a central board of management for shipping with experienced business men in charge.

The Board of Trade announces that vessels loading wheat in America for England before Dec. 15 will be exempted from requisition upon their arrival here. H. J. Whitley, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Commons, will be chairman of the committee to deal with the requisitioning of tonnage for carrying foodstuffs to the United Kingdom.

FINE SHOW OF "MUMS" AT JORDAN'S GREENHOUSE

Lovers of the large, graceful and picturesque Chrysanthemum, have a treat in store for them next time they visit Jordan Bros' greenhouses, Argyle street. Just now, the fine showing of these favourite blooms, in several of the greenhouses, is well worth inspection. The display in one greenhouse, especially, filled with many varied colours and species of beautiful blooming "mums," is very fascinating. Among the most attractive and largest of the blooms are "Shasta" pinks, Ivory whites, pink and white, the "Alice Byron" pure white, and "Brutus," a remarkable decorative bronze beauty, just introduced in Peterborough for the first time this season, the flowers of which measure fully six inches across. Another fine specimen, known as the "Wallie Turner," a handsomely incurved white specimen, with a very large bunch of bloom measuring seven inches broad by six inches in depth of bloom.

Jordon Bros. seem to have had unusual success with their "mums" this season. Over 5,000 plants are now all in excellent condition, and already the demand for them has become quite heavy. The results are very creditable to our local florists, and especially to the head florist of the firm, Mr. Charlie Clee, whose expert work has produced such good results.

A fine exhibition of these "mums" will be on display at Jordan Bros' store to-morrow.

Annual Meeting of the Peterborough Horticultural Society will be held in the City Council Chambers, Wednesday Evening Nov. 10th at 7.45 p.m., for the purpose of Electing Officers and the receiving of reports and any other business that may come before the meeting.

BIG BANQUET AND CONCERT AT S. A. HALL, BYERSVILLE

A big banquet and concert was held at the Salvation Army Hall, Byersville, last evening. A large crowd was in attendance, and a thoroughly enjoyable time was spent. Following the supper a splendid programme of vocal and instrumental music and recitations were given by the children. A recitation by Mrs. John Cunningham also delighted all who heard it.

The music by the Temple Young People's Band proved a great treat. The chair was ably filled by Adjt. McIlhiney, who dedicated the new flag to the Young Peoples' Corps at Byersville. In the course of his remarks he explained what the S. A. tri-coloured flag meant to the Salvation Army.

LONDON, Nov. 5. New regulations imposing unprecedented restrictions on foreign newspaper correspondents in Germany have been promulgated in Berlin according to a Mail despatch from The Hague.

Correspondents have been required to bind themselves to send nothing offensive to Germany and must promise that their telegrams will not be altered by the editors receiving them, as well as that no headlines unfavourable to Germany will be printed above them. They must further agree to remain in Germany until the end of the war and must file hereafter three copies of each despatch, one to be kept by the foreign office and another at the headquarters of the general staff.

Music & Drama

FELDMAN AND CHRISTIE

The Feldman and Christie Company presented "The King of Tokio" at the Grand Opera House last night to one of the largest crowds of the week. A large number of the 93rd Battalion were in attendance, the boxes being occupied by the officers and senior non-commissioned officers. During the performance a number of patriotic songs were sung by the company, including "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall" and "Take me Back to Canada." Master Percy Luther, the little recruiting sergeant of the 93rd, recited "Fill up the Gaps" and "Come on Lads" in his usual effective style. To-night Feldman and Christie will present "The Love Shop."

USING AEROPLANES TO ATTACK BRITISH SHIP

LONDON, Nov. 5.—Germany appears to be trying a new method of attack on British merchantmen—with aeroplanes. The Cork steamer Avocet, which has arrived in Manchester, tells a story, according to the Liverpool Journal of Commerce, of a 35-minute engagement with three hostile aeroplanes at 11 o'clock in the morning of October 30. One of the aeroplanes was a large battleplane, which dropped 26 bombs, some of which missed the steamer by not more than seven feet.

When the bombs were exhausted the battleplane fired on the Avocet with a machine gun. The ship's sides and decks were struck by bullets, but all the crew escaped injury.

At a height of from 800 to 1,000 feet all the aeroplanes dropped bombs and attacked the steamer with rifles. The Avocet's escape was due to zig-zag manoeuvring and the fact that the aeroplanes flied not fly lower.

SPLENDID WORK OF THE CANADIAN KITCHENER LEAGUE

That the Canadian Kitchener League is continuing to do good work in the way of supplying our Peterborough boys in trench and training camp, with the comforts so necessary to them, was clearly shown yesterday when two bales were packed and forwarded by them to the 39th Battalion in England and the 4th Battery in France.

The contents of the boxes were as follows: One thousand sheets of notepaper, one thousand envelopes, one hundred and forty-four lead pencils, six dozen candles, one hundred pairs of socks, fifteen pounds best assorted candies, seventy-three khaki handkerchiefs, box of gum, three knitted scarfs, one knitted helmet, large Christmas cake, box containing nuts, chocolates and cream candies and fifteen bars cream taffy.

The very lowest valuation that can be put on the box and contents is $55.00.

The total knitting done so far this fall by the ladies of the League is as follows: One hundred and thirty-eight pairs of socks, three helmets and seven scarfs.

Everybody is hard at work and the good work will continue throughout the winter with undiminished vigour.

ONTARIO LICENSE COMMISSIONERS HERE; DEPUTATIONS HEARD

Temperance Workers Ask The Commission to Cut Off All Sale of Liquor in Peterboro'---Court Room Crowded For The First Session of The License Board.

The first meeting in Peterborough of the Provincial License Commission was held at the Court House this afternoon, attracting a crowd that jammed the County Council chamber. In the more spacious court room Judge Huycke was dealing with a list of Division Court cases.

Mr. J. D. Flavelle, chairman of the Board, presided, and the other members were Mr. Fred Dane, Mr. W. S. Dingman and Mr. John A. Aywarst. Mr. George Smith, the remaining member, did not come to Peterborough.

Punctuality is a decided quality of the Commission, for Mr. Flavelle opened the session a few minutes before 1.30. He stated that it was not the intention of the Commission to announce until January 1st the licenses to be granted by the Board. This would give those rejected ample time until May 1st to dispose of their businesses.

Civic Welcome.

Mayor Buller in his official capacity, welcomed the members to the "good old city of Peterborough" and hoped they would find things well conducted here. He felt that the hotels were run here as well as any place. Such he said was the general impression.

In replying Mr. Flavelle accepted the welcome for his colleagues and particularly as a personal welcome, since he was a Peterborough boy and had been born here. Mr. Flavelle's reference to his local nativity was the signal for an outburst of applause, which he graciously acknowledged.

Licenses Applied For.

The hotel licenses applied for were:
American Hotel—Chas. Perry.
Empress Hotel—G. N. Graham.
King George—Wm. Hamilton.
Grand Hotel—K. W. Schmuck.
Munroe House—R. J. Munroe.
White House—Jas. Bolger.
Windsor Hotel—A. J. Johnston.
Palace Hotel—F. Blastorah.
Snowden House—R .P. Gollop.
Montgomery House— F. Montgomery.
Albion Hotel—P. Hogan.

Mr. Wm. Thompson of Mt. Julien and Mr. Darcy of Burleigh Falls, also applied, the latter a new application.

The applications for shop licenses were from J. C. Sullivan, C. Nixon, P. J. Kenny. Mr. E. A. Peck, a member of the Peterborough Club, responded for its application.

Mr. Flavelle requested that the president and secretary be present. He wished to speak particularly to the club representatives.

Mr. H. B. Cowan, the first speaker representing a large deputation of temperance workers. He said that it was not his intention to present evidence against any particular hotel, but to generally review the features of the local situation. In the entire county of Peterborough there have been local option contests in every township and only one hotel remains outside the city, and that in Burleigh. A disappointing feature exists in various parts of the province in the supplying of liquor to dry rural sections from wet urban communities. Mr. Cowan named a number of localities, Brantford, Picton, Bowmanville, etc., and among them Peterborough, which is the centre of a railway system radiating in all directions from the city, and of a complete network of roads which lead to and from the city. As a result there was an easy access to Peterborough and the city was thereby a menace to the dry communities surrounding it. Mr. Cowan pointed out that the sentiment of the county including the city was more than sufficient to give the required majority for local option. In the city itself a local option vote had been taken on two occasions, giving an average majority of 401 for local option. Speaking as a representative of the County Temperance Association, Mr. Cowan asked the chairman to cut off all licenses in the county, and particularly to cancel the shop licenses which were the particular source of supply to the dry communities adjacent to the city.

Mr. Cowan heartily welcomed the members of the Commission and complimented them upon the impression they have created in the province by the work they have performed since their organization.

Crowd Overflowed.

By two o'clock the attendance of temperance and hotel men and others only casually interested, overflowed into adjoining anterooms.

Last Saturday's Trade.

Mr. A. B. Cunningham made a strong appeal to the Commission to refuse licenses to the shops next year. Last Saturday representatives of the Temperance Association made a count of the persons who entered the local shops. Their record for only 6¼ hours was as follows—467 persons entered; of these 418 were men, 196 were women, 43 were minors, some of them unaccompanied. Mr. Cunningham estimated that over 1,000 persons entered the liquor shops in Peterborough last Saturday, and that in many cases their purchases provided for Sunday debauch.

Mr. Cunningham pointed out that this did not represent one day's trade, for the greater number of sales of liquor are made over the telephone. One express delivery man said he had admitted that the most productive part of his business was the delivery of liquor after dark. He had received strict instructions not to deliver until after dark.

Mr. Dane asked Mr. Cunningham if he considered the shop a greater evil than the bar?

Mr. Ayearst—"I think he has greater hopes of getting the one rather than the other.

Mr. Allan, of Toronto, secretary of the Allied liquormen of Ontario, pointed out in answer to Mr. Cunningham's statement that "only a hireling of the liquor men could say anything in favour of the shops" that the temperance men of the west had requested the provision of shops.

Mr. Cunningham—That has nothing to do with the question.

Rev. Mr. Whattam observed, that the temperance people in the West had not asked for these shops.

Mr. Dingman said that in Northen Ontario the shop had been found to be a greater menace than had been supposed.

Mr. J. C. Smith, president of the William Hamilton Mfg. Co., spoke as an employer of labour, in favour of the suppression of the sale of liquor in bars, shops and clubs at least during the period of the war. He believed it to be the duty of the Government to take this step.

Mr. Jos. Wearing.

Mr. Jos. Wearing made a strong point of need of economy at the present time. Many patriotic funds require all the generosity the people can afford. Whatever excuse could be offered for the bars, nothing could be said in favour of the liquor shops. The hotelmen had instructed their bartenders not to serve women. It was repugnant to the public mind that women should be served, especially at this time.

Rev. W. H. Whattam and Rev. R. G. Peever dealt with the patriotic needs of the present and the desirability of a sober manhood to meet the crisis. Mr. Whattam remarked that 90 per cent. of the eligible young men of his church had enlisted.

A MINISTER'S INTERESTING DISCOVERY

Rev. A. D. MacLeod, of Harcourt, N.B., in a letter written recently, referred to the remarkable popularity which Zam-Buk enjoys in the homes of the people.

"Really," he writes, "I know of nothing like it! Having charge of an extensive mission over which I travel constantly, I meet with many sick and afflicted people, and I have been amazed at the good Zam-Buk is doing daily. I have learned as an absolute fact that for bad ulcers, old wounds, eczema and skin diseases of all kinds, the healing powers of Zam-Buk are simply marvellous! For the painful ailment, piles, also, it is excellent. If a box of Zam-Buk could be put into every home it would save many a doctor's bill."

Here is disinterested evidence based on the best and widest experience, of the value of Zam-Buk. In the homes of the people from the Atlantic to the Pacific, Zam-Buk is the most popular balm. Why? Because in so many cases it has proved a cure when all else has failed. Zam-Buk is a sure cure for eczema, ulcers, abscesses, varicose veins, scalp sores, piles, cold sores, cuts, burns, bruises, the eruptions and sores of babies and children, and all skin diseases and injuries. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box or postpaid from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse harmful, cheap imitations, sometimes offered. Send this article to Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, and 1c. stamp and receive free box by return.

"A SITTING ON A FENCE."

(With apologies to the shade of Lewis Carroll.)

I give the facts—'tis all I can;
The crisis was intense.
I saw a kindly gentleman
A sitting on a fence.
Mad passions fairly caused to reel
A continent or two,
I said, "Pray tell me how you feel
And what you mean to do?"

He said, "I hunt the copybooks
For phrases firm yet chaste,
And work them into sermonettes
To suit the Teuton taste.
With missive mild, at each pow-wow,
The horrid Huns I pelt;
Yet Bryan leers me, and, somehow
I'm shunned by Roosevelt."

I heard him then, for I had just Completed my design
To keep the Kaiser's fleet from rust
By using it as mine.
I shook him (on the patriot side),
I said, "We're really vexed,
The pirates all your threats deride.
What will you answer next?

In accents mild he spoke of plans
To stop the submarines
From slaughtering civilians
And causing painful scenes.
"Have not our citizens," I said,
"A legal right to live?"
But his answer trickled through my head
Like water through a sieve.

Since then, when twaddling prattlers moot
Cross-questions and replies,
Or madly kind construction put
On blunt and brazen lies;
Or graveled speakers ceaseless flow
In sound devoid of sense,
I weep, for it reminds me so
Of that old man I used to know,
Whose air was mild, whose speech was slow,
Whose House was White as driven snow,
Who held the doctrine of Monroe,
Who wept for hapless Belgium's woe,
And frankly told the German foe
'Twas wrong to strike that treacherous blow,
And if they would stop, although
He much preferred the status quo
(When trade, besides, was booming so),
He might be forced some day, you know,
To go to war—with Mexico;
In that great crisis, long ago,
A sitting on a fence.

ALL RECRUITING RECORDS FOR YEAR GO IN LONDON

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The Daily News says:

"Recruiting in London, Monday, in spite of the dismal weather, beat all records for this year. It was estimated that over 2,500 men enlisted. Monday is always a good day, but yesterday, so remarkable was the enthusiasm, the recruiting officials were taken by surprise.

"It was clear, indeed, that unless the mistakes of last Autumn are to be repeated, it will be necessary to have an emergency arrangement, ready to fall back or in case the existing one proves inadequate."

The women of this city are manifesting considerable interest in this coming lecture and cookery course and many are planning to attend it every day.

The school opens on Monday afternoon and will continue through Friday, November 12th, with a lecture and cookery lesson every afternoon at 2.30. All of Mrs. Brown-Lewers' lecture topics are chosen with a view to interesting the actual housewives, that is the women engaged every day in cooking and cleaning, mending and in other ways caring for her own home and ministering to the needs of her family. One evening session is arranged for Wednesday at 8 o'clock, to which the men of the city will be invited and the lecture for this special session will be "The Woman Who Spends." This talk will doubtless be of just as much interest to the man who earns.

At every session Mrs. Brown-Lewers will cook a number of delicious foods in the presence of her classes, explaining in full detail just how and why for everything she does. Recipes for all of these dishes will be given away to the women present and after they have seen Mrs. Brown-Lewers carry out these receipes and tasted the foods prepared by her, they will want to go home and try them out in their own kitchens. In this way the whole family will get the benefit of the Examiner Better Foods Better Homes school next week.

Cakes will be served at every session and a number of attractive dishes will be given away at the school. One afternoon some woman or maybe two or three women, will carry home a pretty little Kewpie cake made by Mrs. Brown-Lewers, and another afternoon she will give away a few loaves of bread, and another day some woman will go home with a delicious pie.

All the women of the city are invited to attend these classes. Experienced and successful housewives are asked by the Examiner to give Mrs. Brown-Lewers a cordial welcome and an enthusiastic hearing, and it is certain that she will have something helpful in her course even for the very best housewife and cook of the city, while young women who are just beginning their household operations will learn a great deal about how to run their homes with less difficulty and friction, how always to be successful in their cooking and how to buy economically. Every session of the Examiner Better Foods Better Homes school is free and nothing will be offered for sale at any time. Efficient homemaking and all its phases will be considered by Mrs. Brown-Lewers.

There is nothing in the world which so gives expression to the great natural love instinct in the woman as that of making a home and in Mrs. Brown-Lewers' heart to heart talk she will get close to the homemakers of the city and provide for them a most enjoyable week.

Economy is one of the phases considered in her lecture and cookery course. Mrs. Brown-Lewers finds Canada a prosperous country but says the women are none the less interested in economical methods as she attempts to teach them. With the price of food stuffs soaring because of the war, it behooves every housewife to keep house on an economical basis and this they will be able to learn to do at the Examiner Better Foods Better Homes school next week. In Mrs. Brown Lewers' course of lectures and cookery lessons, she will discuss the subject of child feeding, which is one of her special hobbies, will show how to use the fireless cooker, and will teach both in her lecture and cookery demonstrations the fundamental principles underlying the art of cooking. In her cookery lessons she will cook everything from entrees to desserts and every dish prepared by her will be served to the women attending her classes.

PETERBOROUGH BATTERY HELD THE FOE IN CHECK

That Was the 4th Battery's Share in the Big British Advance at Loos —Local Artillery Were on the Left Flank and Kept the Enemy Busy.

AN INTERESTING LETTER

Writing to his wife under date of October 2nd, Bombardier Archie McBride says:

"I guess you know all about the big move the British made. Our battery was not in it. We were on the left flank, holding the Germans in check. Things were very quiet except one day we gave the Germans a big surprise. We shelled them very hard. They came back with their big guns, but did no damage. I have been up at the observing station. I see lots of Germans and I take a good many shots at them. It is an awful strain on my eyes. I came down to the waggon line last Monday for a week's rest. I am going to try and stay at the waggon for a while. Well I am fine and healthy and getting fat. Joe Reynolds is here with me. He is doing well and is as fat as a pig. All the Peterborough boys are fine and well. We are having a game of football this afternoon. It is good sport.

Writing again under date of October 8th, he says: "I am back in the trenches again, observing for the battery with one officer and two telephonists. I see a lot of Germans everyday and they fire on us every day. They get a few of our fellows at times. It is quite a strain on my nerves. I have stood it for a long time now, but it tells on one."

In another letter on the 16th of the month, Bombardier McBride reports things quiet. All the Peterborough boys are well. He is looking forward to a holiday to be spent in London.

Will Ask Council For Grant To Outfit Club For Soldiers

The Speakers' Patriotic League decided to ask the Council for assistance towards adequate and cheerful arrangement of the recruiting room on Simcoe Street. Tentative plans have been discussed and it is proposed to equip the premises as a down-town club rooms for the soldiers who will spend the winter here. Partitions will have to be put up, comfortable furnishings secured and the rooms given a cheery atmosphere that will appeal to the men. The Speakers' Patriotic League have yet to make an appeal to the Council, but their first request will be registered to-night. It is scarcely necessary to add that they regard the nature of their appeal as deserving the full support of the city.

Mr. B. J. Roberts of Toronto, who has been organizing the Central Ontario counties for Red Cross and patriotic work, requested the local Speakers' League to assume the providing of speakers for meetings in Menyers Township, and already the following dates have been decided upon: Janetville and Manvers Station, Nov. 15, Lotus, Nov. 16, Pontypool and Fleetwood, Nov. 17. Local speakers will have to be secured and the other usual arrangements made. It is understood that meetings in the Warkworth district will be taken by the local patriotic workers, and Judge Huycke is one of those who will deliver addresses in that section.

Mr. A. E. Coulthard presided at last night's meeting, which was well attended. The enthusiasm that inspires the Speakers' Patriotic League shows no signs of abating.

Hunters Secured Two Fine Deer

Messrs F. J. Rea and Harry Cooke of the Peterborough Lock Co., returned home this morning from a short hunting trip at Loutch Lake. They secured two fine deer without much difficulty. One of them is an especially fine buck with a grand pair of horns. Snow to the depth of two inches fell in the locality of the camp yesterday and if it remains cold will be greatly appreciated by the hunters.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

"SHAG" HAS FIRST CALL AS CLYMER'S SUCCESSOR

Frank Shaughnessy the Ottawa Manager is Well Fancied by Pres. McCaffery—Has Had Much Experience

Though there are several candidates in the field for the position of manager of the Toronto Baseball Club recently vacated by one, "Bill" Clymer, the most formidable is undoubtedly Frank Shaughnessy, of Ottawa.

President J. J. McCaffery is rather sweet on the versatile athletic director, and it is quite possible that "Shag" will be invited here in a few days to have a talk fest with the local magnate regarding the matter. Mr. Shaughnessy has many friends in Toronto, and his selection would no doubt meet with the popular approval of the fans at large.

"Shag" has done many big things in the Canadian League, and is a bright, clever fellow. He has had plenty of experience, and on the whole looks like the right man for the job.

Has Won Many Pennants.

Shaughnessy won the 1919 pennant for Fort Wayne in the Central League and was also instrumental that year in handing Ottawa the Canadian League pennant, supplying the Capital City team with the necessary material. In 1913, 1914 and 1915 he headed the Ottawa team and outdistanced his rivals in the Canadian League. There is no possibility of the Canadian League franchise being operated in the event of war continuing next year, and Shaughnessy would thus be available for the Leafs.

In addition to winning four pennants for Ottawa, Shaughnessy has developed a lot of talent for the higher-ups. He sent Schwind and Herbert up after the season of 1912, also Pitcher McManus. In 1913 Ed. Renfer was drafted, and last year Jack Mitchell went to Indianapolis. This year Pitchers Shocker and Ross, both green when Shaughnessy took them in hand, were drafted by the New York Americans, while Catcher Powers has been sold to Chattanooga. Shortstop Smykal is also due for promotion.

OVER 300 HOCKEY PLAYERS ENLISTED FROM O. H. A. CLUBS

Entire Champion Intermediate Team From Orillia and the Junior Champion Team From University of Toronto for Overseas Service—A Census of the Clubs

Notwithstanding the many enlistments of players and officers belonging to O.H.A. clubs, the association will continue in business as usual this coming winter, and from all indications it will be a most successful season in every respect despite the prevailing conditions. The provisions that are to be made for soldiers will introduce a new element into the various series, and the many camps will have a great following throughout the season.

The O. H. A. has taken a census of players and officers of last year's teams who have enlisted for overseas service with the following result:

This list, which is of necessity incomplete, shows that over 300 hockey players have joined the colours since last winter. This merely includes the actual players, not the club members or followers. Every town is wholeheartedly behind its own hockey team of course, and in the larger centres the big clubs have given hundreds of men who do not actually figure in hockey, but are all followers of the sport, as, for instance, the Argonaut Rowing Club, of Toronto, with nearly 100 men at the front, the University of Toronto, with almost 1,000, the Hamilton Rowing Club with 35, the Hamilton A. A. with 30, the Kingston Frontenacs with 30, which are represented in the above list by only the exact number of hockey players who have joined the colours.

Eastern O.H.A. Group Looks Almost a Certainty

While there may be a lot of talk about a city hockey league being formed this winter in Ottawa, says the Otawa Journal, the best bet at this writing is an eastern O.H.A. section, with Aberdeens representing this city against the Kingston Frontenacs, Smith's Falls and Brockville. Reg. Sims, of the Aberdeens, received a letter yesterday from Jim Sutherland, of Kingston, which advocated the forming of the O.H.A. section, and asking for the opinion of the Aberdeens on the question. Right now there doesn't appear to be anyone in this city, outside of one or two, who are at all interested in amateur hockey, and the local clubs can expect absolutely no help from the professional club.

If managed properly an O.H.A. section composed of the above mentioned teams should be made successful. The travelling expenses are not very much, and with a team in this city capable of winning the section and sawing off with the Toronto winners, local hockey patrons should support them well. Smith's Falls were in the O.H.A. in 1905, when Percy Lesueur, formerly with the Ottawa pros, and now with the Shamrocks, played for his home team. Harry Smith also played for Smith's Falls that year. Brockville had a good team last year and were supported well. This was also the case with the Kingston Frontenacs.

HOCKEY

Argonaut Rowing Club will have another senior O. H. A. team this winter. "I think we will have a really high-class team," remarked Ernie Laidlaw, last year's manager, today. "We have Vic. Gilbert in goal, Parker, Hal Young, Bud McLean and Dr. Frank Knight as a starter, and we will likely get one of last year's Victorias if they are allowed to play. In addition we should get some help from players in the soldiers' camp.

The prospects of two good teams at Preston look bright. Most of the players of last year's intermediate team are still in town, and will be in harness again as soon as the season opens. Preston will be represented this year by a strong junior team, who should give a good account of themselves. R. B. Osgoode and Herb Homuth will again look after the intermediate team, while Wm. Halberstadt and Percy Hilborn will again have charge of the juniors.

NOT INTERESTED.

"I wish, Mrs. Nurich, that you would come over and see my apiary some time."

"Thank you, but I was never interested in monkeys."

United States Rugby Players Prefer the Canadian Game

The Ohio State Journal of Columbus, O, says: Millard Gibson, Ohio State, '09, and one of the best fullbacks of all ever produced for a varsity eleven is managing the Hamilton Rowing club's football team of Hamilton, Ont., and is working to arrange a United States trip for his players, who are now in line for the Canadian championship. He writes as follows:

"Last year, we visited Harvard, while a similar Hamilton delegation went to Yale, and we later had Coaches Haughton and Hinkey up here for the Dominion championship games, and they were loud in their praise of the style of play in vogue here.

"The distinctive difference between the two games is that in the Canadian game, no interference is allowed ahead of the runner, which forces a multiple passing that is very spectacular, and reduces the roughness of interference play; also a ball kicked behind the opponents' line, which you rule a touch-back, counts one point in this game, and in consequence puts a premium on punting. I genuinely feel that the Canadian game is vastly superior to the American, and such a game in Columbus would not only be a great drawing card, but would permit of comparing the two methods of open play.

"The Rowing Club team is strictly amateur, being qualified under the A. A. U. of Canada, and is made up of ex-college men, oarsmen, sculers, etc. and desires to meet only an amateur organization in Columbus or vicinity, is possible.

"We would prefer a college team, and I am writing Director St. John to see what he thinks of the matter, and I can personally guarantee that we can instruct any American team into the method of the Canadian game in less than a week, so that we could both be up to par. We do not desire any money for this trip other than our bare expenses.

"I feel that a game of this sort would be greatly beneficial to the attitude toward the college play at Ohio State and vicinity, and would result in the changes that have crept into the eastern game through our association with them."

BASEBALL CAMP IN THE SOUTH

Dover Hallin Georgia With "Boss" Winter League Magnates

George Stallings, manager of the Boston Braves, who has been circulating in these parts since the baseball season closed, has gone to his plantation at Hadock, Ga. The Boston manager has been doing much missionary work for the benefit of the new Winter baseball vacation centre at Dover Hall, in Georgia, and has rounded up nearly all of the prominent baseball men for a winter's sojourn at the inviting Southern game preserve after the holidays.

Nearly all of the club owners in both the American and the National Leagues, together with several players, have become stockholders in the Dover Hall property, and it is expected that they will meet there before the winter is over on better terms of sociability than baseball men have enjoyed in the past.

If the objects of Dover Hall are realized this big estate in Georgia will become a sort of Hague for baseball. When the roundup of all parties happens after New Year's and all the club owners arrive there with their guns and fishing rods and enjoy a real vacation together, it is expected that the party will be productive of many important baseball trades.

Before the coming of the Federal League baseball politics caused more or less bad feeling among several club owners, but the opposition has brought them together on closer terms than ever before, and as a result the big baseball headquarters at Dover Hall became a reality. Manager Stallings's plantation is not far from Dover Hall, and he expects to do much in the way of getting the place ready for the coming of the visitors. All the baseball men in New York are interested in the new project and expect to go down there on a hunting trip after January 1.

The general drive on Dover Hall will probably begin early in the year. By that time it is expected that the place will be ready for the visitors, and if the present plans are carried out, it will be an ideal winter hunting ground. There are all kinds of game available, and there is fishing and even surf bathing. Among the well-known hunters among the baseball players who will visit there are Ty Cobb, Christy Matthewson and Tris. Speaker.

Many of the baseball men of the East will take the trip to the Pacific Coast to attend the annual conclave of the National Association of Minor Leagues which convenes at San Francisco on Nov. 9. The minor leagues have had the worst year in their existence and will again look to the major leagues for support. During the past year the baseball interest has been so low in several parts of the country that several minor leagues went out of existence temporarily. An effort will be made at the San Francisco meeting to get these leagues back into the game.

In the second week in December both the National and American Leagues will hold their annual meetings here, and if anything tangible comes out of all the talk about peace negotiations with the Federal League, it will probably be developed at that time. It has been the custom in the past to launch all sorts of political baseball schemes at these meetings, but it is expected that there will be more internal harmony in the ranks than in other years.

Six Months on the Prison Farm

James Wilson, alias "Sunny Jim," will spend the next six months on the prison farm at Guelph. Wilson is no stranger to the modus operandi of the ranch in question having sojourned there on previous occasions. Magistrate Dumble advised the accused to try and acquire a number of new habits before he returns to the city of his nativity. Wilson's plea for another chance fell on deaf ears especially after Police Constable Lawrence has testified to Wilson's uncertain habits. The offence that culminated in his arrest was that of sleeping in an outhouse and of being under the influence of liquor. In the police court Wilson looked as though he might have slept in anything but a bath tub.

TWO MONTHS IN GAOL.

An unruly member of the Peterborough Protestant Home was committed to the county gaol for a period of two months. He was turned out of the Home on Monday last for insubordination of long standing. The charge against him this morning was that of vagrancy.

NEW CIRCUIT SUGGESTED FOR CANADIAN LEAGUE

LONDON, Nov. 4.—This is the open season or Hot Stove League baseball, and the announcement that Bill "Derby Day" Clymer has signed to manage the Louisville American Association club, practically means that Frank Shaughnessy of the four-time champion Ottawas will succeed Clymer as manager of the Toronto International League Club.

With Shaughnessy away, the main factor in keeping the franchise in Ottawa in the Canadian League will be removed, thus making the Canadian League the organization that it should be.

The circuit will be made up of clubs in Hamilton, Brantford, Guelph London, St. Thomas and Sarnia-Port Huron next season.

Business men in Sarnia and Port Huron have gone so far as to arrange for a baseball manager and players, having their eye on a good leader already, who is one of the best men in minor league baseball.

Capt. R. E. Layfield is the quartermaster and Lieut. W. W. Stratton is attached to B Company as a subaltern. Pte. Howarth of Peterborough, has been appointed armourer sergeant and Pte. Castle of Peterborough pioneer sergeant of the 59th.

The 59th Battalion at Barriefield camp has now 1330 men and officers on its roll.

Since the beginning of war the 3rd Division, of which Peterborough is a part, has contributed 16,000 troops for overseas service. Of these 1,300 were enlisted in Peterborough. It is estimated that the division must contribute 10,000 more to the new army.

F. J. Doig of the 33rd Field Battery has been discharged as medically unfit, and has returned to Peterborough, after spending some weeks at Barriefield.

The passing away of Pte. Robert Levoir, 2nd Contingent, C.E.F., at his home on Harvey street, is the ninetenth death officially reported in Peterborough's quota to the 2nd Battalion. Among the five or six others officially reported missing since St. Julien, it is feared that some at least have paid the supreme penalty.

Pt. Arthur Phipps paid a visit to the armouries yesterday to see his old captian in the 57th Regiment, Capt. R. P. Watt, of whose company (No. 2) Pte. Phipps was a member before the war broke out.

The Choristers of St. John's Church assembled in choir practice last night, took occasion on the entrance of Rev. Canon Davidson, to pass a resolution of congratulation to him on his appointment to the chaplaincy of the 93rd Regiment, on the motion of Mr. H. W. Morphet and Mr. E. J. Devey. The Rector thanked the assembled Choristers for their good wishes, and for the excellent spirit that obtained between them.

In the promotions in A Company, 93rd Battalion, published yesterday, it was stated that R. Wiltshaw would be lance-corporal of No. 1 Platoon. It should have read lance-sergeant, a promotion from corporal.

WEDDING BELLS

O'CONNOR—BRADY.

St. Mary's Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding this morning when Miss Loretta, Margaret Brady, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Brady, Lindsay, was united in the Holy bonds of Matrimony to Conductor Francis O'Connor, son of the late John O'Connor, of Peterborough.

The ceremony was performed by Monsignor Casey.

The bride, who was escorted by her brother, Mr. Peter M. Brady, entered the church to the strains of Lonvergan's wedding march, and looked charming in a neat suit of Belgian blue, and black hat with white ostrich tips to match. The bridesmaid, Miss Agnes Brady, sister of the bride, also looked pretty in a neat blue military suit with black hat to match. The groom was assisted by Mr. John Calnan, of Peterborough.

After the ceremony the bridal party motored to the home of the bride, where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was partaken of.

The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome pearl pendant, to the bridesmaid a sapphire pendant, and to the groomsman a pearl tie pin.

The happy couple left on the 10:45 train, amid showers of congratulations, on an extended trip to Chicago, Buffalo, Rochester and other points.

The bride was the recipient of a great many beautiful and costly presents which showed the high esteem in which she is held by her many friends.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor will reside in Peterborough.—Lindsay Warder.

400 RUN FOR HOPPE.

Eclipses His Own World's Record of 317 in 14.2 Billiards.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 1.—In his afternoon match at the Red Stag Billiard Academy with Koji Yamada to-day, Willie Hoppe broke his own world's record by running out the string of 400 points of 14.2 billiards on his opening shot, the previous record being 317 for the first shot, made in Paris in 1911 against Cure.

In eight innings to-night, with one blank and one run of 287, Hoppe made 400 to Yamada's 176, which included two marvellous square masses half the length of the table.

KEPT FROM THE FRONT?

"Shunting" of Canadian Officers at Shorncliffe Is Charged.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—On October 27 we cabled a list of changes in the artillery commands at Shorncliffe. This week's Truth recommends that the Canadian military authorities make an enquiry into statements current at Shorncliffe regarding the recent wholesale change in artillery commands, which was apparently done without warning or reason given. "All these officers," says Truth, "some of whom, if not all, have come out in command of their batteries from Canada, are transferred to a reserve brigade, which means that their prospects of going to the front are closed for an indefinite time in favour of new selections. Such wholesale shunting of men at such short notice will require a good deal of justification."

MARRIED.

CONNOR—BRADY.—At St. Mary's Church, Lindsay, by Monsignor Casey, on Wednesday, November 3rd, 1915, Mr. Francis O'Connor, of Peterborough, to Miss Loretta Brady, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Brady, Lindsay.

ATHENS, Nov. 5.—In approval of the attitude of General Yanakitsa, War Minister in the Zaimis Cabinet, whose defiance of ex-Premier Venizelos' pro-war followers in the Parliament on Thursday brought about the Greek Cabinet crisis, King Constantine to-day appointed Yanakitsa his aide-de-camp.

Efforts of Enemy to Regain Lost Ground Are Unavailing

The Bulgarian Troops Badly Defeated Near Strumnitza

Great Serbian Victory is Reported at Babun Pass Bulgars Completely Routed

Counter Attacks by Germans Are Endeavouring to Regain Tahure Positions Taken in Recent Offensive

LONDON, Nov. 6.—South of Strumnitza, on the Bulgar frontier, the Bulgarians were severely defeated. It is thought the British troops are co-operating with the French here. A great Serbian victory is reported at the Babun Pass. The Bulgars were completely routed.

LONDON, England, Nov. 6.—German efforts to recapture ground lost to the Russians near Lake Swenton have been unavailing. One thousand German dead on the field after the attack.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—Counter attacks by the Germans endeavouring to regain Tahure positions taken in recent offensive, were violently aided by artillery and liquid fire. Only at Hill 199 did the Germans make a slight gain.

ROME, Nov. 6.—Reports that Italy will land a force in Albania receives no confirmation here.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 6.—Russian troops have begun an attack on the German forces near Riga from the land and sea.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—Three hundred Indians were aboard the troopship Ramazon, reported sunk in the Aegean. Seventy-five were reported saved.

LONDON, England, Nov. 5.—Premier Asquith is acting temporarily as British War Minister.

The two facts became known to-day when an official announcement was issued, denying that Kitchener had resigned. It was stated that his absence was "temporary," and that he was absent on "public duty."

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 6.—A German submarine was reported sunk off Varna yesterday, apparently by a Russian bombardment.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—It is thought Kitchener has been sent to the Balkans to take British command or either to Gallipoli or Egypt since being replaced "temporarily" by Asquith, as officially announced yesterday afternoon.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 6.—The Russian Minister to Roumania returned yesterday from Bucharest, and immediately conferred with Foreign Minister Sazonoff, presumably concerning Roumanian aid for the Allies.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—Kitchener conferred with King George on Thursday night, despite the King's condition. This, with recent conferences with Asquith, caused rumours of an impending change in the War Office.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 6.—A big fire took place on the Main Street of Miniota, Central Manitoba, to-day. Only four buildings were left standing. Damage of a hundred thousand dollars was done.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—The British transport Ramazan was torpedoed and sunk in the Aegean Sea by a submarine on September 19, it was officially announced last night.

MONTREAL, Nov. 6.—A spectacular fire took place in the Reid Building here yesterday, spreading to other buildings. The entire fire fighting forces were out. Three firemen are dead.

Have Established Solid Front From Vishegrad To the Bulgarian Border

Bulgars Are Now Within Six Miles of Nish—Teutons Pay for Advance With Heavy Losses

LONDON, Nov. 6.—With the capture by the Bulgars of the Lipnica Mountain, only six miles north-east of Nish, and the filling of the gap in the Austro-German line between Uzice and the group fighting east of Vishegrad, the pressure on the Serbian forces in the north and north-east has been increased. By the advance of the Austro-Hungarian troops under General Koevess across the Posega, which is reported from Vienna, the invaders now have established practically an unbroken front from Visherrad to the Bulgarian frontier.

But while the advance of the Austro-Germans and the Bulgars has not been checked, they have been forced to pay dearly for every foot of Serbian territory gained. Moreover, they have failed to force the Serbs to give decisive battle at any point. Such an action it is certain will not be accepted at present by the Serbs, who will confine themselves to vigorous rearguard fighting and the preservation of their forces intact until reinforcements arrive or they are in a better position to turn on their pursuers.

The Serb line west of Uskub and Veles still is repulsing all attempts of the Bulgars to break through, and the railway line from Salonica to a point near Veles is intact. From Uskub the Bulgars are advancing toward Pristina to the north-west. This movement threatens the Serbs' hold on Nish, and also may cut them off from the south, leaving only one line of retreat to Montenegro.

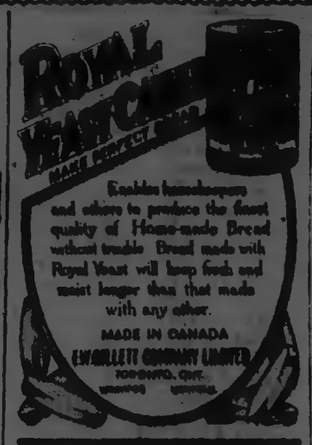
The stand of the Serbs in the south is being supported by the French and British.

From an unofficial source comes news of a victory by the Russians that is calculated to have an important influence on the attitude of Roumania. This is the capture of strong positions near Czernowitz by a strong force advancing through Bukowina.

The Russians have checked the German offensive along the whole eastern front except directly west of Riga, where the nature of the ground makes an advance difficult. The Russians have started a counter offensive at three points — west of Dvinsk, on the Styr, in Volhynia, and on the Stripa, in Galicia. On the Stripa River they report they have won a big victory and to have captured 5,000 prisoners, although admitting the battle still is in progress. They also claim successes at other points.

The Germans, however, assert all the attacks have been repulsed, with heavy losses to the Russians in killed, wounded and prisoners.

A despatch from Petrograd says there is no truth in the report that Russian troops have landed at Varna, Bulgaria's chief Black Sea port.



Work on Railway Between Larissa and Salonika

Is Being Pushed Night and Day —Will Form a Connection Between Athens and Salonika

PARIS, Nov. 6.—Work on the railroad being built from Larissa to Salonica, which will form a connection between Athens and Salonika, is being pushed night and day, according to a Salonika despatch to the Temps. The railroad is one of great military importance.

The first British contingent arrived on Friday at Guevgueli, in the Serbian theatre, according to a Havas despatch filed Saturday at Salonika. The British force will act as a separate unit but in collaboration with the French troops. Guevgueli is just across the Greek border, forty miles northwest of Salonika.

General M. P. E. Sarrail, commander of the Allies' expeditionary forces in Serbia, returned on Friday from a hasty inspection of the French front from Guevgueli to Krivolak. He was favourably impressed with the French positions, which are strongly held on the heights of Sabrovo, Gradek, Demir and Kapou. The French forces advancing northwest from the Greek frontier have not effected a junction with the hard-pressed Serbian army in the vicinity of Veles.

THE TEST.

"I'm prepared to make any sacrifice for you dear," said the sallow young man as he knelt at the feet of his adored one.

"Do you really mean that?" asked the girl, as she thoughtfully studied his features.

"Try me and see."

"Then, I will. You have been making a desperate effort to grow a moustache for two years, Algernon, and the result is—er—rather disappointing. Go to a barber, dear, and sacrifice that on the altar of love."

Hotelmen Warned Not to Sell Liquor to Men Who Are Drunk

J. D. Flavelle Revives an Old Clause in the Liquor Act and Instructs Inspector Stewart to Have it Closely Observed —No Quibbling Over a Definition of "Intoxicated" Will Be Tolerated by the Board if Case is Brought Before Them—Appeal to Peterborough Club.

Although the Provincial License Commission did not leave an impression that could encourage the County Temperance Association to expect any stringent restriction on the liquor traffic in Peterborough when the time arrives to reissue licenses, the chairman, Mr. J. D. Flavelle, made it clear that a strict observance of the law would be demanded. In his summary of the statements made by representatives of the Temperance Association he remarked that clause 70 of the Liquar License Act had practically became a dead letter, and, speaking directly to the hotelmen and the Inspector, instructed not only that this section must be observed, but also laid down a method by which the Commission could keep apprised of its observance.

Mr. Flavelle stated that he believed the temperance people were exaggerating the importance of cutting off the shops. If men in dry sections were determined to obtain liquor they would get it elsewhere if the Peterborough shops were refused licenses. He had no hesitation in saying that the shop was a greater menace than the bar if the laws pertaining to both were observed. A man can't get drunk in a bar if the licensee obeys the law and it is in this connection that the force of Clause 70 operates. This clause enacts that any hotelmen who permits drunkenness and disorderly conduct on his premises, or who permits an intoxicated person to consume liquor on his premises shall be fined not less than $10 and not more than $50. This section has become almost a dead letter, Mr. Flavelle said. The minimum fine has in nearly all cases been imposed. The hotelmen apparently followed the line of least resistance, and the easiest way was to fill a man up with liquor and then put him out.

Busy For the Inspector.

"I want the Inspector to keep a note book" he emphasized, "and to note down the number of men he finds the worse of liquor, who are buying or drinking in the state of intoxication." The instructions also include notes on any disorderly conduct Mr. Flavelle observed that Mr. Stewart would have plenty of time to carry out these instructions closely and to forward his records to the Commission. The Board may cancel a license for any cause, he continued, and a few black marks against any man in the Inspector's report will result in his being called before the Commission and to say why his license should not be cancelled.

"We have nothing against the man who is keeping a hotel in accordance with the Liquor Act, and we will protect him against the lawbreakers in the business. We constitute a court as well as a Board and can deal with cases, and there is no appeal against our decisions."

Limits of Legislation.

The shop, on the other hand, said Mr. Flavelle, could make one man or half a dozen men drunk according to the amount of liquor was purchased. He would strongly support the idea of the Government taking over the shops and conducting them on the basis adopted in Saskatchewan, with a government appointee in charge of each shop. But it would be exceedingly drastic to close them up. They are actually within the law, and Mr. Flavelle pointed out that the Commission was merely administering it. They could, however, make recommendations to the Legislature.

Suggestion to Clubs.

Mr. Flavelle then turned his attention to the likeness of which there is only one in Peterborough. These are abnormal times, and the people are making sacrifices they have never made before. With the closing of bars at 8 o'clock and clubs remaining open, labour men have stated that this is class legislation. They say that the tavern is their club. "But I don't agree with them," but since men are sinking all their differences for the protection of the Empire, would it not be a gracious act, and not such a great sacrifice, to abrogate self-indulgence for a few hours in order to meet with the masses and classes and form a united front. Mr. Flavelle asked the Peterborough Club to take the matter into their serious consideration.

Mr. E. G. Patterson, Mr. W. H. Denham, Mr. E. A. Peck and other members were present. Mr. Patterson replied that this question was now receiving the consideration of the club and he was satisfied that in a short time the Commission would hear from the Club.

Concluding Speakers.

Among the speakers representing the County Temperance Association were Rev. C. W. DeMille, Mr. W. J. Kidd of Indian River, Rev. J. E. Butler of Cavan, Rev. J. G. McKee of Bridgenorth, R. Carter of Lakefield, Rev. W. T. Wickett of Fraserville and others.

Poles and Hungarians On Italian Front

UDINE, via Paris, Nov. 6.— Austrian prisoners who still are passing through Udine from the scene of the late conflicts testify to the special efforts made by their army to repulse the long expected Italian offensive. A large proportion of the men are Poles and Hungarians, withdrawn from the Russian front. There are many quite young and elderly soldiers among the captured, who comprise men from every nationality under Austrian rule.

Nearly 2,000 Women Fighting in Serbia's Army

LONDON, Nov. 6. — "There were nearly two thousand women in Serbia's army when I left, and more women soldiers were being organized," said Dr. Gruitch, a Serbian army physician, now in London, to-day. "The women are not in special battalions. Some of them wear the complete uniform of a soldier for the sake of comfort, while others wear skirts with a blue tunic. The younger women go with their brothers or their husbands. The women are of every class of population, and we cannot prevent them from serving. They inspire the men, with whom they march side by side and with whom they eat and serve shoulder to shoulder in the trenches.

The clergyman of a country village, reprehending one of his parishioners for quarreling with his wife so loudly and frequently as to be a source of perpetual disturbance to the neighbourhood, in the course of his exportation remarked that the Scriptures declared that man and wife were one.

"Aye, that may be, sir," answered Hodge, "but if you were to go by when me and my wife are at it you'd think there were twenty of us."

CHAPTER I.

The First Step.

I HAD placed the lumber inside the yards, as directed, and was already relitching the traces when the man crossed the street slowly, switching his light cane carelessly in the air. He was forty or forty-five, heavily built, with a rather pasty white face, a large nose, eyes unusually deep set and a closely clipped mustache, beginning to gray. As I faced him in some surprise he looked me fairly in the eye.

"You are the lad the train hands put off the Atlantic express at Vernon a week ago," he said. "I came in on the same train. Just caught a glimpse of your face in the light of the brakeman's lantern. How did you get here?"

"Freight, two hours late."

"You're not a bum or you wouldn't be working."

I put one foot on the wheel.

"Wait a minute," and there was more animation in the tone. "I may have something better for you than this lumber wagon. I'm right, ain't I, in guessing you're no regular bum?"

"I've bummed it most of the way from San Francisco. I had to. I was homesick for the east and lost my transportation. I was discharged at the Presidio."

"Oh, I see. The army—foreign service?"

"The Philippines, three years; invalided home."

"You don't look it," his eyes on me. "Never saw a more perfect animal. Fever?"

"No, hole wound."

He looked at his watch, and I climbed into my seat.

"See here, I haven't time to talk now. If you want an easier job than this come and see me at 9 tonight, and we'll talk it over."

I took the bit of pasteboard he handed up.

"All right, sir, I'll be there on time."

"Come to the side door," he added swiftly, lowering his voice, "the one on the south. Give three raps. By the way, what is your name?"

"Gordon Craig," I answered.

"Ever been known by any other?"

"I enlisted under another. I ran away from home and was not of age."

Out of his sight I looked curiously at the card. It was the advertisement of a clothing house, and on the back was written "P. B. Neale, 108 Chestnut street."

Evidently this man Neale had need of a stranger to help him out in some scheme. Well, if the pay was good and the purpose not criminal I had no objections to the spice of danger. Indeed, that was what I lived in life. I was young, full blooded, strong, willing enough to take desperate chances for sufficient reward.

My father, from whom I had not heard a word in two years, was a prominent manufacturer in a New England village. The early death of my mother had left me to his care when I was but ten years old, and we failed to understand each other, drifting apart, until a final quarrel had sent me adrift. I was in my junior year at Princeton, when the break came. This all occurred four years previous, three of which had been passed in the ranks, yet even now I was stubbornly resolved not to return unsuccessful.

I possessed a fairly decent suit of clothes, now pressed and cleaned after the rough trip from the coast, and that evening I dressed as carefully as possible in the dingy room of my boarding house. It was still daylight, but there was a long walk before me. Chestnut street was across the river, in the more aristocratic section.

It was dark enough when I got there and began seeking the number. I found No. 108. It was slightly back from the street, a large stone mansion, surrounded by a low coping of brick and with no light showing anywhere. I was obliged to mount the front steps before I could assure myself this was the place. I followed the narrow cement walk around the corner of the house. One window on the first floor exhibited a faint glow at the edge of a closely drawn curtain. I rapped on the door three times, my nerves tingling from excitement. There was a moment's delay as that I lifted my hand again, and then the door opened silently.

"Come in," said a man's voice.

I stepped within, seeing nothing of the man, and the door was closed behind me. The sharp click of the latch convinced me it was secured by a spring lock.

"Turn on the light," said the voice at my side sharply. Instantly an electric bulb glowed dazzling overhead in a narrow hallway and I blinked, about half blinded by the sudden change.

Neale, appearing somewhat more slender in evening clothes, smiled at me genially, showing a gold crowned tooth, and led the way to a spacious apartment, evidently a library. The high ceiling and restful wall decorations were emphasized by luxurious furnishings. The only light was under a shaded globe on the central table, leaving the main apartment in shadows, but the windows had their heavy curtains closely drawn. The sole occupant was a man in evening dress, seated in a high backed leather chair. With an indolent wave of one hand he seemingly invited me to take a vacant chair to the right, while Neale remained standing near the door.

This new position gave me a better view of his face, but I could not guess his age. His was one of those old young faces, deeply lined, smooth shaven, the hair clipped short, the flesh ashen gray. He must have stared at me a full minute.

"He will do very well, Neale," he decided, with a glance across at the other. "Possibly a trifle young. Have a cigar or a drink, Craig?"

"I will smoke."

"How old are you?"

"Twenty-four."

"Ever been south?"

"Only as far as St. Louis. I was at Jefferson barracks."

"Neale said you were in the army—full enlistment?"

"Yes. Discharged as corporal."

"You would be glad of a job that paid well and wouldn't mind if there was a bit of excitement connected with it, hey?"

"What is your idea of paying well?"

"Expenses liberally figured," he replied slowly, "and $10,000 for a year's work or less if done right."

I half rose to my feet in surprise.

"Sit down, man. This is no pipe dream, and I mean it. In fact, I am willing to hand you half of the money down. See here, Craig," and he leaned forward, peering into my face, "all you have got to do to earn your money is obey orders strictly and keep your tongue still. Do you get that?"

"The proposition looks good, only I should like to know a little more clearly what I am expected to do."

He slowly lit a fresh cigar, studying the expression of my face in the light as though deciding upon a course of action.

"Very good. We'll come down to facts. It will not take long. In the first place, my name is Vail—Justus C. Vail. I am a lawyer of some reputation in this state, and my entire interest in this affair is that of legal adviser of Mr. Neale. Here is the case as submitted to me: Judge Philo Henley, formerly of the United States circuit court, retired at sixty-four and settled upon a large plantation near Carrollton, Ala. His wife died soon after, and a week or so ago the judge also departed this life, leaving an estate valued in excess of $500,000. Philo Henley and wife had but one child, now a young man of twenty-five years, named Philip. As a boy he was wild and unmanageable, and finally when about twenty years old some prank occurred of so serious a nature that the lad ran away. He came north and was unheard of for some time, living under an assumed name. Later some slight correspondence ensued between father and son, and the boy was granted a regular allowance. Philip remained in the north, led his own life, became dissipated and a rounder and drifted into evil associations. Finally, about six months ago, he married an actress in this city, not of wealthy family, but of respectable antecedents. He married her under his assumed name, and they began housekeeping in a flat on the north side.

"The judge learned of this marriage in some way and began to insist that the son return home with his wife. Circumstances prevented, however, and the visit was deferred. Meanwhile, becoming more eccentric as he grew older, the father discharged all his old servants and lived the life of a recluse. When he died suddenly and almost alone he left a will leaving his property to Philip, providing the young man returned with his wife to live upon the estate within six months; otherwise the entire estate should be divided among certain named charities. Three administrators were named, of whom Neale here was one."

Neale drew a legal looking paper from his pocket.

"Here is a copy of the will," he said, "if Craig cares to examine it."

"Not now," I replied. "Let me hear the entire story first."

"The administrators," Vail went on as though uninterrupted and repeating a set speech, "endeavored to locate young Henley, but failed. Then Mr. Neale was sent here to make a personal search. He came to me for aid and legal advice. Finally we found the flat where the young couple had lived. It was deserted, and we learned from neighbors that they had quarreled, and the wife left him. We have been unable to discover her whereabouts. She did not return to or communicate with her own people in the west or with any former friends in this city. She simply disappeared and, we have some reason to believe, committed suicide. The body of a young woman fitting her general description was taken from the river and buried without identification."

"And young Henley?" I asked as he paused.

"Henley," he continued gravely, "was at last located under an assumed name as a prisoner in the Indiana penitentiary at Michigan City, serving a sentence of fourteen years for forgery. He positively refuses to identify himself as Philip Henley, and all our efforts to gain him a pardon have failed."

The Coming Guest.

There are many things you can do to make your guest comfortable. For instance, every guest room in a house unlighted by electricity should be provided with a small bedroom candlestick which has a glass wind shield to protect the candle flame from a draught.

The candlestick, with its fresh candle, should stand beside the bed on a small table. Matches are too often forgotten in a guest room, and no one likes to go to bed in a strange house without means of making a light quickly, if need arises.

A small, flowered tin cake box, filled with crackers, or anything else to nibble on, will be appreciated by the wakeful guest, who may not have had a bite to eat since dinner and who may not be used to going to sleep with an empty stomach. One does not like to ask one's hostess for something to eat at midnight and the thoughtfully provided crackers may save such a guest a wakeful night. Saltine biscuit or Scotch shortbread are toothsome crackers for the little tin box.

Another comfort which the thoughtful hostess provides is a tin hot water can with a long spout. If the guest desires hot water, she can fetch it from the bathroom in the can, without bothering anybody or having to carry the heavy china pitcher to and from the bathroom.

SHE GAINED 25 POUNDS.
Mrs. George Bradshaw, Harlowe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dropsy. I had nervous headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, and was in fact, a semi-invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up but by using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaints and gained 25 pounds in weight."

GETTING A WIFE BY MAIL

THIS young man, trained to look for "bargain" from pictures, falls for the matrimonial agency bait. For months he courted his future wife from Long Distance with the help of a photograph. The photograph was certainly "easy to look at." The day when he was to meet her COULD not come to soon. But, alas, what a rude awakening! His prize was a blank. He didn't know that there are always two sides to a picture, the original and the counterfeit. MORAL.—"Out-of-town" schemers, flirting for your dollars, do not send you the real picture. Bombardment of Nish the Serbian War Capital by the Bulgarian Army is Imminent

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The bombardment of Nish, the Serbian war capital, by the Bulgarian army under Gen. Bojadieff is imminent. This army is now less than six miles north east from the city, having taken the town of Kalfat by storm. At the present rate of progress of the Balkan invaders the key to the southern Serbian sector of the Orient railway, that is the gate to the road to Constantinople, will be under fire of the Bulgarian heavy artillery before another 48 hours have passed.

Both from the Zaitchar-Paracin high road and from the River Svrtjig the Bulgarians are steadily closing on Nish. Further south the forces that attempted an advance from Ezri Palanka are apparently still being held in check by the Serbs.

The Teuton centre, too, has made considerable headway during the last 24 hours, according to the German War Office statement. Moving jointly from Krazujevac and Cacak, Gen. Von Koevess' forces on the western bank of the Morava are sweeping along two railroads leading to Kruseve and Kraljevo, respectively. The army heading for the latter point is being supported to the west by the Austrians, and both are believed to have set Novi Bazar as their ultimate goal, thus to hedge in the main Serbian army more and more, cutting off its retreat toward and over the Montenegrin border.

"Attacks against the Montenegrin frontier positions continue. In the captured positions east of Bilek and south of Avtovac enemy attacks were repulsed. On the mountain of Bobija hand grenade fighting has developed.

Serbian resistance in the district of Kraguyevatz and near Jagodina has collapsed and the enemy is retreating. The Austro-Hungarian troops of Gen. Koevess have advanced across the Pozega and communication between Uzice and the group fighting east of Visheprad has been established. South-west of Cacak we threw the enemy from the heights dominating the valley. Other Austro-Hungarian forces took the heights of Stolica and Lipnic glavica, pressing back the Serbians to the Drobrja ridge.

"German troops have entered Jacodina. One Bulgarian column has advanced to Bolievac, south-west of Zajecar, and another column has captured the mountain of Lipnica, north-west of Nish. Attacks by the Bulgarians south-west of Pirot are gaining ground."

A Bulgar Defeat.

The defeat inflicted on the Bulgarian centre by the Serbians, made known yesterday in the official statement issued at Berlin, is said by the Serbian War Office to have occasioned great losses to the Bulgarians and compelled them to retreat in disorder.

Gen. M. P. E. Sarrail, commander of the allies' expeditionary force in Serbia, returned Friday from a hasty inspection of the French front from Gueveueli to Krivolak. He was favourably impressed with the French positions, which are strongly held on the Heights of Babrovo, Gratek, Demir and Kapou.

No Decisive Battle Yet.

The latest wireless messages received through Scutari say that the cohesion of the Serbian army has been preserved. Where necessary, the troops are making an orderly strategical retirement. Rear-guard actions are being carried on efficiently, and the armies are being maintained unimpaired.

The Serbians are holding the line west of Uskub and Kuprulu (Veles) and along the Babuna mountains. The railway is safe from Salonica to a point near Kuprulu.

Up to the present, the advices say the Austro-Germans have paid dearly for the advance they have made. No decisive battle has been fought, and such an action will not be accepted by the Serbians at the present.

Official Germany War Sick and Are Anxious For Early Peace

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 5. — Germany's secret negotiations for peace have fallen flat in Holland, even the most pro-German Dutchman considering the terms preposterous. It is believed that the man behind the plot is Dr. Solf, German Colonial Secretary. Dr. Solf recently visited Holland, preserving great secrecy about his identity, but his presence in the country became known to the Dutch newspapers. It was officially announced in Germany that he was merely travelling to Brussels and had stopped in Holland to visit the picture galleries. Dr. Solf stayed three days at The Hague and paid visits to the Dutch Foreign Secretary and Dutch politicians who are known to be friendly to Germany. Other Germans of note were in Holland at the same time, including it is said Count von Radowitz, of the German Foreign Office. Before Dr. Solf left Berlin he had interviews with the Kaiser and Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg. Those who saw him at The Hague gathered the impression that even in official circles the Germans are war sick and in a hurry to finish the conflict before Christmas.

THE DOG'S OLD NOSE.

When your faithful old dog pokes his nose into your hand, even your affection cannot prevent a shiver. Why is it? When the body of a dog is so warm, why should this one spot be different from the rest of him? The old fable tells us that when Noah tried to get all the animals into the ark some of them were troublesome, and he had to get a dog to help him drive the last to enter the ark. There was no room left, so he had to stand in the doorway with his nose outside in the wet, and it has never been warm since. Science gives quite another explanation of the matter. The coldness of a dog's nose, says science is due to the fact that it must be kept moist in order to sharpen his sense of smell. And, as the moisture is cooled by the air, it keeps his nose cold all the time. In addition to the olfactory or smelling nerves inside a dog's nostrils, the whole black membrane around the nose is very sensitive and this sensitiveness can only be retained by moisture. Thus it is that when a dog's nose is dry and warm he is ill and needs doctoring.

What Did Little Mary Buy?

1916 Ford Touring Car
FIRST PRIZE
For the Best Reply
$1000.00

JOHN BROWN owns a prosperous grocery store in a thriving Canadian town. He is a very methodical and attentive man and has proved to his mind methods of creating interest in his store.

Recently, he took several lines of his regular goods, put them under cover in cases and barrels, and wrote the name of each article on the outside. Only he mixed up the letters in each name so that instead of spelling the right name of the article, it spelled something different altogether. For instance box 9 contained Raisins, but Mr. Brown jumbled the letters in the words Raisins until they read "N Rains." Then he rubbed the word apples off the apple barrel, and jumbled the letters up that name until they read "Pine Pe," as you see on barrel 11.

Fourteen lines of goods in Mr. Brown's store were displayed this way, and a prize was given to any customer who could place an order for all fourteen and tell the number of the box each was in. Little Mary went to Brown's store to make her purchases, guessed all the names correctly and won the prize. Can you do as well?

Two of the names are already given to you to start you right. What are the other twelve?

THIS CONTEST IS ABSOLUTELY FREE OF EXPENSE

If your answers gain 120 points you will win First Prize

A FEW HINTS.—The goods mentioned under each of the fourteen numbers are staple lines such as are to be found in every grocery store and in regular use in every home. No trade-mark names or products of any particular firm or manufacturer are given,—just the regular name of each product or article. A good plan is to write down the names of all the things usually found in a grocery store and use the list as your guide. Be careful, because Mr. Brown was clever, and sometimes he made two or three words, and even more out of a name.

The judges will award the prizes in this contest, according to the points gained by each entry, and we will fully advise you of the method, when your answer is received. For instance, 60 points can be gained by spelling correct answer to each of the twelve names you can guess, there are ten points given for general neatness, ten for style, spelling, punctuation, etc., and when your quality, 40 points additional can be gained. Take lots of time to puzzle out your answer, be neat and careful, and you can win a good prize.

Then, in order to qualify your entry, we will ask you to do us the small favor of introducing it to three or four friends and neighbors. RIVER OF GOLD RUNNING INTO NEW YORK ASSAY OFFICES

NEW YORK, Nov 2 — Straight from the heart of the city of London a river of gold is running into a huge gray pile of stone with barred windows at Nassau and Pine streets, New York. Spirits of thousands of men—dead in blood-soaked battlefield of Europe—are riding along in that sluggish yellow current.

The huge gray pile of stone is the United States Assay office. Since July 1, four months ago, the stream has flowed steadily into its many melting pots. In that time, approximately $115,000,000 in the yellow metal has passed through the office, representing, for the most part, payment for shrapnel, shells, guns, cartridges, automobiles, horses, uniforms, and the thousand and one other things necessary to war making.

From all quarters of the globe the stream has been fed into the melting pots have gone $20,000,000 in English sovereigns, $5,000,000 in Japanese yen, $3,000,000 in French napoleons, and many many other millions in bullion, Russian roubles and other coins. They emerged, and are still emerging, in common-looking dull bricks that are hurried to Philadelphia, where they are reborn into Uncle Sam's double eagles.

"Never in the history of the Assay office has so much gold passed through in four months," said an official to-day as he sat on a truck load of metal, the value of which was over $2,000,000.

"Since July 1 we have been running almost to our fullest capacity. Life for us is just one round of melting, moulding, weighing and counting.

"Here, you, he said to two men who were rolling a truck containing probably $3,000,000, "hustle that into coal is not in sight" the weighing room. They're waiting for it."

Not a man in the workrooms leaves the building in the same clothes he enters. Hundreds of dollars may be collected in seams and scratches. A stranger cannot even get in the street door unless he can prove to an obstinate guard that he has business there.

The water with which the men wash after their day's work is finished is carefully preserved—every drop of it. For in the bottom of the vessel is probably $10 in dust—little yellow flakes that are almost invisible. Even the towels with which they wipe their hands are washed in separate vessels and this water carefully preserved. Almost a young fortune can collect in a rough Turkish towel.

Whenever there is the slightest semblance of a breeze, there are no windows open. The precious dust might be wafted out into the street. Every day the floor is swept with infinite care and the collection guarded like a bank vault. In the endless succession of melting and moulding little flakes and chips will get on the floor, despite the seemingly superhuman care taken to prevent it.

There is no sign of a drought that will dry up the yellow stream. The end of the war will bring it in sight, but for long after hostilities have cease I ... payments must ... to come in.

"If the possession of much gold is a harbinger of unusual prosperity, this country is due for an extended period," said an official to-day. "Certainly never in the nation's history has there been such a flood as in the last four months, and the

"I mounted the bench with my friend," related Mr Maude, "and gazed very intently about me. It was my first experience in such a court and I was greatly impressed, but I thought there was a particularly hard looking crowd in court that morning. I said to the Judge, 'That's a rather rough lot you have to deal with this morning, isn't it?' I am afraid I spoke rather louder than I should, but at any rate he didn't appear to notice my remark. I repeated it. He turned and gave me an agonized look, motioning me under the bench to be quiet. I couldn't imagine what the matter was until we left the bench. Then he said to me, 'For heaven's sake, don't you know those were only the lawyers you were looking at?'"

STRAIGHT LINES IN THE NEW BOX COAT

When Does a Cuff Become a Sleeve

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The wealth of artistic and smart ideas in afternoon and street frocks this season while fascinating, is somewhat bewildering, too.

Of course the chief features are the same, this is out of respect to Fashion's dictates, but there are any number of ways that one may vary these details effectively to meet the demands of one's own personality. Fashion shows are becoming as popular with women in general as any smart social event. The dainty mannequins wear the clothes as if to "The Manor Born," and perhaps a bit more gracefully.

The Popularity of the Box Coat.

Since the first showing of fall and winter fashions there has been much discussion as to whether the regulation tailored suit with normal waistline, snugly fitted, would dominate; at first it seemed as if it would, but since then there has been a decided change toward the looser, belted models, unbelted coats with a half suggestion of waistline, or stranger still, no waist at all, a return in short to the box coat.

These box models are new very smart indeed; they appear in tailor-made suits, separate coats and fur coats. Most of the fur coats, in fact, show the box back, even if the front of the coat is belted.

The Modish Box Coat.

The effect of these unfitted coats is a bit more youthful than the fitted lines which demand beauty and grace of figure. The French woman appreciates the line that is most becoming to her figure, and in most instances that is the straight line.

Among the new frocks and suits there are, too, boleros and Etons that are really quite charming. These also are becoming to the average figure.

One seen at a recent fashion show was of gold lace, combined with black charmeuse. It was on an afternoon frock, and was simple to a degree, but unusually attractive. Another of dark blue serge was made with square cut yoke, back and front, to which the lower portion of the Eton was gathered, forming a soft, full line across the bust, being drawn snugly in at the waist, where it was stitched to a two-inch belt of the serge. The skirt also showed the yoke and was embroidered with a chain-stitch design worked out in silver threads at the joining of yoke and lower portion of the skirt. The same embroidery was carried out on the jacket, on collar, fronts and belt.

The Necessary Touch of Fur.

One in talking of fashions must speak again and again of fur—it is so absolutely necessary to gown and suit that every imaginable animal that has a furry pelt, is being utilized, and the furriers are reaping wonderful harvests. Among the most popular furs for trimming purposes are lynx, beaver, seal, and krimmer. The dark blue serge is smartened with a touch of natural gray krimmer, and the satin finished broadcloth is enriched by narrow and wide bands of seal or beaver.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

THE LITTLE CHILDREN.

Are all the little children in Thy arms, O Lord to-night,
Safe from the roaring battle and the thunder of the fight?
Are all the little children tucked away until the morn
Beyond the bitter trouble, and the conflict and the scorn?
For if they are, God rest us,
We'll be happy even quick
That they are on Thy bosom
Whom He loved so much, Thy Son!
Are all the little children cuddled up upon Thy breast?
To dream the starry night away in bloomy fields of rest?
Are all the little children safely in from romp and play,
With loved arms clasped around them as they kneel at night to pray?
Oh, if they are we're happy,
And we'll be ourselves to dream
With faith's great temple o'er us,
And the light of love agleam.
Are all the little children 'neath the shelter of Thy wing?
Oh, Lord, of all the children in the rosy lanes of spring?
Are all the little children kissed and comforted to-night
Beyond the darkling demons of the factions and the fight?
Then, we at last may follow,
And be happy, and be sure
Of strength to toil and love them,
And to suffer and endure!

BE CHEERFUL.

Keep a stiff upper lip, and rise above the clouds of adversity, tho they threaten momentarily to overwhelm you. This may you be led to forget your precarious position, until soon a ray of hope penetrates the obscurity, all darkness disappears, and the day dawns forth with renewed brilliancy.

Don't allow your mind to dwell on dismal themes, lest a gloomy imagination run away with you. It always augments grief and magnifies misfortune.

Interest yourself in the present, and diffuse the extra pleasures of the day through succeeding ones, in order to enliven the whole week.

Preserve the memory of past happiness until sure of a fresh supply, but never place yourself in the position to lose sight of both. It is as oppressive as the darkness of a total eclipse.

There is no tear shed for the old bachelor; there is no ready hand and kind heart to cheer him in his loneliness and bereavement; there is none in whose eyes he can see himself reflected, and from whose lips he can receive the unfailing assurances of care and love. He may be courted for his money; he may eat, drink and revel; and he may sicken and die in a [illegible] with plenty of attendants about him, like so many cormorants, waiting for their prey; but he will never know the comforts of the domestic fireside.

THE WELL BRED GIRL

She doesn't talk loud in public places.

She does not accept a valuable present from a man unless she expects to marry him.

She doesn't say she hates women, and she has some good true friends among them.

She does not speak of her mother in a sarcastic way, and she shows her the loving deference that is her due.

She doesn't want to be a man, and she doesn't try to imitate him by wearing stiff hats, smoking cigarettes, and using slang.

She doesn't scorn the use of the needle and expect some day to make clothes for very little people who will be very dear to her.

She doesn't shove and push to get the best seat, and she doesn't wonder why in the world people carry children in the cars, and why they permit them to cry.

Be as courteous at home as you are abroad; respect your family as you wish to be respected. Don't save all your smiles for strangers and all your frowns for home. You will never regret the kindness you have shown, while your thoughtlessness and indifference to your own may reap a bitter harvest. Life would be smoother in many a home if everybody would endeavor to understand his or her neighbor in the home, and if everybody were taken at the best and not at the worst.

TO BE FASCINATING.

Doubtless thousands of young people, and not a small number of older ones, wish every day of their lives that they could learn the secret of fascinating others by means of their graceful, exquisite manner. The secret is an open one. It is easy to learn that it lies all neglected by the wayside, while they who would give their dearest treasure to find it pass unknowingly.

It is only this: Fill your hearts with good will towards everybody, and then practice at all times the best manner you know, particularly at home. If you begin at home, this charming manner will, so to speak get settled on you and never leave you. Be just as polite to your sister as you would to your best girl. Strive to gain the good will of mother, father, and brother, and sister, and children, exactly as you strive to gain good will abroad.

A noble purpose, a brave spirit, and a patient soul can never be defeated in the battle of life. Don't give up; you will win yet.

WOULD NOT MEND COAT.

A certain woman has been noted since girlhood for her ready wit.

The other day a young amateur humorist exclaimed, in her presence:

"What could be more dreadful for a woman than, after mending her husband's coat, to find in one of the pockets a love letter from another woman?"

"Fortunately," was the answer, "that could never happen. The woman would find the letter first, and then she would not mend the coat."

NEW STYLES CALL FOR PLENTY OF TRIMMING

An attractive design for a dress seen this week possesses a very desirable skirt, and a waist that can be made more dressy at will. The making up is merely a matter of trimming.

Now that full skirts with boning and hoops are worn, this sort of skirt lends itself very well to the flare of either hoop or featherbone under cords, shirrings or ruffles in the lower part of the skirt. On this figures it is the fashion to put the boning around the hips in evening dresses, or in taffeta afternoon frocks for smart occasions. The pattern after which this dress was made may be manipulated to serve any purpose, from a plain morning frock of wool or velveteen, or corduroy, to a silken afternoon dress or or diaphanous evening costume. The difference in the costumes would be marked by draperies and trimmings and by a change in style in the waist.

For a morning frock, use braid or folds on the bottom of the skirt and add pockets if you like on the sides. For afternoon, bone the trimming that you put around the bottom of silk or satin skirts, even as far as the knee, and you can put all the trimming you please; it is the style. It is also smart to add two imitation pockets of rich trimming on the sides of the skirt. Some people open the pattern in front and leave a space, which is sometimes faced and turned back, showing a front of another kind. This is an economical method of making up a dress of old and new materials. With this sort of skirt, a bolero should be worn over the waist, and that should have a fancy finish to the sleeve and to the collar. The arm hole should always be marked or outlined with trimming, or a fold, where a dress is being made for formal occasions.

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it formed stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

SCARF LENDS PRETTY TOUCH TO ANY GOWN

NOT ONLY GIVES WARMTH BUT ADDS CHEER TO EVENING DRESS WHEN MADE OF DELICATELY COLORED SILKEN MESH.

It is very fashionable this year to carry a scarf with the evening gown.

Many women carry scarfs this season, as they did last, because well they understand the alluring and illusive charm of a floating scarf drifting about shoulders or arms and giving a faint touch of misty colour to the gown or bare arms and neck. The scarf, too, is not without its practical uses, for thin though it be, silken meshes convey quite a modicum of warmth and prevent many a girl from catching cold in draughts after the dance.

One pretty model seen this week is designed for misses and small women, and the air of a fairly like fragility is enhanced by the dainty trimming of ribbon flowers around the skirt. This is a very easy trimming to apply, as these flowers come made of chiffon, silk, satin and braid, attached to a delicate braid or ribbon foundation, by the yard, and they are rapidly applied. Of course a girl with plenty of time can make the flowers out of bits of materials, as most of them are very small and of no particular shape or colour. It is quite the fad to use a number of colours in a group where the blossoms are small.

Over a gown of this sort may be worn an overskirt, either with or without the silver or ribbon-covered hoop wires that are now in vogue between the overskirt and skirt. As is seen, the bodice is merely a wide draped girdle over a fitted foundation, and the upper part of the waist may be of tulle and silver lace, or net, or chiffon, or any suitable sort of lace. The frilly sleeves effect on the shoulder is becoming to a very young girl, but most bodies of this sort are without the frilly shoulder sleeves on older women. Either long sleeves or no sleeves are worn, and the long sleeves are thin as air and trimmed at the wrist with siderdown, tulle, lace, velvet, or any odd concert; the two wrists not usually trimmed alike.

PAIN IN THE BACK

Usually Comes From Muscular Rheumatism

Do not worry about a pain in the back. The worry will do you more harm than the pains. The cause of most backaches is muscular rheumatism, which is painful enough, but not fatal. Lumbago is a form of muscular rheumatism, so is a stiff neck. Sufferers from any form of rheumatism should keep their general health up to the highest standard by the use of a blood building tonic like Dr. Williams Pink Pills, while taking good, nourishing food, without too much meat. Proper nutrition and pure blood are the best means of fighting rheumatism. Rheumatism comes from an acid in the blood, build it up, strengthen the system, and drive out the poisonous acid that causes rheumatism. In this way sufferers have found complete recovery as is shown by the following case: Mrs. Samuel Childerhouse, Orillia, Ont., says:—"About three years ago I was greatly afflicted with a severe pain in the back, which I thought at first was due to kidney trouble. I tried a number of remedies but they did not help me any, in fact the pain was growing worse and got so bad that I was quite unable to do my housework. I could not even sweep a floor. I was advised to try Dr. Williams Pink Pills, and I am glad I acted upon the advice, for before I had been taking the Pills long the pain began to subside, and under the continued use disappeared entirely, and I have not since been bothered with it in any way. My husband was also cured of a severe attack of indigestion by the same medicine so that we both have much reasons to be grateful for it."

You can get Dr Williams Pink Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FOR THE OVER-PLUMP.

Daily massage of unsightly lumps of fat keeps them down and if this is given by an expert so much the better. However if you have good sense you can manage it yourself, and by steady massage cause the disfigurements to disappear. The application of camphor, softened with olive oil, is good for reducing the hips, but more than anything else, good hard rubbing is what is needed.

Daily baths of nearly cold water should be taken, and they should be taken between meals, and at night a very hot bath. Next comes the selection of food which should be made with great care, and special regard to the individual case.

All of the fat making things, cream, soups hot bread, sweets in excess, and greasy meats, must be avoided. Toast is better than other bread, and no soup better than any sort. The chief requisite here indeed, is to get the stomach accustomed to a smaller quantity of food and to acquire the habit of eating only the things which are nourishing, and which will not ferment or cause flatulence, or any quantity of food above the necessary amount only goes to fat, and thus, being in itself a species of disease, is encouraged by the interruption of healthy operations.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

7281

Pleated skirts are very much in vogue, and they have the advantage of being suitable for practically all materials. For travel wear taffeta seems to be the fabric preferred to all others, but some women still cling to serge and other woollens, while still others prefer broadcloth or even linen. For all but the longest journeys the washable goods and taffetas are the best and most comfortable.

This skirt is a four gore model. The front and the back are both arranged to form plain panels, extending the full length of the garment from waist to hem. The sides of the skirt are arranged in pleats which turn backward and which may be made to extend the full length of the skirt or to end at the lower edge of the yokes. These are applied and may be used or omitted as preferred.

On all but very stout women the yoke at the side of the dress is becoming, far more so than the full length pleats, which rarely lie as flat as is necessary with the present day silhouette. Those who are not sufficiently skilful to handle pleats may gather the sides of this skirt, retaining the pleats in front and back.

In a wash skirt a good idea is to run a dium size requires, with yokes, 4¾ yards line of stitching near the inner edge of each pleat instead of taping them. This prevents their flaring too much and makes of 36 inch material.

The skirt pattern, No. 7281, is cut in sizes 22 to 32 inches waist measure. Medium size requires, with yokes, 4¾ yards of 36 inch material.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A MATTER OF CONSCIENCE.

By M. QUAD.

Deacon Uriah Hart of the village of Poolsville was an ex-deacon, as a matter of fact, but the title still clung to him. It was the same with Deacon Abraham Noble. For ten years there was a neighborly and a brotherly feeling between these two men. Then came a rupture. They traded horses, and each felt that the other had taken advantage of him. There was no scandal over it, but the two men were cool to each other and had nothing to explain, even to their wives. The minister of their church sought to smooth over matters, but found them noncommittal.

At the end of the year Deacon Hart rose up in prayer meeting one night and said that, while he had tried his best to be a good man, he had made a slip or two in his life. One of those slips rested hard on his conscience and he would ask forgiveness. He was about to make a statement when a big piece of plaster fell from the ceiling and struck him on the head, and his injuries were such that he was in bed for a fortnight.

He had been out of bed and walking around for a month when he and Deacon Noble met on the bridge. They were about to pass with a nod when the latter deacon stopped and said:

"Uriah, I don't feel right in my mind. It isn't about that horse trade, but something else. I think of it and can't sleep nights. I'm going to own up and ask you"—

But he didn't own up. Just then a farmer's runaway team came along, and they had to jump into the creek to get out of the way. They both crawled out sopping wet and went home, and after they had got dried out conscience didn't seem to prick quite so hard. Then Deacon Hart wounded himself in the leg with a pitchfork, and after a day or two symptoms of blood poisoning set in. He feared that his days were numbered, and he sent for Deacon Noble and said:

"Abraham, I may die of this, and I want to leave my house in order. My conscience is pricking me about a certain thing in connection with you, and I want to get it off my mind."

"That's right, Uriah," urged the other. "No one ought to go to the grave with anything on his mind. I'm ready to hear your confession."

But no confession was made. The doctor came in just then to examine and dress the wound, and he said he was glad to inform Deacon Hope that the bad symptoms had disappeared and that the leg would now do nicely. These words had a wonderful effect on conscience, and the deacon shut his lips and waited for some other time. That time didn't come for a year or more. Then Deacon Noble's wife was taken ill with typhoid fever. When the crisis approached and the doctor said the chances were all against her the husband broke down. He was out under an apple tree, and when Deacon Hart came along and began to express his sympathy Deacon Noble decided to relieve his conscience.

But he didn't relieve it. The doctor came to the door and beckoned to him and whispered that he believed the crisis was passed. It was such good news that Deacon Noble wouldn't have confessed anything for a hundred dollars. His wife convalesced, and time ran along until the biannual camp meeting opened. Both deacons were particularly strong on camp meetings. They were there and enthusiastic. On the third day of the camping the spirits of all were aroused by the words of a visiting minister, and at length Deacon Hart got up and said that he could stand it no longer. He was admonished to make a full confession, but before he could start out Deacon Noble, who was laboring under nervous excitement, arose and said that he had a burden on his conscience that he was determined to get rid of.

Something might have come of the two confessions then and there but for some loafers who had planned to break up the meeting. They let a lot of bees loose on the people and created a diversion lasting an hour, and when it was over it was found that both deacons had been stung so many times that any matters of conscience had been adjourned to a more propitious occasion. That occasion came just a year later. There was a flood in the river, and both deacons turned out to help the sawmill man save his property. They were engaged in this neighborly task when both found themselves seated on the same log and being whirled downstream. It was then that Deacon Hart said:

"Abraham, we are in danger."

"We are, Uriah."

"We may never see home again."

"I'm afraid we won't."

"Then I'll make that confession to you, and you make yours to me."

"Yes; the time has surely come."

"Abraham, we traded horses. I thought you cheated me."

"Just what I thought of you, Uriah."

"I didn't say anything about it, but to get even with you I sneaked into your barn one night and cut off your cow's tail. Can you, will you, forgive a repentant man?"

"With all my heart, Uriah. I thought you had beat me in that horse trade and one night I sneaked over into your pasture and knocked the horns off your bull. Shake! Neither one of us has a durned thing on his conscience and this saw log is driving right ashore, and we shall be saved as sure as shooting!"

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

A Real Flesh Builder For Thin People

Thin men and women—that big, hearty, filling dinner you ate last night. What became of all the fat-producing, nourishment it contained? You haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food doesn't work and stick, and the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, are probably sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and funny sawdust diets. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating and eat with every one of those a single Sargol tablet. In two or three weeks note the difference. Let the scales be the judge. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy, "stay there" fat may be the net result. Sargol aims to charge weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles—to give the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat-making material in your food to every part of your body. Sargol, too, mixes with the food, to prepare it for the blood in an easily assimilated form. Thin people tell how they have gained all the way from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol, and say that the new flesh stays put. Sargol tablets are a careful combination of six of the best assimilative elements known to chemistry. They come forty tablets to a package, are pleasant, harmless and inexpensive, and all good druggists in this vicinity sell them subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back as found in every large package.

OVERALLS AID HOUSEHOLD WORK

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 5.—Nowadays it frequently occurs in Georgia that a tradesman howls "Hey" to an overall clad person and then finds that he has to tip his hat.

The women are a wearing 'em and their reasons for doing so are so sound that skirts may be only a Sunday innovation in the near future.

Practical housewives who do their own work and think nothing of scrubbing floors, hanging pictures or washing windows when seated on sills have reached the conclusion that life is precarious enough without surrounding one's self with trip-producing skirts. They are wearing boys' size overalls, and some of the said overalls have all they can do to remain boys' size.

All the shops in Georgia are specializing on the little trousers, and they may now be obtained in white, pink or blue. Housework is really becoming more and more attractive as the years go on, and interest in it is becoming universal.

Hardly a window in Savannah is washed nowdays without attracting a small group of interested observers.

DIDN'T PHASE HIM.

"I wouldn't marry you if you were the last man on earth!" said the girl.

"Well," replied the young man who takes everything seriously, "if I were the last man on earth I'd be mourning so many friends and relatives that I don't suppose I'd feel much like taking part in a wedding, anyhow."

Don't Persecute your Bowels

Cut out cathartics and purgatives. They are brutal—harsh—unnecessary. Try CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS. Purely vegetable. Act gently on the liver. Eliminate bile, and soothe the delicate membranes of the bowel.

SEES TRADE FIGHT AFTER BIG WAR ENDS

National City Bank Warns Americans to Be Prepared for Commercial Contest—It Suggests New Treaties

What will be the status of international trade at the close of the war? To what extent must the new order of things be met in this country by new tariff measures, and by new commercial trades? What particular conditions will face the world if Germany wins the war, and what will be the conditions of the Allies win?

These questions are being seriously conditions if the Allies win?

turers and merchants and by the big mercantile and banking associations. There is no precedent for the situation facing this country, and it probable that the adjusters of the coming new trade relations must solve some of the questions on mere theories. The Chamber of Commerce of the United States is busy gathering information which will be useful when new commercial treaties are to be formulated, and the National Foreign Trade Council is getting first had information.

The National City Bank is agitating a greater discussion of the solution of the expected trade war. In the current issue of The Americas, published by this bank, there appears an analysis of the conditions which, it is asserted, are likely to result in many changes in the world. Particular attention is given to the place of the United States in the coming trade war, and it is contended that this country must be wide awake to adjust itself to new conditions.

America Cannot Escape.

"The United States can probably no more keep out of the coming readjustment of traffic than we could keep out of the financial and commercial turmoil of the war itself," says the publication of the National City Bank. "Many manufacturers are beginning to urge the necessity of some measure to protect our industries in case of a flood of dumping of cheap goods that they expect will mark the mobilization of a world-wide war to follow the military peace. Some say we must have a higher tariff. Others urge merely some effective emergency provision. This they desire for the protection of our home market. At the same time a strong agitation is now rising among business leaders interested in the development of foreign trade for the Government to begin the negotiation of commercial treaties in order to obtain for our exports a fair competitive field abroad, if not some favours. The negotiations of an up-to-date commercial treaty, such as Germany, France, Austria, Italy, Russia or Japan have found advantageous to their trade, might involve some changes in the form of our own tariff. It is not unlikely that we are entering an important public discussion both of tariff and of commercial diplomacy."

It is pointed out in the article that England's long-time policy of free trade may be overruled as a consequence of the big war. England has already made many changes in her tariff rules. Primarily, of course, duties are demanded in order to increase the war funds and reduce extravagance in luxuries. But these changes, supported by British manufacturers, may prove an opening wedge to a permanent change of policy. It is taken for granted in some quarters in England that the German industries which rely for existence on export trade are producing goods in enormous amounts, not for present consumption, but in order to dump cheap goods into the markets of the world after the war.

According to a recent statement of The London Morning Post, which is quoted in the article in The Americas, the German Government is subsidizing its export industries for the express purpose of accumulating reserves for the future dumping process. England, it is argued, can offset such a course by making favourable commercial treaties with the countries now fighting with her against Germany and Austria. An economic alliance for the permanent exclusion of German and Austrian trade with the Allies is not considered probable by the writer of the article, but he points out that the Allies will have closer relations after the war than they ever had before and that this condition will continue for years.

"In Germany," says the article, "the business interests expect that with a triumph of German arms the Government will not only force from the defeated Allies an enormous indemnity but will see to it that no 'economic alliance' that can injure German trade is possible. If she is in a position to do so Germany will obtain commercial treaties with all such as she obtained from Russia in 1905, with brusque persuasion.

"On the other hand those who are in a position to see the development of disposition among the Allies on this subject say that Germany's military and economic position when she seeks peace will make a great difference in the foreign commercial policies of all the nations. The angry threats of an 'economic alliance' that will isolate Germany for all time have generally given way to cooler judgment in England, in Russia, and in France. The leaders who will probably have most to do with forming the new trade arrangements, in Russia and in France, make the intelligent admission that their country's industries will handicap themselves greatly if certain lines of commercial intercourse between them and Germany are not resumed after the war. If sheer exhaustion should bring the war to an end, with nobody satisfied, popular demand might force an economic isolation of Germany."

ONCE BITTEN, TWICE SHY.

A philanthropic lady visited an asylum not long ago and displayed great interest in the inmates. One old man particularly gained her compassion.

"And how long have you been here, my man?" she inquired.

"Twelve years," was the answer.

"Do they treat you well?"

"Yes."

"Do they feed you well?"

"Yes."

After addressing a few more questions to him the visitor passed on. She noticed a smile broadening on the face of her attendant and on asking the cause heard with consternation that the old man was none other than the medical superintendent. She hurried back to make apologies. How successful she was may be gathered from these words: "I am sorry, doctor. I will never be governed by appearances again."—Argonaut.

PRISONERS TAKEN BY SERBS INCLUDE MEN FROM ALL FRONTS

ROME, Nov. 5—The war correspondent of The Messagero, in an undated despatch from Grayujevatz, Serbia, says:

"It is feared that the forces along the frontier cannot resist much longer. The Germans, before beginning their offensive, organized a splendid aerial service with rapid and well armed aeroplanes of a new model.

"All information indicates that without the aid of the Bulgarians the Austro-German undertaking would have been impossible, as they did not have sufficient reserves to crush the Serbians."

The correspondent saw among the prisoners men from Brest-Litovsk and Vilna, from the French front and the garrisons of Hamburg, Bremen, Berlin, and Frankfort, from Hungary, Dalmatia and Bosnia, and they even included men from the 9th Austrian corps now operating on the Isonzo front.

According to reports circulated in Rumania, the correspondent continues, "the Austro-German forces employed against Serbia number half a million, but the truth is that the Germans have been obliged to remedy the weakness of their infantry by powerful artillery abundantly supplied with munitions. They are able to advance into Serbia only by degrees of shell-

Albania Causing Anxiety

"Albania is causing anxiety, for the Germans have sent quantities of arms there and the Serbians have been obliged to keep an army of 6000 on guard.

"Gen. Radomir Putnik, the former Serbian Minister of War, is suffering from asthma, and the chief of the general staff, Gen. Pavlovitch, is also ill. King Peter wished to go to the front, but the doctors forbade him to do so."

The Best Treatment For Constipation

The Experience of One Who Knows and Places Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills First

It is not difficult to secure a medicine that will effect movement of the bowels. To cure Constipation and the complications which arise from it is another matter.

Constipation of the bowels is usually preceded by torpid action of the liver. Hence it follows that if Constipation is to be cured the liver must be set right. And here lies the secret of the success of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They awaken the action of the liver and insure a good flow of bile, which is nature's cathartic. The liver, kidneys and bowels are invigorated and regulated, and the troubles with the digestive system disappear.

Mr. H. M. Bell, Innisfail, Alta., writes: "For some considerable time I have been using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I have obtained through your firm. I suppose during my life I have used nearly all the best-known pills, as I have been subject to Constipation and digestive troubles. A friend recommended Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I can honestly say that of all the pills I have tried nothing has suited me better—no griping action always insured, and fine for the kidneys. This is how I have found them after a thorough test, and you may use this statement if you like."

This letter should convince you of the merits of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, but there is nothing like personal experience. If you do not feel like risking 25 cents for a box, write to us for a free sample box, mentioning where you saw this advertisement. Put this medicine to the test when you have indigestion, constipation, biliousness, backache or kidney derangements. The results will soon prove to you the superiority of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

13. Verses 9,10. If Jehoiada had gotten up a series of concerts, or lectures, or bazaars or tea meetings, or had set the women to making quilts and selling them, instead of asking the people to give direct, would it, or not, have been more in keeping with God's plan for financing his church, and why?

14. What modern plan for paying money to the church, most nearly answers to putting it into a chest at the church door, and what is the advantage of the plan?

15. How many instances can you recall of dishonesty in handling church funds and how do they compare with the number you can recall of dishonesty in banking and other business institutions?

16. Verses 11,12. Ought a church to gladly pay the market value, or should it expect to get work and material for less?

17. Verses 13-16. Should a Christain church spend money for style, or for spectacular effect, or anything beyond that necessary for comfort and effeciency?

Riga and Dvinsk Are No Longer In Danger, Say Experts Czar's Forces on the Offensive

Russians Before Dvinsk Have Forced the Germans to Withdraw From Territory Which They Gained at Great Cost

LONDON, Nov. 5.—Having checked the German offensive along the whole eastern front except directly west of Riga, where the nature of the ground makes an advance difficult, the Russians have started a counter-offensive at three points—west of Dvinsk, on the Styr in Volhynia, and on the Stripa in Galicia.

In the fighting on the Styr it is stated that the whole area of a forest in the region of Czartorysk, into which the Teutons had succeeded in penetrating deeply, was covered with enemy dead at the conclusion of a counter-attack. Here the Russians are said to have saved a very desperate situation only "by united efforts of all grades of the forces." Eight officers and 400 men were taken prisoner out of an army corps made up, according to to-night's Austrian official statement, of mixed units of the Teutonic allies. The Austrians on their side claim a large number of prisoners in the same fighting.

Vienna contradicts Petrograd as to the situation on the Stripa River, both sides claiming success. An Austrian counter-attack near the village of Sienkowce, recently captured by the Russians, is said in the Petrograd report to have resulted in the storming parties being driven back to their trenches. The Vienna report asserts that most of the village was regained in this action.

The Russians are advancing on the Dvinsk front, and have reached the outskirts of Illoukst, a place which has changed hands several times lately. Below Dvinsk on the Dvina the Germans failed in an attempt to cross the river. Further south, in the Lake Sventen region, the Germans claim to have regained some of the ground they lost a couple of days ago. This is denied by Petrograd which says the Russian advance continues with enormous losses to the enemy.

Daring Seamship Shown By British North Sea Fleet

Admiral Transfers Flag to Battleship Steaming at Full Speed in Battle—Cruiser's Crew Jumps to Decks of Tramp Surprised at Night

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The "barging about the North Sea," to which Rear Admiral Sir David Beatty recently alluded, while it has lacked the one great opportunity of a smashing contest with the German fleet, has included many incidents which, were they known, would add to Britain's gratitude to the navy.

The Scotsman has been permitted to lift the veil a little, and an article by a special correspondent which sent a grin around the fleet and helped to nerve the sailors for the continual strain of watching. The correspondent writes:—

"Many of our tars will recall one such incident which involved quite a feat of seamanship. It occurred out on the North Sea, and possibly a little west of the Long Forties. Just about twelve months have gone since the affair, but it still raises a smile in certain quarters. A fast, light cruiser of our navy on a very dull morning, after a calm, cold night, sighted a cargo vessel under a neutral flag and came to regard her with some suspicion.

"The tramp" was kept under observation for a long time before she received any evidence at all of being watched. To outside appearance the neutral was in that condition which brings to his mouth the heart of a skipper expectant of salvage, and no doubt more than one trawler that morning had glanced at her hopefully, and again and again, for a signal that she had broken down and wanted a tow.

"Lying off in the distance, the war ship was satisfied that the tramp was not 'going lame,' but was waiting for something. Having arrived at that conclusion, the neutral was approached in the usual way and an examination was made. In the making of the examination the 'gullible and unsuspecting' Britisher rather scored. The officer intrusted with that duty did not spend much time over it. That was not necessary. He was apparently satisfied as to the bona fides of the tramp when she shouted a cheery 'Good-by!' and returned to his ship.

Quick Capture in the Dark.

"His report was to the point. While 'looking at nothing' he had seen enough to be certain that the vessel was neither a neutral nor an innocent tramp steamer with a defect in the engine room. The war ship disappeared, and the tramp 'limped' along with no more than steerage way on as before.

"Throughout eleven weary hours patient eyes and ready guns were turned on that unsuspecting merchantman, and at length darkness fell. Then there was vouchsafed the watchers that for which they had waited so long—the combination of lights on the neutral. It was a clever combination. Having learned all that she seemed likely to learn by waiting, and being now certain that anything that was about to happen to the cargo steamer would not be seen by any submarines that might be about, the war ship made a move in the darkness. During the whole eleven hours the position of the suspect had hardly changed. The extra lights of the combination suddenly vanished on the tramp as the cruiser bore nearer, and that was the first indication to the invisible fighting ship that the crew of the tramp had heard the rumble of machinery somewhere and were taking precautions.

"Then an astounding thing happened. On the tramp a section of the darkness materialised in the most startling fashion, and from it there poured over the merchant ship a crowd of sturdy fellows who dashed for the bridge and dived for the engine room and had the ship in their hands and her crew prisoners within five minutes. The cruiser, slipping up in the blackness, had laid her long, slim bows alongside as sweetly as ever she laid them along a jetty, and the landing party assembled forward did the rest. The crew of the tramp had no time to do anything in the way of warning any one.

"It was smart work and a valuable capture. Stores of food, drums of oil fuel and spare torpedoes were carried under the sham cargo of the supply ship. She was steamed into port by her prize crew, and she steamed very well indeed. It is said that she was steamed out of port again not long after, and that on resuming her interrupted duties with a new crew she exercised a distinctly demoralizing influence upon certain units of the submarine service of the enemy.

Goes Aboard Ship at Full Speed.

"The feat of seamanship involved in laying the cruiser alongside her quarry so suddenly and so closely in the darkness was noteworthy, but on the occasion of the fight at racing speed between our battle cruisers and those of the enemy off the Dogger Bank, last January, there was provided a no less notable example of the splendid skill with which the fighting ships are controlled.

"It will be remembered that when the Lion dropped out of action, Admiral Beatty transferred his flag to the Princess Royal. The Princess Royal, steaming at full power, was using her guns with effect upon the fleeing enemy without intermission. To recall her from that work in order that the Admiral might get on board was apparently not thought of. She had to be overtaken, not recalled. To catch her the Admiral boarded the Attack. The destroyer was asked to overtake a battle cruiser which was running at well over thirty miles an hour and to put the Admiral on board without delay.

"The Attack was 'opened out' to the task, and it may be questioned if even her designers dreamed of the speed she developd. The Princess Royal was overhauled, but kept on her furious way, her guns crashing out incessingly. Steadily the Attack worked closer, and very soon, with engine room responding with marvellous precision to the demands of the bridge, she was reduced in speed to enable her absolutely to cling to the speeding leviathan ahead of her, and with both vessels rushing along at a terrific pace the Admiral passed from the destroyer to the battle cruiser and resumed his place in the action."

CONDEMNS 34 TO DIE AS SPIES AT LIEGE

HE IS URGED TO INTERVENE

Petitions Also Spain's Ruler and the Pope—Daily Executions Terrorize Belgium.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 28.—According to the Tyd thirty-four additional death sentences against persons who were charged with espionage and treason have been pronounced by court-martial at Liege.

The newspaper adds that Pope Benedict, the King of Spain, and President have been appealed to by telegraph to intervene in behalf of the condemned persons.

"A reign of terror prevails from one end of Belgium to the other, men and women are being executed every day in all parts of the country, hundreds of men, and even women, who refuse to work in behalf of Germany and against their own country are being deported, whole communities are being punished, and so perfect is the German system of terrorism that it is safe to say that the news of not one-tenth of what takes place ever reaches the outside world.

Those assertions were made to the New York Times by a well-known Belgian now in New York, and whose activities in aid of his stricken countrymen and women are a matter of nationwide knowledge.

"Terrible and heart-sickening as was the brutal killing of Miss Cavell," this Belgian continued, "the fact nevertheless remains that she was but one martyr among a great many. The fact that she was English made her case stand out from among the rest, and in the horror of it all the world lost sight of hundreds of other women, all of them Belgian, who have met the same fate at the hands of the Germans.

"It would take a whole paper to tell even a little of all the terrible things that are daily taking place in Belgium. From authoritative information we know that not only are executions daily occurrences, but people are also being deported by the wholesale to Germany or somewhere else, God only knows where, at the whim of any German commander.

"The Germans need mechanics and other workingmen for their munition factories, and although it is contrary to the law of nations to compel the people of an occupied territory to work against their own country, that makes no difference whatever so far as von Bissing and his subordinates are concerned. For example, there is a little city in Belgium called Lokerren. It is, or was, a place of about 20,000 people. Only a short time ago the German Governor of the town issued an order for all the mechanics in the town together at a certain place. When they were assembled he told them they would have to go to work helping the German manufacture munitions of war. They protested, and when one of the mechanics pointed out that what was proposed was contrary to The Hague Convention, the German commander partly replied: "We do not concern ourselves with regard to that convention."

"He then informed the mechanic that they would have to report for work and do what they were told to do on the following morning. Morning came and nine appeared, whereupon the Germans closed the town so far as outside communication was concerned, abolished the time-honored weekly market meeting, ordered all Belgians to be in their houses by 6 p.m., and forbade the importation of any foodstuffs for the people of the town. What else happened of what has happened since then we do not know. All we know is that the story is true.

"Another thing that is worthy of the attention of the neutral world is that in the trials of men and women for offenses that are punishable with death the accused are not permitted to have counsel or to consult with counsel. The Germans handle both prosecution and whatever defense is permitted, and the victims, hundreds of them harmless women, pay the penalty with their lives without have been permitted to utter a single word in their own defense. Miss Cavell's case is but one among hundreds of others of the same kind.

"We know of a conversation that the Catholic Bishop, Rutter, of Liege, had a few weeks ago with a German officer. The Bishop referred to the fact that several priests of his diocese had been killed and asked the German what he thought the world would think of Germany when all that has happened in Belgium was told.

"'Don't worry,' replied the officer, 'it won't become known, for we are going to be victorious and the history of this war will be written by us and we will write it to suit ourselves.'

"On another recent occasion a number of German officers billeted themselves in the home of a prominent Belgian. They became very boisterous and the owner of the house protested. A little later the dead body of the man was found and when the parish priest offered a prayer for the repose of his soul the Germans arrested the priest and locked him up in jail.

"These are just a few instances of what is every day happening in Belgium. Not even the Armenian in Turkey are being treated much worse than are the people of Belgium, although there are, of course, no organized massacres in Belgium. We talk of asking Germany to prevail upon the Turks to be more merciful to the Armenians. Why not appeal to Germany to begin her charity at home and be more merciful to the unfortunate men, women and children of poor Belgium?"

His Useful Head.

A Washington man has in his employ a faithful but at times stupid servant in the person of an old darky named Zeke.

Recently, when the employer had vainly endeavoured to get something done in a certain way, he gave up in despair, exclaiming:

"Zeke! Zeke! What ever do you think your head is for?"

Zeke, who evidently thought that this was another of the troublesome questions that his employer was always asking, pondered it deeply. Finally he replied:

"Well, boss, I guess it's to keep my collar on."

THE SERBIAN SITUATION BETTER SAYS LONDON
NISH IS CAPTURED CLAIMS A BERLIN REPORT

BULGARIANS DEFEATED AT ISVOR AFTER A BATTLE OF SEVERAL DAYS

French Infantry and British Cavalry Took Part in the Struggle and the Bulgarians are Retreating in the Direction of Veles---A Berlin Report Claims That Nish Temporary Capitol of Serbia Has Been Taken After Three Day's Fighting

KITCHENER'S WHEREABOUTS IS A MYSTERY

LONDON, Nov. 6. The Serbian situation has improved in the view of the British and French staffs at Salonika. British troops in splendid form now have taken their place in the first line. Fresh troops left to-day for the Serbian front, as well as convoys of arms, munitions and provisions. The Bulgarian army descending into old Serbia to invade Macedonia, by way of Veles and Prilep, was defeated at Isvor, at the entrance of Babuna Pass, after a battle lasting several days. French infantry and British cavalry took part in the struggle, and gave efficient aid to the Serbians. British horsemen arrived from Krivolak to assist their allies, and the Serbians have captured Izvor and Gradsko. The Bulgarians, whose ranks are said to have been decimated, are retreating in the direction of Veles, and have evacuated the right bank of the Vardar River.

LONDON, Nov. 6. That Lord Kitchener's absence from the British War Office, where Premier Asquith is presiding temporarily, is connected with some military movement of capital importance, is the growing belief throughout England to-day. The official denial of Kitchener's resignation as War Minister was truthful. His ostensible retention of the post of Minister of War will not prevent his taking a field command. One opinion is that he has gone to a conference with Joffre in France, and the other is that he has taken command in the Balkans.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—(French Official Communique).—"Mine activity is continuous," announced the War Office to-day, "in the regions of the Argonne and the Meuse. One explosion in the vicinity of Mafancourt seriously damaged the enemy's organizations.

"We repulsed another German attack on La Courtine, in the Champagne district, on Friday night.

"Five combats between aeroplanes have occurred in the past few hours. One German taube fell within the French lines."

LONDON, Nov. 6. The British steamship Woodfield has been sunk by a German submarine, the Admiralty announced to-day. Part of the crew has been landed. It is believed the rest have been picked up by another boat.

LONDON, Nov. 6. King Constantine will dissolve the Greek Parliament, according to a News Agency message from Athens to-day. This means that Premier Zaimis will remain in office until a general election can be held. Inasmuch as the troops are mobilized, the election must be much delayed. It cannot be held inside of two months at the earliest.

Zaimis will reconstruct his Cabinet, which will consist of the same Ministers as hitherto, but two additional appointments will be made.

Though not definitely so stated, it is assumed here that these posts will be given to Venizelos supporters, in the hope of placating that party.

LONDON, Nov. 6. The new War Council which will conduct the war, held its first meeting yesterday. It consisted of Premier A. J. Balfour, David Lloyd-George and Sir Edward Grey. The members of the Cabinet conferred with the various military and naval experts.

PARIS, Nov. 6. German submarines passing through the Strait of Gibraltar sank the French steamship Dahra off Arzeu, and the steamships Calvados, French and Ionion, Italian off Cape Ivi.

The crews of the Dahra and Ionion were saved. Details concerning the Calvados' loss were lacking.

A RECORD CASUALTY LIST

LONDON, Nov. 6. To-day's official British casualty list contains 3,856 names, a record.

KITCHENER'S RESIGNATION.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—Lord Kitchener has gone to the Near East to take command of the Allied forces in the Balkans, according to the most frequent guess made here this afternoon.

Few believe he will return to the War Office.

That he handed his resignation to the King, but that it was refused, is unqualifiedly asserted by the Globe.

"There is an unpleasant obscurity about the whole business," said the Globe. "Lord Haldane is credited with the conviction that he could fill the War Office post adequately. But we most sincerely trust that the Premier will not commit such an irremediable error as to give it to him, which would instantly jeopardize the life of the Government."

Haldane, who was Lord High Chancellor in the Liberal Cabinet which preceded the present Coalition Ministry, was dropped out when reorganization was effected, because the public considered him pro-German.

Lord Derby, author of the scheme for stimulating voluntary army enlistments as an alternative to conscription, is favoured in some quarters for Kitchener's place.

FIERCE ENCOUNTERS WITH BULGARS

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 6.—Hotly pursuing the Bulgarians whom they routed on Friday in the Prilep region, in Serbia, Serbian, French and British troops were fighting the Bulgars to-day near Veles, about 25 miles north-east of the scene of Friday's Allied victory. The encounters were extremely fierce.

BERLIN, Via Wireless, Nov. 6.—The Bulgarians have captured Nish, the War Office announced to-day. The Serbian capital's fall followed three days of tenacious fighting, said the report.

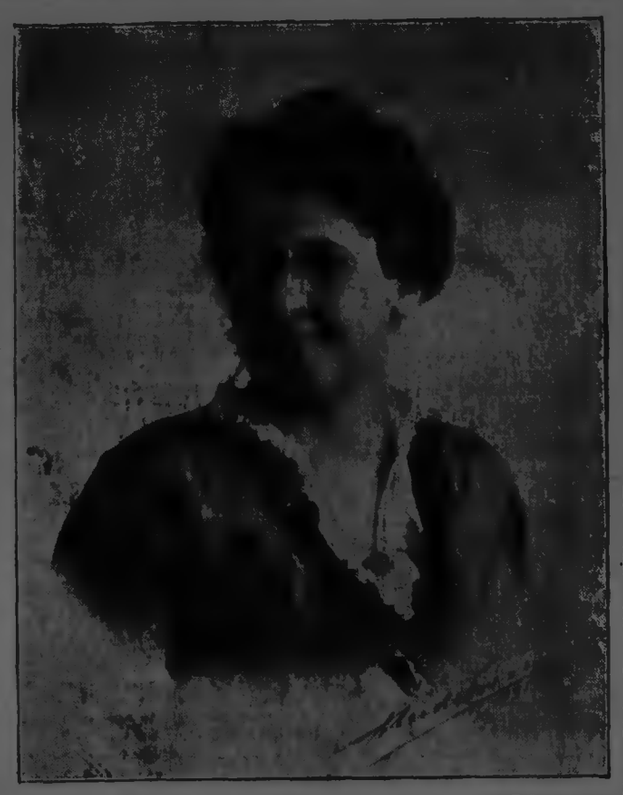
Commencing Monday afternoon and continuing throughout the week, Mrs. Brown-Lewers, an eminent exponent of Better Foods, Better Homes, will lecture and give cooking lessons at the Examiner Better Foods, Better Homes School at the Conservatory of Music. Mrs. Brown-Lewers has just completed a week's stay in Kingston, where the classes were conducted each day with a crowded attendance. Mrs. Jas. Kendry will introduce Mrs. Brown-Lewers at Monday afternoon's class, which opens at 2 o'clock. The classes are free to any one who desire to attend, and much valuable information is sure to be obtainable.

DR. FRANK SHOT BIG BEAR AT LOUCKS' LAKE

Have you seen the big bear in Kingan's Hardware Store window? Watch for it to-night. It was shot by Dr. Frank, dentist, while on a hunting trip at Louck's Lake. It tipped the scales at four hundred pounds. On Monday, Mr. S. E. Kerneghan, butcher, will proceed to cut it up, and those desiring bear steak will be able to secure it.

RAINBOW RAN ASHORE IN DARK ON THURSDAY

The steamer "Rainbow" ran ashore in the intense darkness Thursday night just below Robinson's Island. She was pulled off Friday morning by the tug "Bob Hall." The boat was returning to Rice Lake. It was a particularly dark night, and navigation must have been difficult, and every turn had to be carefully remembered.



Mrs. Brown-Lewers Is Entertaining Speaker

Will Talk On "Freehand Cookery by Standard Methods" at First Better Foods Better Homes Session

"Examiner" School Opens Monday at 2:30

NO ONE SHOULD MISS IT

Program for Monday Afternoon
Subject:
"Freehand Cookery by Standard Methods."
Menu:
Silver Cake Weary Willie Icing
Light Salad Orange Garnitures
Cream Salad Dressing
Sweet Omelet Sabino Sauce

IN her Better Foods Better Homes course as it will be presented at the Conservatory of Music, under the auspices of the Examiner next week, Mrs. Brown-Lewers begins at the very foundation. At the opening session on Monday she will teach the first principles of cookery and will then demonstrate how to apply them in the mixing and baking of a silver cake with Weary Willie Icing and the making of an attractive and nourishing salad and interesting salad dressing and in the successful manufacture of an omelet with a very delicious sauce.

From the very beginning of her course here Mrs Brown-Lewers invites the women to ask questions and to come Monday ready to present any household problem and difficulties that are troubling them and at some time during the week she will take these up definitely in her lecture or discuss them personally with the housewife presenting them. It is the aim of her course to help and she will be disappointed if the women of Peterboro do not give her the opportunity of solving their particular household problems and cookery dilemmas.

The cake bakers of the city will be interested in the cake baking lessons Mrs Brown-Lewers will give here as she is a most successful cake baker. Beside the silver cake which will be baked and served on Monday, there will be many other interesting cake baking lessons in her course. On Wednesday afternoon she will bake a sunshine cake and on Thursday a Weary Willie cake and at closing session on Friday will demonstrate a very old English recipe for tea cakes.

Mrs Brown-Lewers particularly invites the young women of the city to attend her lecture and cookery lessons. During the past two years more than one bride has learned from this sympathetic teacher how to correct mistakes that were marring her home life. Young mothers will be interested in her views regarding the training of children and will gain from her much helpful instruction along the lines of proper foods for children of various ages and idiosyncrasies.

This school is for the women of Peterboro and will be conducted by the Examiner. With the aim of giving to the women here such a course of Better Foods, Better Homes lectures as has interested housewives of other cities, it was endeavored to secure the most helpful and entertaining speaker possible and this has been done in engaging Mrs Brown-Lewers to have charge of this school. She is a practical housekeeper and a mother and grandmother and is also a trained domestic scientist. Her lectures appeal to all classes of housekeepers, domestic science teachers and club women and every woman in the city is invited to hear her. The school opens Monday afternoon at 2.30 with an intensely interesting program. While everyone realizes that experience and commonsense help women to be successful homemakers, all are beginning to feel that this work would be easier and more efficient if women had a uniform training to start with. While Mrs. Brown-Lewers' course is necessarily a brief one, it is comprehensive and includes for actual housewives much splendid training that young women are getting in domestic science classes.

The Examiner cordially invites every woman in the city to attend the opening session of Mrs. Brown-Lewers' Better Foods, Better Homes school on Monday afternoon and is sure that after the progressive and intelligent housewives of this city have heard this expert lecturer and cookery teacher once, they will not need an invitation to come again.

The list so far of Peterborough officers in the 93rd is as follows:

Lt.-Col. Jos. Mills, 57th Regiment.
Lt.-Col. Johnston, 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons.

Other officers from this district whose appointments have been recommended are Capt. Bigott and Lieut. Marling of Lakefield.

This morning was a busy one from the enlistment standpoint at the Armouries, five first-class recruits passing the medical examination for the 93rd Battalion. They were as follows:

Wm. J. Watson, 556 Chamberlain street, 4 years in the 57th Regiment.
Wm. Walter Bailey, 37 Jackson Avenue.
Chas. Henry Campbell, 501 Sherbrooke Street, one year in the 57th Regiment.
Thos. Vincent Whittington, R.R. No. 1, South Monaghan.

Yesterday Robert W. Wright, who has had seven years in the East Yorkshires, passed the medical examination.

Most of these men will come on the strength at once, so this week has seen twenty-five men added to the 93rd. The local detachment is now 310 strong.

This morning the men of No. 3 Platoon, A Company of the 93rd pre-

$300 FOR SOLDIERS' CLUB DOWNTOWN IS RECOMMENDED

Finance Committee Seemed Glad to Assist the Speakers' Patriotic League in This Respect

MEETING PLACE FOR MEN

The Finance Committee of the Council passed a resolution last night recommending the granting of $300 to the Speakers' Patriotic League, and they could have got $500 just as easily.

Ald. Stratton presided with Mayor Buller, Ald. McIntyre and Ald. Dutfus present.

Mr. A. E. Coulthard, Mr. J. A. Aylmer and Mr. Peter Campbell composed the modest deputation from the Patriotic League. They explained that the Government has taken over the Armouries and the soldiers will have no place to spend their evenings. The Bank of Montreal have given, without any charge, the present recruiting headquarters on Simcoe Street. It is proposed to equip the upstairs as a reading and writing room, and the ground floor, a general meeting room for concerts and such events. It is proposed to ask the churches of the city to provide for once a week for the men, thereby providing at least one place-to-call event every week. By asking the churches to assume this in rotation it would not prove a burden to any of them as the ladies' societies could assume the work. It is proposed to put a gas stove and shelving at the rear and Mr. Daniel O'Connell has promised that the T. A. S. would lend the necessary delft. The recruiting rooms will afford a place for the soldiers to meet and also to bring their friends.

Expenses of Trips.

Mr. J. A. Aylmer pointed out that apparently Peterborough would be called upon to provide a complete battalion. This will mean that the country trips will have to be continued and followed up by recruiting sergeants and men in order to get the best results. The Speakers' Patriotic League have already expended $300 most of which they themselves paid and they are entitled for the rest. But to equip the recruiting quarters they required the assistance of the city. The men of the 93rd have been exceptionally well housed and the new rooms will help provide a respectable congregating place and keep the men out of trouble.

Mr. Campbell said that a carpenter who had been rejected has offered to do the work free as his bit.

Confidence in League

The spontaneous response from the Finance committee must have assured the visitors that the work of the Speakers' Patriotic League is fully appreciated. Mayor Buller pointed out that the council had expected to pay $500 a month for the Cordage Works building when it was proposed as the winter quarters for the men. By the present arrangement the city is asked only $300, and that not a monthly payment. He moved that the Committee recommend to the Council to provide $300 for the Speakers' League. Ald. McIntyre seconded.

Ald. Stratton remarked that the work of the League was shown in the number of recruits who have been regularly coming forward.

SATURDAY, NOV. 6, 1915

THE LICENSE COMMISSION.

The Ontario License Commission paid its first official visit to Peterborough yesterday. In personnel and personal relation to the public who had occasion to come in contact with them, they created a very favourable impression. They are good listeners, and patiently and courteously heard the representations of all those who preferred claims upon their attention. This is all the more to the credit of the ocurtesy of the commission, since some of the speakers travelled outside the record—were "out of order" in the parliamentary sense, in the remarks they proffered. Some of the speakers who addressed the commission seemed to forget or ignore the fact that its duty is almost entirely administrative, and its power for legislative action is limited to making limited regulations, and is, otherwise, purely recommendatory. Still zeal in a good cause might well regard the action of impressing the commission with the necessity of legislation in temperance interests as not wasted effort, if it creates friends at court, when legislative action shall come under consideration.

NO MAN LIVETH TO HIMSELF

Sir Edward Carson, recently a member of the coalition cabinet in Great Britain, must feel very much alone. He is out of touch with the committee of parliament constitutionally charged with the duty of administering the affairs of the United Kingdom, and the united Empire — doubly united, both under the stress of war and constitutionally. Sir Edward must feel more out in the cold, when he is not one of the patriots few, who recently sat down together in the Vice-Regal Lodge, Dublin, to discuss the share of Ireland in the war. This group was composed of men who a few months ago were talking civil war, a war in which the freedom of Ireland was as much involved as the freedom of the world is involved in the present war. They were composed of Catholics and Protestants, Whig and Tory, all of one mind now in face of the stern demand of patriotic duty. Sir Edward Carson must feel like the political Ishmaelite he is. Because he could not have his own way against the major voice of the British Parliament he threatened revolt and armed his friends in preparation for bloodshed among brethren, and with German guns, at that. Because he could not have his own way in the coalition cabinet he again revolted and, thanks be, retired—alone, in that act, as he is to-day in the sympathy and esteem of all true patriots, even those who bury the dead past in order to work unitedly in the living present for the triumph of world-wide freedom. Milton tells us of a gentleman who would rather "reign in hell than serve in heaven." We are not without his counterpart in spirit in these days, the spirit of a public man who prefers the dominance of his own obstinate will to effective service for his fellow subjects. Another counterpart in found in the man—or man in form—who prefers to reign in the spirit of hell than serve in the spirit of heaven—for the good of his people and the good of the world. No man who is a man liveth to himself. He must to be a true man, true statesman, and true ruler, subordinate his personal ambitions and personal will to the good of his race.

THE MINISTERS AND THE SOLDIERS.

The Examiner is pleased that it wrote the article yesterday "An Opening and Men to Fill It." Though the modest suggestions advanced were anticipated by quietly maturing action in the general direction pointed out, it is a pleasure to be officially or semi-officially provided with evidence that the disposition to do our bit in universal in Peterborough. It is well too, that, as the letter of Rev. Mr. Peever, published in another column assures us, those who are openly working for the welfare of the cause the war creates, should be cheered by the assurance of comradeship in good works — a comradeship one and all are glad to know the Ministerial Association is preparing to provide for in the interests of the soldiers who will be quartered amongst use this winter. After, all, The Examiner is, in a way, sorry that it provoked the letter of Mr. Peever and its explanations, since it has robbed the Ministerial Association of the merit of not taking its right hand into the confidence of the left, and has prevented the practice of sound military strategy—springing a surprise.

INCLUDE STREET TREES.

A few days ago reference was made in these columns to the good action taken to devise some plan in city work on our streets—to replace conditions of chaos of past years with order—to provide a system—and organization for hap-hazard administration of the work of dealing with our streets. This is a movement in the right direction and must, if carefully guided, and efficiently organized, have importantly beneficial results.

While the plan in question is in hand it should be made broader and more inclusive; should deal with all street interests in a similar systematic way. At a recent meeting of the City Council it was decided that 21 out of 56 street trees in Parnell street were to be removed, on the grounds that they were growing too closely together, and had become a detriment and a nuisance instead of the splendid benefit street trees properly placed, are designed to be, and can be made.

This emphasies the importance of what The Examiner has frequently argued, and is only what common sense endorses—that the city of itself, or through some constituted body like a park commission, should take charge of, and perform, the whole work of planting street trees. It is only in this way that there can be uniformity and desirable results.

When the planting of street trees is left to the initiative and caprice of individual owners of property adjacent to the street planted, there is bound to be undesirable effects. The wrong variety of tree may be selected for planting, and the planting is made on various lines, and the distances may be improper and impracticable, as is illustrated in the case of Parnell street, where maples have been planted only ten feet apart. The absurdity of this distance is manifest when the trees have, as in this case, reached a trunk diameter of twelve or more inches, with corresponding spread of foliage, making their removal absolutely necessary. The result will be that the remaining trees will not be at their best, the branchage and foliage will be considerably one-sided and deficent, especially at the sides where the removed trees prevented the expansion of foliage growth.

This leads up to the point of the argument that the city should have charge of tree planting. It would then be possible to not only select for planting the variety of trees most suitable to the soil, where they are to grow, but the alignment could be made uniform, and the distances correct—which experience has demonstrated should not be less than thirty feet for trees at all suitable for street planting.

It is obviously the duty, and should be regarded the duty of the city, or a city park commission, to undertake the planting of trees. The city shows sometimes unwise zeal in removing trees, but it takes no steps, nor shows any interest in planting other trees. On Parnell street 21 fine upstanding trees are to be removed because of the failure of the city in the past to see that the trees were properly planted—on proper lines, and at proper distances. It would seem that the city should, for every tree thus removed, plant another tree; and one for every other of the many trees that have been removed or have died. Removing 21 trees in Parnell street takes away so much from the collective tree beauty and benefit of the city.

It is plainly the duty of the city to undertake and carrying out the planting of trees on the streets, which are under its jurisdiction, and which citizens have no strict right or obligation to plant. It would be as logical for the city to demand that the citizen should of his own motive build walks and grade streets, according to his own individual fancy, as to demand or expect that the citizen would go upon the streets and plant trees, in variety and lines, and at distances, according to his individual caprice.

There are many new streets laid out, and in these there are no trees planted by either the city or the owners of property abutting. The street in front of King Edward Park has not been planted with trees by the city, which is, in this case, the property owner.

It is a wonder that the city doesn't take up the matter of planting street trees, which is as much a point of duty and responsibility as other necessary street work. It costs comparatively little, and when we consider the general beauty, the great comfort and aesthetic improvement resulting from street trees, one can't understand why the city could not spend a little money every year to plant properly—in the matter of variety, alignment and distance, a few hundred street trees. This would not cost much more than a good full-strength "junketting trip," which the irate "ratepayer" denounces with so much righteous wrath, as the civic elections approach.

When the city fathers are pulling themselves together, and devising a systematic plan of street improvement, they should include tree planting, tree trimming, and general care and oversight of our street trees, which are the indespensable and major element in the collective conditions that make the City Beautiful.

The aldermen should not make two bites of a cherry in their town planning scheme. The glory of systematically spreading gravel on the streets should not be allowed to eclipse the greater glory resulting from systematic tree-planting in our streets.

PATRONAGE GRAFT.

It is sincerely to be hoped that Hon. Mr. Kemp is correctly informed when he denies the charge that a contract for the supply of soldiers' clothing was given by the government to a real-estate dealer and sub-let by him at a profit of $20,000. As however, Mr. Acton, publisher of the trade journal which makes the accusation, insists that the fact is as his paper says, and that he can produce the evidence, there should be an investigation.

The complaint against such a contract going "outside the trade" is perfectly justifiable. If the order was placed with a real-estate dealer it was obviously for the purpose of allowing him to get a middleman's rake-off. If his profit had amounted to only one dollar, the case would still exist against such methods of buying for the army. But with the government searching for new ways of financing the war, the people of Canada cannot afford to have $20,000 given away to someone who has a friend in Parliament. Such charges as these, when they come from a reputable source, cannot be allowed to pass.

There have been many rumours that the delay in supplying uniforms and other equipment to the Canadian troops, as admitted by Sir Sam Hughes, is due largely to the policy of the Kemp purchasing commission in reserving all orders for "friends of the party."

The particular charge in "Men's Wear." Mr. Acton's trade publication, is as follows:

"The situation is best illustrated by a case that has occurred in the city of Toronto. In spite of the number of bona fide clothing factories anxious to get a share of the work, a large contract for uniforms was recently given to a real-estate man who has had no more experience in clothing manufacture than the member of Parliament who got him the contract. He farmed out the order to a firm of foreigners at a net profit of over twenty thousand dollars, promptly covering his chances for loss with insurance. Heer is a man who, beyond perhaps a subscription to the party fund, has never turned his hand in the making of a fortune out of his country's necessity. No doubt instances might be multiplied almost indefinitely. As we have already said, it is not a shame, it is a crime—Ottawa Free Press.

The Great Changes the War Has Created in Ireland

The war has brought great changes but none greater than those which have taken place in Ireland during the past year.

"Fifteen months ago," writes The Irish Times, the leading Unionist daily in Ireland, "every man in Ireland would have laughed at the suggestion that Mr. Redmond, Archbishop Crozier, Lord Londonderry, Colonel Sharman-Crawford, and the Lord Mayors of Dublin and Belfast could meet for a national purpose at the Viceregal Lodge. We rejoice that the miracle has been accomplished, even though the occasion is one of the gravest danger to Ireland and the State. A common patriotism now unites these leaders of a united public opinion."

At a recruiting conference which met at the Viceregal Lodge, Dublin, the Lord-Lieutenant read a letter from Lord Kitchener which paid an eloquent tribute to the bravery and gallant exploits of the Irish troops. General Friend stated that, exclusive of reservists, who numbered between thirty and forty thousand at the outbreak of war, Ireland has contributed to Kitchener's new army eighty-one thousand men. Well might Kitchener state that "the Irish are entitled to their full share of the compliments paid to the rest of the United Kingdom for their hitherto magnificent response to the appeal for men." Of infantry Ireland has sent fifty-three batalions to the front, excluding other branches of the service. The casualties have been enormous, the average numbers required to replace the wastage, being one hundred per cent. a year. To keep up these infantry battalions at their full strength Ireland is called upon to recruit at least eleven hundred men a week. To supply these reinforcements the country has raised or is about to raise twenty-six Irish reserve battalions, and it is to keep these at full strength that the Recruiting Conference at the Viceregal Lodge decided to institute a new departure. The Lord-Lieutenant has accepted the position of Director of Recruiting in Ireland, and will appoint a Chief Organizer, who will work in co-operation with the local and military authorities. This demand for more recruits synchronizes with the fresh efforts put forward by Lord Derby in England, and does not imply, as Lord Kitchener was careful to point out, that Ireland has not made a good response to the country's call. As The Irish Times says, "she has responded, indeed, at least as well as any other part of the United Kingdom." This from the leading Irish Unionist journal should silence the tongues of the moral assassins who seek to label Ireland as disloyal and a shirker.

The fact that men who a year ago were talking of civil war now sit down together to devise ways and means to express their common patriotism and loyalty is an event that must rejoice the heart of every friend of Ireland. Only recently the Most Rev. Dr. Bernard, now Protestant Archbishop of Dublin, pleaded in the Irish Press for a conciliatory spirit, and the union of Protestant and Catholic in the bonds of a common patriotism, which shows that Ireland is being rapidly purified from the dross of political and sectarian disunion in the fierce crucible of war. One of the most ably conducted dailies in the United Kingdom, and, during the Carson campaign, the most brilliant advocate of Ulster Unionist demands, The Irish Times, sweeps aside as of small account in these momentous times the suspicions and animosities of the dead past. With a statesmanlike vision it exclaims:

"Scholar and artisan, Unionist and Nationalist, Protestant and Roman Catholic, our young men have fought side by side, rivals only in courage and devotion. They have saved one another's lives in action. They have died together for Ireland, and the same grass covers their graves. Are all this glory and all this grief to mean nothing for the Ireland of to-morrow? When the danger is ended is the great chapter to vanish as if it had never been written, and are we to renew the cursings and threatenings of the months before the war?"

This inspiring appeal for national unity will awaken a generous response in the breasts of the brave men at the front and wherever Irishmen meet. Not since the days of Thomas Davis and the League of North and South has Ireland felt so strongly the impulse toward national unity. This, not Acts of Parliament, is, after all, the way of salvation for the nation.—The Globe.

Appeals to Everybody.

Many people overlook the advantage of newspaper advertising. If the farmer has stock to sell, he can find buyers, if he wants to buy, he can have the sellers come to him. When anything is lost or found, when help is wanted, or a position is sought; when any article from a baby carriage to a pet fox could be exchanged to advantage, a small advertisement in the newspaper will accomplish the desired result.

Nearly everybody can use the advertising columns to advantage at some time, and every person will profit by reading the advertisements regularly.

American Lad Has Exciting Time in the British Navy

Serves in Trenches in Gallipoli, Captured by Germans in Belgium, Escapes to British Battleship and Finally Brought Back Through the State Department's Efforts

YONKERS, N. Y., Nov. 8—Wilfrid Doyle, the nineteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Doyle, of No. 156 Valentine lane, this city, is back at his home here after seven months of adventure of the kind that most boys dream about but never experience. He has fought the Turk in trenches knee deep in water at the Dardanelles, he has been captured by the Germans in Belgium and he has stood watch many nights on the deck of the superdreadnought Queen Elizabeth while she patrolled the North Sea enforcing the blockade against Germany.

The spring fever wearied young Doyle of the simple pleasures of life in Yonkers and he ran away from home. He made his way to Boston, where he obtained a place as horse hostler on one of the transports engaged in carrying horses to the war zone. In Liverpool he left his ship and enlisted in the British navy. He had very little trouble in getting into the service although an alien. He told the recruiting officer that he was an Irish boy, and so he is, as his name proves. His enlistment was for the duration of the war, but after six months of effort the State Department of the United States plucked him from the service of King George at the behest of his parents. A postal card he wrote to his mother directly after landing in Liverpool supplied the crew that led to his discovery.

Gallipoli, Doyle says, is now a shambles and a ruin in the area over which the Turks have been slowly driven back by the Allies. Not so much as a drop of clean water may be obtained there. The streams and wells have been polluted by bodies and blood. All the water used by the Allies is filtered on the battle ships. The trees in the woods that before the war dotted a fertile farming country have been reduced to stumps.

Doyle arrived at the Dardanelles in May, soon after the attack on the Turks had begun. During one period of heavy pressure he served for forty-eight hours on land in the third line of trenches. The men of the allied forces suffered fearfully, he says, at that time from the rains that flooded the trenches and the intense heat that made life almost unbearable. The enemy did not reach the third line, luckil. Had they done so they won'd have made short work of the sailors drawn in an emergency from the fleet and little used to rifles and bayonets.

While on this expedition Doyle saw a Turkish girl sniper captured. A group of sailors relieved from trench duty were standing near a haystack. One of them playfully thrust his bayonet into the hay. When he drew it out it was covered with blood. The sailors immediately tore the stack apart and discovered a girl armed with a rifle in a hollowed space. She had been on her knees at a loop-hole when the bayonet point caught her in the arm. Beside her was found a supply of food and thirty-five identification discs of the kind worn by all sailors and soldiers in Britain's service. It was the belief of her captors that she had killed that many soldiers in the trenches within range and had then stolen out and cut their identification discs from their necks. Doyle returned to his ship soon after the girl was captured and he did not learn of her fate.

On board the Queen Elizabeth Doyle met Corporal Joseph Nicolson, the only survivor of a regiment of Royal Scots, which was annihilated on April 25. After leaving a transport the soldiers were taken to the fighting front on board the Queen Elizabeth. An hour after arriving, at two o'clock in the afternoon, the regiment charged. It was not properly supported and was annihilated. At five o'clock that afternoon a survivor crawled back into the trenches. He died later on the way to England, at Malta. Nicholson was found wounded fourteen hours later. He was sent aboard the Queen Elizabeth for hospital treatment and he and Doyle became very friendly. As soon as he had sufficiently recovered he was sent back to England.

At Liverpool, after Doyle had been discharged from the English navy and was waiting to obtain passage to America, he met Nicholson by chance. They spent much time in each other's company for days. Nicholson is now at his home, in Edinburg, discharged from the army, permanently disabled. His right leg was badly mutilated by shrapnel.

In July the Queen Elizabeth, with others of the newer English battle ships, was withdrawn from Turkish waters and placed on patrol duty in the North Sea. While his ship was being overhauled Doyle served for a time on the battle ship Drake. During this period, with fifty others, he was captured on the Belgian coast. The small landing party was surrounded by a large number of Germans. They were captured and marched a mile inland to a barbed wire stockade. That night twenty of them, including Doyle, escaped. Their guard was insufficient and they surprised and bound the only sentry barring their path to freedom. They reached the coast at ten o'clock that night. The searchlights of the Drake were active, and they had little difficulty in attracting her attention.

Under present conditions on the blockading fleet in the North Sea, the men serve four hours on duty and then have eight hours off. The food is good, he says, and the conduct of the superior officers considerate. The discipline is of the iron kind, however, and the slightest infraction of the rules brings a disproportionate penalty. At times the Queen Elizabeth was part of a great fleet; at other times she was quite alone at sea.

Trades and Labour Notes

By the O.S.

The usual meeting held this week did not have the effect desired. The candidate for Mayoralty honours President J. J. Hartley wished to hear the opinions of the union men of the city, so the meeting was thrown open to all the local cardholders, notices appearing in the local press to that effect. The union men of the city were conspicuous by their absence at the meeting on Wednesday night. As the meetings are open to all union men to the end of the year it is hoped that they will tally and not leave it all to their delegates, whose opinions have caused Mr Hartley to take the stand he has.

On the question being asked of President Hartley meant to withdraw as per a statement in a local paper recently, Mr. Hartley replied that such was not the case, he was in the game to stay.

A paper on the Labor Educational Society's endeavor to provide work for disabled soldiers was read. It is the intention of the society to provide work for our wounded warriors by the manufacture of toys, to be retailed at a figure which compares very well with that coming over the border. The factory (donated by the Toronto City Council) is well equipped with the necessary machinery, and now that all toys manufactured in the Fatherland have to stay within the limits of same, there should be a good demand for toys of home manufacture especially when they are ingenious and instructive. The work on these is such that partially disabled men can manage to earn a livelihood, and Secretary Marks should receive every encouragement regarding these practical proposals.

Complaint was voiced regarding the lax manner in which the employees of the Utilities Commission (Waterworks Dept.) receive their pay, having to wait anything up to four days for same. This causes inconvenience as the cost of living means a hand-to-mouth management, a necessity. The Secretary will ask for improved methods of payment for the workers.

The Board of Education also came in for criticism, as the secretary holds two jobs. "One man, one job" should be the slogan these days when there are not enough jobs to go around. Another letter demanding an explanation of conduct will be despatched this section of municipal officials.

For some considerable time delegates from the Theatrical Workers have never been absent from a meeting. Joy was expressed at their non-attendance this week, for the long continued struggle has ceased and the boys are now back on their job.

Encouraged by the latter incident the local Barbers are taking up the cudgels to defeat the cut-price barber on Simcoe Street.

The Henry Hope Co., it was understood at the start was to employ fifty hands, did not come up to that mark. The members of the building trades present explained that probably the cause was the depression they experienced as part of the common lot at present.

The appointment of an election committee concluded the business and the meeting adjourned till September 17th.

More Borrowing In the States

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—It was reported in financial circles that negotiations between bankers in London and New York for the establishment of important new commercial credits in the United States practically have been closed. An announcement of a formation of a group of bankers to handle the matter in this country, according to the reports, is expected shortly. It is understood that Sir Edward Holden, chairman of the London City and Midland Bank, had obtained from bankers in London acquiescence in the terms proposed by American bankers.

One large New York institution Thursday advanced $20,000,000 on three months' bills to a large English bank. Other English banks, it is understood, are obtaining funds in this country in a similar manner.

The form of the new credits has not been definitely settled according to reports, but indications were that they would be arranged partly through straight bank loans and partly through acceptances on London banks.

WHAT HAPPENED.

A couple were walking along the street, when a lady on the opposite side slipped and fell. The gentleman rushed across, raised his hat and offered to assist her in any way. His wife followed him at a slow pace, and seeing his devotion to the stranger shook her fist in his face. "Oh it's all right, it's all right," he said in gentle tone. "Yes, I know it is" she exclaimed, hotly. "Here the unfortunate lady has her poor old coat ripped through the street name and over below her knee, knocks her hat [illegible] and bruised, and I know that how glad I am you're all right."

Had Palpitation

OF THE HEART

ALSO WEAK and DIZZY SPELLS.

When the heart begins to palpitate it will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over your whole system, accompanied by weak, fainting and dizzy spells, and if you should happen to wake up in the night with your heart palpitating, and that "all gone" sinking sensation you feel as if you were surely going to die.

When you feel this way, you may be sure that both your heart and nerves are out of order, and what you require is a real good heart and nerve tonic, one that will build up and strengthen both the heart and nerve system.

For this purpose nothing can equal Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. S. Cornell, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to take your Heart and Nerve Pills, so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better in a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble, ever since childhood, and finds great relief by using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

A FINE CONCERT AT THE VICTORIA HALL

Mrs. Ryerson Ritchie Organized a Musical Treat on Behalf of the Red Cross Fund—Judge Huycke on the Red Cross Work—Miss Drope the Prima-Donna

Under the auspices and able management of Mrs. Ryerson-Ritchie, an instrumental and vocal concert of a high order was given at the Victoria Hall (Bradburn's Opera House) last evening, the profits of which, it is intended, shall be devoted to the Red Cross Society's funds.

The stage had been tastefully decorated with palms, ferns and flowers, while the piano was well lighted by an elegant shade lamp, the floor of the stage being carpeted with rugs. At the back of the stage were the grand old Union Jack, the National Flag of the Empire, together with the red ensign, the Canadian flag. There was an air of home and comfort about the stage which was occupied by the various performers all the time. Nor must be forgotten the legend "Welcome" which appeared in letters "writ big" over the proscenium.

The opening chorus, "O Canada," contributed to by fourteen artists, gave one a pretty good idea of what the general character of the entertainment would be likely to prove, for it was good—decidedly good—time and expression being well marked. I may be rather a crank on the question of time, but I hold that it is of much more consequence than tune. It is true it grates on ears musical when one hears a discord, but an out-of-tune singer may much more easily be brought back into the right path than a bad timist, who spoils his own and everyone else's work. "Shoogy Shoo" what language that may be. I, who know many, can't tell you was a chorus sung by a half dozen ladies; the expression was good and the p's and t's were well marked.

Mr. Weller, who possesses a fine bass voice, next gave in fine style the well-known song, "There is a Land," which was deservedly loudly applauded. Owing to the length of the programme which in the end was none too long it was decided not to accede to "encores." Miss MacLaren then simply delighted her audience by her rendering of Tosti's "Good-bye." Tosti's songs are always tuneful, and in Miss McLaren he had an exponent with a very sweet, melodious voice. Her high notes were delicously clear and her lower register very rich 'Good-bye' is a sentiment we all, or nearly all, of us echo; for, I guess, we must say good-bye to the summer with a feeling of great regret. Mr. Thorpe's "Somewhere in France," was very acceptably given. This artiste has a pleasing bass voice and the audience expressed themselves accordingly. Mr. Tom Smith—a gentleman in khaki—next brought forward himself and his violincello, a "Selection from Faust," introducing the famous 'Jewel Song' and the immortal 'Soldiers' Chorus'—ever acceptable items—pleased hugely. Mrs. J. Lock, who also undertook nearly the whole evening the arduous duties of accompanist, which she ably fulfilled, next gave the song 'Valley of Laughter." This was a rippling song full of pretty trills and Mrs. Lock's execution was a good tribute to the composer. A male quartette, "Comrades-in-Arms" by Messrs. Lock, F. Whitehouse, Smith and Kenyon, was the next item. It was sung with care, the voices blending well. Mrs. Perrin then followed with a somewhat weird, yet peculiarly attractive song, entitled, "The Wind," which gave good scope for her pleasing contralto voice. This item ended the first part of the programme.

In part two, Mrs. Lock again showed her audience that she was an accomplished pianiste, for she just enchanted the audience by her rendering of Raff's "Polka de la Reine." So vociferous were the demands for an encore that Mrs. Lock was obliged to accord one. Mr. Lee sang "Land of Hope and Glory" in a manner so pleasing that here an encore was called, which the vocalist begged to be allowed to decline. Mr. Ruby Quartermaine followed with the vocal morceau, "Sunshine in Your Eyes," for which she received applause. Then there was a halt in the musical part of the programme, during which His Honour Judge Huycke favoured the audience with one of those charming speeches, for which he is so justly famed, and I might say, beloved. Of his words I shall have to say something further on.

Pte. Tom Smith, again with his 'cello, came to the front, with an andante movement, needless to say again acceptable. The ladies next asked us, 'Forget me not," and who could forget them when the looked so charming?

Although all the wine at the feast was good, yet the best vintage had been left to the last. Miss L. Drope—a young lady with a splendid contralto voice, with high notes as clear as a bell, and her lower ones beautifully mellow, in a charming manner sang, "She Wandered Down the Mountain Side" A repetition of this song was vociferously demanded, and Miss Drope repeated it. This versatile lady then followed with a patriotic recitation entitled, "The Colours of the Flag," which she rendered in a delightfully charming manner, absolutely free from the slightest tinge of affectation.

Miss Drope is the contralto gold medallist of Saskatchewan. This medal was presented to her by the Lieut. Governor, on the adjudication of the famous New York critic, Mr. Kriehel. Miss Drope is at present visiting with Mrs. Ryerson-Ritchie. She leaves in a few days for the States, but on Sunday morning next (7th) she will sing at the Murray street Baptist church.

And now for some of Judge Huycke's ever welcome remarks. The Judge first of all congratulated Canon Davidson, who was present, on his appointment as Chaplain to the 93rd Battalion, and equally congratulated the Battalion on the good fortune it had in having such a chaplain to look after the spiritual welfare of its men.

The learned Judge said that the music had been so good that if he made a speech, it would be like the rift in the lute it would spoil it all. He felt it would be almost a cruelty to inflict an address ("No! no!"). He didn't know that anything he could say would interest ("Yes! Yes!"). There was one subject a great national danger, a great world crisis. The great war is not near us in one sense, but in another it is as near as it is in Great Britain. For the present I should be our one aim to do our duty, putting all else on one side. It was of no use waving a flag and singing 'God Save the King' unless rich and poor alike tried to save him. Our British soldiers are scattered all over the seat of war, north and south. Peterborough boys are scattered all over the front, doing their best bravely and conscientiously. Some have sent away those dearer than their own life. But all can do something; there are so many things to demand our attention at present. Great Britain was making a huge self-sacrifice, not for her own existence, but to help the weak. True greatness is true kindness and self sacrifice —the great helping the weak. Here we are not doing so much sacrifice, so the least we can do is to help to comfort and assist others.

The Red Cross organization is only sixty years old. Prior to its institution soldiers were left on the battlefield to bleed or die, in heat or cold. This organization was originally instituted by a Frenchman. It is one of the greatest things ever known. Red Cross nurses are blessed and worshipped by soldiers, for they are following in the steps of Florence Nightingale. It was in the 'sixties' that the Red Cross movement was inaugurated. This is the first great war since that time.

The red cross on the white ground is the symbol of self sacrifice. It bears a splendid part in this campaign. There never was such a campaign. By means of the International Red Cross, more wounded men have been saved in this war than ever known before — all due to the Red Cross movement. No praise can be too great either for the women and men for the work they have done (for those at the front) all over the world.

We must keep up the fight until the battle is won. We can all do our share, and in God's good time peace—a righteous peace—will prevail.

At the conclusion of the performance Mr. Postmaster Edgar, in a few well chosen words, proposed a vote of thanks to Mrs. Ritchie and her helpers which, being seconded by Mr. MacFarlane, was carried by acclamation.

To Mrs. Ryerson-Ritchie and her assistants every praise must be given for the elegant programme offered, and the able manner in which the affair was carried out. It was a high-class concert and it is a pity that the room was not packed—especially considering the cause it was got up for. Some people don't know a good thing when they see it, and here was a really tempting bit placed, as it were, under their very nose. Anyway the wise ones who were present had a splendid run for their money.

RUSSIA'S GREAT SEA PORT IS HIVE OF INDUSTRY

Vladivostok Badly Congested by Influx of War Supplies American Equipment Anxiously Awaited

VLADIVOSTOK, Nov. 6.—With its wharves piled up with all sorts of war supplies and its railway facilities wholly inadequate to meet the insistent demands of the Russian army, Vladivostok is looking anxiously toward the Panama Canal and hoping for a report that the slides have been mastered and will permit the passage of ships carrying the rails, locomotives and cars so necessary to speed up transportation along the 6,000 miles of railway which separate the Russian battle lines from Russia's greatest gateway for supplies.

So far not a single ship from New York has arrived bearing locomotives or railway cars. Four hundred and fifty American locomotives and 20,000 American freight cars have been purchased and many of them have been shipped. Several ships bearing railway supplies passed through the Panama Canal before the slide of September 18, which was reported to have cut off communications for an indefinite time. Because of the block in the Panama route supply ships from New York have been ordered to Vladivostok by the Suez route, which takes several weeks longer under present conditions.

Two fundamental errors have entered into much of the discussion concerning Vladivostok's possibilities as a supply gateway. The first is the somewhat generally accepted statement that Vladivostok is icebound part of the winter. This is not true. The other erroneous statement is that the Trans-Siberian Railway is entirely double tracked from Vladivostok to European Asia. This is equally untrue. Neither is there sufficient steel available to complete the double track along the entire route.

Last winter two icebreakers kept Vladivostok open throughout the entire cold season without any trouble. This year a third icebreaker has been purchased in Japan, and the port authorities anticipate no difficulty in keeping channels open to the docks.

Vladivostok hitherto has been an exporting and not an importing centre. The high freight rates across Serbia made the port useless as a supply centre for European Russia, until the present war threw all the Russian ports out of commission except Archangel and Vladivostok, the two gateways through which Russia can now draw her arms and ammunition from outside countries.

Port Facilities Lacking.

Heroic efforts have been made at Vladivostok to measure up to the unexpected responsibilities, but warehouses, docks, cranes, trackage and rolling stock were lacking to care for the avalanche of war supplies. Temporary tracks have been built in every possible direction. Warehouses have been enlarged; new piers have been thrown out. But the enlarged facilities have not been equal to the influx of freight, and the worst is to come. So far large guns have been the only bulky machinery unloaded. The great cargoes of American locomotives and steel freight cars call for docking machinery and facilities which Vladivostok does not afford. The docks are small, entirely of wood and few in number. The lighters are barges available also are small and not well suited to large pieces of machinery.

Owing to the confirmation of the harbor, a large part of which is wholly monopolized by the navy and army as a dry dock, arsenal, navy yard, barracks and supply depots, ten or twelve ships at most can be unloaded in the harbor at once, and with this number lighters must be used to a considerable extent.

Virtually every available foot of ground along the water front is at present stacked high with war supplies covered with canvas. Warehouses are crowded to their capacity and the overflow is piled under any temporary shelter which can be provided.

It is estimated that a trainload of war supplies starts westward every three hours, but the great warehouses and piers are constantly filled again from the ships always waiting for a chance to dock. An endless chain of Coreans and Chinese is piling copper and lead and beans into freight cars, which are rapidly worked into trains and started off for the seat of war.

I saw many familiar trade marks in my walk along the congested water front. Automobiles from Detroit, steel rails from an Illinois company, army wagons from several American manufacturers. American tinned milk and meat and many other products of the United States lie waiting for car space. American cotton may be seen in many of the warehouses. Today an English ship is discharging a cargo of cotton, which is being transferred immediately to cars. The cotton is from New York and each bale bears the label "Merchanrts' Bank, Moscow, Zerega."

Strangely Assorted Freight.

Trains going to Russia carry a strange assortment of freight. Gun carriages, rails, structural steel for bridges, lumber, piling and coal may be seen on the open cars. These cars are about thirty feet long. Consequently steel rails of the American standard length require two flat cars, and only about twenty-five rails are carried on each pair of cars. The Russian closed freight cars are about twenty-one feet long and have a freight capacity of only 15,000 pounds. Both the flat car and the closed cars have only a single pair of wheels at each end. The new steel cars, which are coming from America are to be of the size used by railways in the United States. They will differ only in the one particular from American cars, and that is the gauge. The Trans-Siberian line is of slightly broader gauge than American standard lines.

At Amur Bay, on the west side of the Vladivostok peninsula, the waters, unlike those of the landlocked Golden Horn, are rough. However, extensive improvements have been made about four miles north of Vladivostock on the Amur, and it is there that the American locomotives and cars probably will be unloaded. From a terminal yard scores of railway tracks extends for miles and preparations are in progress for the accommodation of more tracks. A Cleveland firm is erecting thirty-five engine cranes at First River to be used in handling the locomotives, and American contractors are preparing to put the new steel cars into commission with the greatest possible speed

Concert by the Great Russian Boy Violinist and Children's Orchestra

A notable little event in musical circles is the coming violin recital and concert, to be given in the Conservatory Hall on Friday, Nov. 19th by the wonderful Russian boy violinist, Max Fleischman. He is described as a veritable genius on the violin. He is a Canadian by birth, born of Russian parents of the Jewish race, which has contributed some of the greatest musical masters of the world. He is only ten years of age; and two years ago he was heard at the Hambourg Conservatory, Toronto; and these great masters of music were so struck with the astonishing evidences of genius that they took charge of his musical training, and Jan Hambourg, the great violin virtuoso, has given him since that time free tuition, feeling that his career and performance will reflect credit upon the Hambourg family and the Conservatory. He has been heard by great audiences at the Hambourg recitals in Massey Hall, and his marvellous work on the violin aroused the greatest enthusiasm. He has also performed in Montreal, where he created a veritable furore; and on one occasion a wealthy musical enthusiast was so carried away that he presented him with a $500 violin.

Little Max Fleischman's performance is not playing at violin playing, but genuine artistic work. He does not play child music, but ambitious and difficult compositions—with artistic finish and musical intelligence.

He will be assisted on the 19th by the Children's Orchestra, in whose interest—to provide funds for music and repair of instruments—the concert is given. This is an important organization in its ultimate results—it is a training school for future orchestral strength in the city. It seems very fitting that it should be helped in its work by, perhaps, the greatest living boy violinist—a Canadian boy at that.

Magical Effect of New Face Powder

To maintain a clear, rosy, youthful complexion, there's nothing so simple to use and yet so effective as ordinary mercolised wax, which you can get at any druggists in the original package. Just apply the wax at night as you would cold cream, in the morning wash it off with warm water. If you've never tried it you can't imagine the magical effect of this harmless home treatment. The wax causes the worn out scarf skin to come off in minute particles, a little at a time, and soon you have entirely shed the offensive cuticle. The fresh young underskin now in evidence is so healthy and girlish looking, so free from any appearance of artificiality, you wish you had heard of this marvellous complexion-renewing secret long ago.

To get rid of your wrinkles, here's a formula that is wonderfully effective: Ounces powdered saxolite, dissolved in pint witch hazel. Bathe the face in this and you will be simply astonished at the results, even after the first trial.

DANDRUFF ON HEAD IN DRY CRUST

Hair Came Out. Scalp Itched and Burned. Scales Like Sawdust. Cuticura Healed In Six Weeks.

The Pas, Manitoba.—"Four years ago I began to lose my hair. It used to come out any time that I combed it. I think it was because my head was full of dandruff. Whenever I brushed it the scales flew off like sawdust. My scalp also itched and burned and my head was like a dry crust. The dandruff showed very plainly.

"I applied several remedies but found no improvement till I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment a few days I found a great difference so I continued with them six weeks and they completely healed me." (Signed) L. D. Lockwood, June 4, 1914.

Although Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold throughout the world, a sample of each with 32-p. Skin Book will be sent free upon request. Address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A."

MEETINGS AT THE ASSEMBLY HALL

The meetings will be continued each night next week, at 8 o'clock in the Assembly Hall over the Grand Trunk Ticket Office on George Street. The public are cordially invited to attend those meetings. The word of God is ministered in a manner calculated to bring help and blessing to those who are the Lord's, and to those who still "sit in nature's darkness" and in "shadow of death" a special invitation is extended; our "faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." Two places where men can meet God was the theme last night. The one at a "mercy seat" or propitiation, in Romans 3:25, and the other mentioned in Acts 17:31, at a judgment seat. The Lord Jesus Christ, who is "set forth as a propritiation" in the one, will be "appointed" as the Judge in the other.

When The Y.M.C.A. Boys Will Arrive

On Friday Evening November 19th For Big Conference

Many inquiries are being made as to when the boys attending the Conference will arrive. They are expected here on Friday evening, Nov. 19th, in time for tea and most, or all of them, will remain until the Monday morning. Those taking boys to billet will not have to provide tea for them on the Saturday evening. The plan of having the boys get their Saturday dinner up town conflicted with other arrangements and so had to be abandoned. It is hoped that the hostesses of the boys will not mind giving them a lunch or dinner at noon on Saturday.

If you have not taken any boys to billet why not find out the representative of your church on the billeting committee and hand in your name. This would relieve him very much and aid materially in the good work of making provision for the boys. "be not forgetful to entertain strangers; for thereby some have entertained angels unawares" (Heb. 13:2).

"Get Them Off The Perch" Said Mayor Of Otonabee Power Lines

The Otonabee Power Company's lease of the streets expired on Dec. 31, 1915, and the Finance committee of the Council are of the opinion that the time has come to ask them to remove their poles, wires and other equipment. This was the sentiment expressed last night. The company had been paying $400 a year street rental in quarterly installments, one of which was paid this year. Just about that time the question was raised as to the status of the company, and no other sums have been collected. Mayor Buller said that when his attention was called to the matter, he thought it would be better no' to in any way involve the city in regard t the company's lapsed lease. He believed it was now time to get them on the streets. One of their customers had complained recently that the city was not providing the Hydro benefits for the whole city. The Otonabee Company, it was said, had two prices, and customers were paying more than those citizens who had the Hydro service. It was finally decided to ask the Utilities Commission if they were in a position to provide for the Otonabee customers and to consider the whole question concerning the removal of the Otonabee wires and poles from the streets.

"Get them off the perch," was the Mayor's sentiment.

In The Interest Of Peterboro's Soldier Boys

Number of Local Clergymen Endeavouring to Secure Old Baptist Church For Recreation Rooms For the Lads in Khaki

Dear Mr. Editor:

Sir,—Your article of last evening on "An Opening and Men to Fill It," has interested the ministry of Peterborough. Not that it has inspired anything that was not already on the way but it is always of interest to note the approval of others while our plans are being perfected.

The time has not come for the special attention of the churches to these soldier worthies who are gathering here but by the time the snow comes and these attentions are really required, you will probably be acquainted with the fact that long before you took your pen to suggest it, arrangements were being made to let these volunteers know that the church has not forgotten them. We have all been doing all that the limited number of hours in the day would admit of our doing. Not two or three but all of the city ministers have been busy in ways which they have not advertised, and the soldiers know it, and thank them for it.

I am not authorized to give publicity to what has been in our minds, but I venture to say that a number of Protestant ministers have had a meeting to discuss the possibility of securing unitedly the old Baptist church for reading, writing, recreation rooms, besides being quarters for the band. This building lends itself splendidly to this purpose. It is beside the armouries. It is roomy enough for hundreds. It is light and airy. This building may, or may not, be within our reaching, but I write now on behalf of the ministry so that you may be assured that there are some people busy who have not published their deeds and desires.

Our thought has been that the securing of a large building would make for the comradeship, which means so much to the soldier, and that it would call forth a larger co-operation of the community in providing for their social welfare, and the possibility of more and varied forms of social comfort and amusement.

The matter will be fully discussed at our regular meeting on Monday next, and I feel sure that you will be pleased, not only on account of our soldiers but because it will once more prove that great minds run in the same channel. Yours, etc

Annual Promenade at the Collegiate Much Enjoyed

Large Number Attend Delightful Function Under Auspices of the Girls Athletic Association

FOR PATRIOTIC PURPOSES

The annual promenade of the Girls' Athletic Association of the Collegiate Institute was held last evening and proved one of the most enjoyable functions of its kind ever held. The spacious halls of the building never looked prettier than it did on this occasion. The lower hall was hung with pennants while the upper one was prettily arranged with flags and bunting. The Assembly Hall was decorated in Hallowe'en colours, yellow and black. The Science room was very attractive in floral decorations of yellow 'mums and autumn leaves. Here dainty refreshments were served by a bevy of pretty girls. Two booths, where pennants, candy and ice cream were dispensed, received a liberal patronage.

The proceedings were opened with the singing of the national anthem, after which a splendid programme was given. The chair was taken by Miss Alva Dobbin, president of the Girls' Athletic Association. One of the interesting features of the evening was a talk by Principal Kenner on "Famous Paintings and War Pictures."

A selection by an octette composed of Misses Morphet, Davidson, Beaver and Richardson and Messrs. Vanden, Bushington, F. Hooper and S. Whitehouse was much enjoyed. "A Bachelor's Reveries" by Mr. Gerry McClelland was given in splendid style and received well merited applause. An illustrated song by six young ladies, Misses I. Johnston, L. Moore, M. Nelson, M. Richardson and H Davids n, was well received. The programme was concluded with the singing by the school of "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall." The programme was divided into two parts and in the interval, promenades were enjoyed by all.

The proceeds of the affair will be devoted to patriotic purposes.

Kidney Trouble?

The waste material which the Kidneys are intended to remove from the blood, if allowed to accumulate in the system, poison the blood and thus produce deleterious effects.

If from over-work, exposure to cold, or some local injury, the kidneys become congested or inflamed and cannot perform their functions, the system becomes filled with uric poisons.

Whenever a dull, heavy pain is felt over the region of the kidneys for any length of time, accompanied by a sallow complexion, loss of appetite, decrease of weight, and a puffy condition under the eyes and in the ankles, a chronic inflammation of the kidneys must be suspected, and if not relieved promptly chronic Bright's Disease will certainly develop.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, sold everywhere at 25c and 60c which is a Diuretic as well as an Aperient, will carry out of the system the poisonous material which the kidneys cannot get rid of, and will relieve the congestion of the kidneys.

Sold by E. L. Payne and McDermid & Jury.

First Complaint In Twenty Years

Local Blacklister Creates Trouble For Hotelkeeper—To-day's Police Court News

Mr. Perry of the American House, made his initial appearance in police court this morning. His presence was due to a local blacklister, who was fined ten dollars for being drunk while on the prohibited list, and who incidentally named the American House as his source of supply.

Mr. Perry said he had only been in Peterborough about five weeks and that both he and his bartender were unacquainted with the accused.

"I have been in the business twenty years and never had a fine or complaint," said Mr. Perry. "I came to town with a clean sheet and hope to go out in the same way." It was Mr. Perry's intention to lay a charge against the accused, but as the court appeared to be satisfied with Mr. Perry's explanation, the matter was dropped.

Fined Five Dollars.

J. M. Bygott of Lakefield, was fined five dollars for a breach of the automobile act. The offence consisted of allowing an electric horn to create an unnecessary noise. Bygott claimed that the horn became loose in such a manner as to form a circuit with the side of the car.

"This is the first case of its kind to come before me," said Magistrate Dumble, "and I don't like to lose the opportunity of educating the public."

Was Remanded.

Mrs. Florence Spring, a woman of uncertain habits, pleaded not guilty to a charge of vagrancy. She was remanded until Friday next.

Tony Bontante, a representative of one of the allied nations now engaged in the world conflict, precipitated a conflict of his own on Donegal street. He was remanded until Monday. The charge was disorderly conduct.

LACK OF SEWERS IS BLAMED FOR DISEASE

Third Case of Diptheria South of the Tunnel

SARNIA, Nov. 6.—Another case of diphtheria has developed in the section of the city south of the tunnel, making the total for that section for diphtheria three cases, and two cases of chickenpox.

Some months ago the sanitary authorities of the city asked the council to build some sewers in that section of the city, and the council has also received petitions from the residents asking that such work be done, but nothing was done as it was claimed there were no funds for sewer extensions.

The present outbreak of disease is blamed on the lack of sewers.

PETERBORO PATRIOTIC CHORUS ORGANIZED

One of the new auxiliaries of the Speakers' Patriotic League is the Peterborough Patriotic Chorus, which is open to all good singers and instrumentalists in the city who desire to contribute their talent toward the one big end for which everybody is working. For the recruiting of a battalion here, greater efforts than ever will have to be exerted, and the influence of choral music is fully appreciated. This offers an opportunity for some to do then but and it will be fully appreciated. A practice will be held in the George street Methodist church on Sunday night. A provisional membership committee has been appointed as follows: Chairman, J W Worth, Asa Huycke of the Peterborough Music Store, C. C. Parsons of the Bank of Commerce, D. D Brown of the Bank of Toronto. Practices will be arranged so as not to conflict with regular work

Plant Fifteen Feet in Diameter is to Be Transported on Special N. Y. C. Car

A special car for one chrysanthemum presided over by a bridge engineer or a railroad? Never heard of such a thing? Neither did any one else until arrangements were made by Mr. M. A Vinson, Secretary of the Cleveland Flower Show with the New York Central Railroad to transport one of Mr. Adolp Lewisohn's prize chrysanthemums from his greenhouses at Ardsley, N.Y., to the Flower Show which will be held at Cleveland from November 10 to 15.

The plant is 15 feet across its umbrella like formation, and is covered with 1,200 blossoms, making it literally a gigantic bouquet. An object of such a size cannot be loaded on an ordinary freight car and the problem of clearance under bridges was a perplexing one. The matter went to the Engineering Department of the Railroad and a heavy ordinance car was reconstructed to accommodate the plant and provide the bridge clearances. The immense plant will be packed on edge, the lower edge resting within six inches of the rails, and the upper just clearing some of the bridges by four or five inches.

The plant will leave Dobbs Ferry on November 5th and be well chaperoned. A representative of the Engineering Department of the New York Central will travel with it, as well as Mr. J W H Campbell, Superintendent of the Ardsley Greenhouses, and an assistant. This extraordinary care is taken on account of the unusualness of the shipment and the necessity of preventing any kind of a mishap en route.

On arrival at Cleveland the great plant will be placed on a motor truck and driven through the principal streets under an escort of mounted police.

The plant is valued at several thousand dollars and is only slightly smaller than the largest of those raised by the Emperor of Japan, which Mr. Lewisohn is striving to outdo.

"THE LAST JUDGMENT" ON DECEMBER 3RD

The weekly practice of the choir of George Street Methodist Church, in Spohr's "Last Judgment," brought together a good turnout of the various voices. The work is progressing rapidly, so much so that at an interval the question of the date of the concert was discussed. Various dates were mentioned, and on a final vote the evening of Friday, 3rd December was unanimously decided upon.

The proceeds of the concert will be handed over to one or other of the local patriotic causes, so that a large audience is expected.

HOW TO MAKE HAIR GROW

NEW YORK CHEMIST GIVES SIMPLE FORMULA.

To destroy dandruff, cleanse and invigorate the scalp, ward off premature grayness and baldness, and to stimulate hair growth, I recommend this formula in preference to anything else: 6 ounces bay rum, 2 ounces lavona de compose, and 1 drachm menthol crystals. You can buy these ingredients from any Druggist and mix them yourself at home or the druggist will mix them for you. If you choose, add a teaspoonful of your favorite perfume to the above ingredients. Apply to the scalp night and morning, and rub in thoroughly with the finger tips.

Duchess of Marlborough Urges Care of Babies To Repair War's Losses

By the Duchess of Marlborough

LONDON, Nov 6 — The meeting held at Guildhall last week focused public attention on the urgent necessity of taking steps to diminish wastage in infant life and obtain for motherhood and infancy such improved conditions as to secure for us future generations of strong and healthy citizens.

To accomplish the work on an effective scale it is obvious there must not only be closer co-operation between the local health authorities and voluntary agencies dealing with the health of the mother and child, but where the work of the voluntary agencies is insufficient the initiation of maternity and child welfare centres by the local authority itself.

Women's Municipal Party is at this moment organizing deputations to the Metropolitan borough councils with a view to emphasizing the vital importance of the maternity and child welfare work. It is urged that when vacancies occur the powers conferred by the Elections and Registrations Act should be used to add women members who, by virtue of special knowledge and experience, are invaluable in initiating schemes for maternity and child welfare.

The press and public could effectively support the work of the Women's Municipal Party, bringing such pressure to bear as will ensure that a fair proportion of vacancies on the Metropolitan borough councils be filled by qualified women. Only by their presence on the councils' public health committees we can hope to secure such co-ordinated action and promote the welfare of motherhood and infancy so as to repair the losses incurred by the war.

A TRANSFER OF BANK MANAGERS

Mr. George Dean Will Succeed Peterboro' Man at Fenelon Falls

Mr. George Dean, manager of the Bank of Montreal, Oakwood, has been transferred to the branch at Fenelon Falls, to succeed Mr. R. M. Hamilton, who has removed to Peterborough. Mr. L. Kirkby, accountant at the Fenelon Falls branch, will succeed Mr. Dean at Oakwood. The transfer moves a good man, and a popular one from this county in the person of Myles Hamilton, who was a favourite with everybody. He was an excellent curler and a splendid golfer, having performed in Lindsay on several occasions. In fact, he has on different occasions accompanied Lindsay golfers on their trips to outside points. He will be much missed in the public life of Fenelon Falls.

Manager Dean's removal from Oakwood will be a distinct loss to that village, where he was held in the highest esteem. He was ever ready to assist in any good movement.

Annual Meeting of the Peterborough Horticultural Society will be held in the City Council Chambers, Wednesday Evening Nov. 10th at 7.45 p.m., for the purpose of Electing Officers and the receiving of reports and any other business that may come before the meeting.

EXHIBITION GROUNDS TO PASS FROM DIRECTORS' HANDS UNLESS THE CITY PURCHASES THEM

Finance Committee Recommends That Council Submit a by-Law to Public at January Election—Option Expires This Year and Immediate Action Is Necessary

FUTURE OF EXHIBITION IS AT STAKE

A by-law enabling the ratepayers to decide whether they will purchase the Exhibition Grounds, was recommended to the Council for the January elections at a meeting of the Finance Committee last night. Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P.; Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr.; Mr. R. M. Glover, and Mr. F. J. A. Hall, formed a deputation from the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, and in plain terms they mustered a series of reasons why the city should not turn aside the present opportunity of obtaining possession of those thirty acres.

Mr. R. M. Glover stated that the directors have a lease which expires after the 116 Exhibition. Their option provides that they can purchase the grounds for exhibition purposes for the sum of $30,000. In presenting their arguments to the Finance Committee the directors maintained that the city should own the Exhibition Grounds, that the property is worth far more than its purchase price, that it is an ideal location for a park and exhibition, that it will be a revenue producer for the city, that it will provide a week's fair worthy of Peterborough.

For Exhibition Purposes.

Mr. Glover said that the directors were pressing the matter now because they had to give six months' notice of what action they proposed to take with their option. The grounds comprise almost 30 acres. A short time ago the directors were offered $30,000 for their option by a man who was eager to purchase the property, but it was found that the agreement confines the directors to purchasing it for exhibition or park purposes. At the price of property two years ago the Exhibition Grounds could be divided into lots worth a total of $55,000. This was mentioned to show the value of the property even as real estate.

The city could purchase it and hand it over to the Exhibition for one week. It would belong to the city during the other 51 weeks, and used for athletic meets, race meets, sports and the other customary uses such as for circuses. Besides it could be turned into a splendid park to become more valuable for the city as the surrounding district is built up.

Winter Fair.

The directors have not been encouraged to expend money in buildings, Mr. Glover continued, for the reason that they had not permanent possession. As an additional inducement to the city to secure the grounds he pointed out that the Government has intimated its intention of establishing a winter fair between Toronto and Ottawa, and it might be secured for Peterborough if this city can offer the required facilities.

Peterborough is a logical centre for the best Industrial Exhibition in the Midland countries. The local merchants are willing to contribute their efforts toward making the Peterborough fall fair a success. With an adequate building for exhibits, there would be no difficulty in getting space contracts from the merchants and manufacturers sufficient to fully occupy it. Mr. Denham, of the Quaker Oats; Mr. Breyfogle, of the De Laval, the Brinton Carpet Co., and others, have expressed a willingness to make large exhibits if the proper building advantages are provided. The merchants and manufacturers are anxious that the Peterborough Exhibition be placed on the best possible foundation.

A Good Thing for Peterborough.

Mr. J. J. Turner commenting on the suggestion that lots might be sold on the Lock street side of the grounds, said it would be a great mistake to cut off any part. The fair has been steadily growing, and this year it was found that there was none too much room. He was satisfied that in a short time Peterborough would have a week's exhibition. The directors had gone over the city very carefully and were unable to find any suitable property for the fair, and none as cheap as the present site. It has one of the best half-mile tracks in the country that could not be built under several housand dollars. A permanent grand stand was erected at a cost of $3,500. The directors have spent money, but they had nothing to work on, nothing to encourage them to ambitious endeavours. If the city would take over the property the directors could immediately get to work on a good building.

Mr. Glover remarked that with the exception of King Edward Park the city had spent nothing on its parks systems, thanks to the beneficence of some citizens.

Committee's Opinion.

Mr. Gillespie pointed out the necessity of immediate action if the Peterborough fair was to be continued. There was every likelihood that within a few years it would grow to large proportions and would be a money producer for the city.

Alderman Stratton suggested that the sale of some of the King Edward Park property might be considered. It would bring a good price, and could be used for the purchase of the larger grounds a block south.

The committee agreed with the fair directors that the Exhibition should be continued, and the least they could do was to present the question to the people now that its future is vially concerned.

Alderman Stratton stated that the interest and sinking fund on $30,000 debenture would amount to $9,184.80. The city's grant of $600 would not be needed when the grounds were purchased, thus reducing that sum to $1,800. Mr. Fred Hall stated that their surplus this year would have been $1,000 if there had been no rent. The buildings might be used for conventions, etc., and there would probably be other revenues.

It was stated that the cost of property near Crawford's Grove could not be purchased any cheaper than the option provided.

TWO FARMER'S FINED FOR CRUELTY TO HORSE

ST. CATHARINES, Nov. 6.—Milan and Palmer Miller, two farmers on whose farm was found a few days ago a horse that had not been out of its stall in a cellar under the barn since it was put there as a colt five years ago, were fined $20 by Magistrate Munro of Thorold. The brothers admitted that the horse had been in the cellar for about five years, but claimed that they could not let it out because it was vicious. The horse had been fed and watered, but had never been cleaned. When found the horse's hoofs had grown upwards about two feet like horns.

GIRLS! DRAW A MOIST CLOTH THROUGH HAIR, DOUBLE ITS BEAUTY

Try This! Hair Gets Thick, Glossy, Wavy and Beautiful at Once

Immediate?—Yes! Certain?—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

Another Large Market To-Day

Butter and Eggs Plentiful—Fowl Continue to Bring Good Prices—More Prices Offered, But Quotations Advance

Market day is always a big event in Peterborough.

The ideal weather brought together a large number of buyers and sellers. Everything goes on this market from live geese to pop-corn, and at reasonable prices.

Fowl are put up in all stages of "dress" and "undress," mostly the latter.

Butter is presented in prints, some nicely shaped and wrapped in regular "printed" butter paper; others in no shape at all and enclosed in plain paper, open at the ends, and bulging in the middle. The prints put up in an attractive manner brought at least two cents a pound more than the other variety.

Basket Section.

Butter sold around 32 cents, but towards noon it showed a weakening to 30 cents.

Eggs brought 34 and 35 cents a dozen.

Chickens were quoted at $1.10 to $1.30 per pair, and averaged 15 cents a pound.

Geese which weighed 10½ pounds sold for $1.30, while turkeys went at $1.70 for 8½ pounds, and $4 for a bird tipping the scales at 20 pounds.

One good lady was offering yarn in 4-ounce skeins at 95 cents a pound.

The ladies of Mrs. Kendry's "Co-Workers' Bible Class" of the George Street Methodist Sunday School had a table at the south end of the building, where they sold home-made cooking, usually at store prices.

Outside Market.

Potatoes hovered around $1.35 and $1.40 a bag.

Apples were more plentiful and of a better quality than last Saturday. Russets brought $1.00 a bag. Snows sold at 30 cents a peck, $1.50 a bag, or $3.00 a barrel; Bellflowers, $4.00 a barrel; Northern Spies, $5.00; Wealthies, $2.50; Hurlburts, $2.50; Maiden Blush, $2.50; and Greenings at $1.40 a bag.

Lamb brought 14 cents, forequarters, and 16 cents for the hindquarterss. Pork, 15 and 16 cents. Mutton, 13½ cents.

Several little pigs were offered, the smaller ones bringing $15 for four, $11 a pair, and the larger ones brought $20 for three.

Three loads of hay brought $20 a ton.

Dripping sold at 20 cents a cake, each containing a little over 2 pounds.

Vegetables maintained their usual prices for this time of the year. Onions by the bag, $1 to $1.25, cabbage 25 cents a doz., red cabbage 3 for 10 cents, Brussels sprouts 5 cents a quart.

Small Change.

It would facilitate matters greatly if both vendors and purchasers would take the precaution to provide themselves with a liberal supply of small change before going to market. Of course, it creates a nice impression on the crowd to be able to produce a "five or ten spot" in payment for a dozen of eggs, but it is decidedly unfair to the farmer's wife, who could not be expected to carry so much "chicken feed."

George St. Church Red Cross Society Doing Good Work

At the meeting of the George Street Methodist Church branch of the Red Cross Society, on Thursday afternoon, the committees working on supplies reported that they had completed the following articles, which had been handed over to the General Society:

Pillow cases, 6 dozen and 5; towels 9 dozen and 7; face towels, 3 dozen and 4; day shirts, 1 dozen and 6; surgical shirts, 1 dozen; sheets, 2 dozen; hospital handkerchiefs, 16 dozen and 7; pyjamas, 11 pairs; bandages, 128, many tailed bandages, 21; slings, 9; box of old linen; ring pillows, 8.

The committee appointed to prepare Christmas boxes for the boys of the church who had enlisted, gave their report showing that 40 special boxes, filled with Christmas delicties, had been supplied. Each box contained a personal greeting note from the pastor. These boxes, addressed separately and accompanied by a pair of socks, had been parcelled and sent through the local Red Cross Society.

18 POUNDS OF BLOOD

is the average quantity in a healthy adult, but it is the quality of the blood that determines our strength to resist sickness. With weak blood we find cold hands and chilly feet; in children an aversion to study, and in adults rheumatic tendencies.

In changing seasons get abundant fresh air and take a spoonful of Scott's Emulsion after meals, because Scott's Emulsion is a rich blood-food that will increase both quantity and quality of the blood while it warms the body and helps carry off the impurities.

When multitudes of people are today taking Scott's Emulsion to avert winter sickness, and are giving it to their children, it is careless to neglect its benefits. Look out for substitutes.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

SENSATION IN SHERBROOKE CASE

SHERBROOKE, Que., Nov. 6.— A sensational statement was made before the district magistrate, which effects the murder trial now going on in the Court of the King's Bench. An Italian from Capelton named Pingetore was arrested yesterday on a minor charge and brought before Magistrate Mulvéna. One of the witnesses called for the defence, in his cross-examination, declared that Pingetore had told him that he (Pingetore), Ceminero and Care had killed Calerco at Capelton in June last. Ceminero and Care are both on trial for murder. Care, who was implicated today, is a witness who testified that Metz had killed Calerco, being helped in the killing by Ceminero, the third accused.

Pingetore, who is now implicated, was a witness against Metz, and now becomes one of the accused.

Major Beattie Is Promoted

New Senior Chaplain of the 2nd Canadian Division.

COBOURG, Nov. 6.—Rev. William Beattie, pastor of St. Andrew's church, who went to the trenches with the First Canadian Expeditionary Force as Chaplain of the 1st Brigade, is now acting Senior Chaplain of the entire 2nd Division. In an letter received this week here from him he tells of conducting the burial services for two men out of 22 who were killed when the Germans set a mine under our trenches. The huge grave, he states, was dug to accommodate all the bodies, although at the time only two had been brought in. At the time of writing he said there was a fierce bombardment, and it was reported that many more German prisoners had been taken.

COSY DOLAN WANTS TO BE A CANADIAN CITIZEN

Ottawa Free Press: "Cosy" Dolan, the eminent Canuck," will be the way future references will be made to the erstwhile first sacker of the Ottawa Canadian League champions.

This morning Mr. Dolan made application for taking out naturalization papers with a view to becoming one of our citizens. Cosy has played ball in the capital for four years and spent two winters here. He liked the conditions so well and contracted so many friends he decided to stick around. He hails from Wilmington, Delaware and is said to be the man who put the kick in Du Pont power. He first gained fame as a baseball pitcher with Manhattan University and looked so good he was signed by the New York Giants and spent a month on the bench at the Polo grounds watching Matty and Joe McGinnity break them over. He later went to the New England, N. Y. State and Tri-State leagues. Typhoid incapacitated him as a pitcher, but he was always a natural hitter and he broke in as a first baseman making good.

BASEBALL PEACE AS A CHRISTMAS GIFT

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Peace is near in baseball, if the magnates on both sides of the fence are to be believed. National League officials admit that peace is more to be desired than the present status of affairs, and President Gilmore of the Federals frankly stated that he believed a cessation of hostilities made on a fifty-fifty basis would be a good thing for all concerned.

The Federal League meeting, scheduled for French Lick, Ind., next Tuesday, is expected to bring the matter to a head, so far as the Federals are concerned.

It is probable that definite action cannot be taken by the National League until the circuit meeting here in December. However, there was a growing belief in baseball circles here to-day that a baseball peace will be the magnates' Christmas gift to fandom.

RUBE OLDRING QUITS BASEBALL

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6 - Rube Oldring is done with baseball. The veteran outfielder of the Mackmen will not accompany them to the training quarters in the spring, but will remain on his farm at Shiloh, N.J. He has so notified Connie Mack.

Manager Mack of the Athletics said that he had received notice from Oldring of his intention to quit the game, and that was all he knew about the matter. Reports have been in circulation that Mack, after the close of the last season, intended to trade his popular left fielder to some other team, and that because he was not satisfied with the deal Oldring had kicked out of harness.

This, however, Mack denied, and added that he had no intention of disposing of Oldring, and that if the retirement is really to take place it is entirely on Oldring's volition. Manager Mack stated specifically that he had not signed Oldring to a contract for next year.

HOLLY WANTED HIS PRESENT BACK

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Edward Holly, former member of the Pittsburg Federals, and now utility infielder of the Cubs, was complainant against Miss Ethel Davis, 28 years old, when she was arraigned before Judge LaBay in the Desplaines Street Court. Miss Davis was charged with larceny.

The case centred around a diamond ring given to Miss Davis by Holly more than a year ago. Her refusal to return it caused Holly to have a warrant issued for her arrest.

"I met Mr. Holly in Indianapolis, Ind., in August, 1914. I was working in a hotel where he was stopping. We became fast friends, and when he left we corresponded a great deal.

"Mr. Holly gave me the diamond ring in September. Two months later we had a quarrel and I gave it back to him. Then we made up and he returned the ring. I came to Chicago several months ago and obtained employment as clerk at a cigar stand in the Hotel Sherman. Then I was arrested."

Holly told the court that he wished to sever his acquaintance with Miss Davis.

"She wouldn't return the ring, so I got the warrant," he said. "She gave it to the policeman when he arrested her and I have it now. I don't want to prosecute her."

Judge LaBay dismissed the case.

Holly asserted that he intends to play with the Cubs next season.

FOOTBALL

Kingston Soldiers Play Toronto Soldiers.

According to reports from Kingston, Jack Williams is booting the ball in old-time form. Jack's kicking was a great factor in the game against Queen's a few weeks ago, and with the continuous practice the Toronto backs will have to mark him in the soldiers' game at U. of T. Stadium on Nov. 13.

"Gamey" Stratton is also showing up better than ever since the constant practice has rounded him into a star. While the Toronto soldiers are not getting the same practice as Kingston, they will be hardened by the route march to Toronto. As they are an aggregation of stars, a great deal of practice is unnecessary.

Curlers Inspected Peterboro Rink

Messrs W. L. Allen, Ed. Gullet, O. F. Allison, Fred Baker Reeson, A. W. Middleton, Fred Field, Jack Davidson, Maurice Jaynes and F. C. Pepino, motored out to Peterborough to inspect the curling rink and get pointers as to the construction for the new Waverley Curling Club.—Cobourg World.

Sheep Worried In Hastings

HASTINGS, Nov. 6.—Whether or not the Division Court at Hastings has a right to try the action brought by Margaret Hogan for damages for sheep worried by dogs, Mr. Chancellor Boyd will decide in a written judgment. The Township Council of Tudor have repudiated her claim on the ground that they allege the sheep were allowed to roam at large.

HIGH FLYING GEESE SIGN OF LATE FALL

"When the wild ducks fly high, look for a late fall." That used to be an old saying of our people," said Mr. Dan Whetung, of the Chemong Reserve today, "and this year we have seen the geese flying south at great heights. So we may look for a late season. The ducks are quite scarce this year. We have not seen a wild goose in the feeding grounds. They all passed overhead."

TWELVE PETERBORO OFFICERS FOR 93RD

Sergt. Cooper of the 4th Battery, C.F.A., invalided home from the front, paid a visit to the Armouries this morning. He was soon surrounded by an eager group anxious to hear some of his experiences on the firing line.

No. 1 Platoon soccer team still remain undefeated. Yesterday they tackled No. 2 and handed out the worst beating of the season, winning hands down by 6 goals to nil. The half time score was 1 to 0. Pte. McKinlay scored four goals for the winners. Pte. Kitchen of No. 2 Patoon was the referee. No. 1 have yet to be defeated, and have scored twelve goals to two so far.

Eight men of No. 5 Company, Canadian Army Service Corps, are to be stationed here for the winter to handle the supplies for the 93rd Battalion. One of the company rooms is being fitted out for the C.A.S.C. stores, while the battalion stores will be located in the cavalry quarters at the northeast corner of the Armouries. The saddle room of the 3rd Dragoons is to be used for the battalion canteen.

The 93rd Battalion will attend Divine service at Knox Presbyterian Church to-morrow morning, parading from the Armouries at 10:30 o'clock.

No. 5 Platoon, the first platoon of B Company, although composed of the latest additions to the ranks of the 93rd, is rapidly rounding into shape, and their work yesterday under the direction of Sergt. Jones was very creditable. Company Sergt.-Major S. Calladine had his eye on the "rookies" all day yesterday, while Company Sergt.-Major Hartshorn kept A Company on the move.

Up to this morning eighteen men and three officers were added to the strength of the 93rd Battalion during the week. The following privates have been taken on since Monday evening: Ptes. E. G. Esson, J. M. Luther, C. C. Ferguson, P. Killenbeck, J. Abbot, T. King, P. Schweir, H. Borland, H. Carter, W. T. Rowe, G. H. Rowe, J. J. Peers, H. Muskrat, R. J. Morris, Wm. Hennley, F. E. Holden, C. Saylor, A. Wilkins. One, Pte. H. Johnston, has been discharged during the week as medically unfit.

To be orderly room sergeant, Sergt C. W. King, transferred from A company to the staff.

Attached to 3rd Platoon, A Company, Lance Sergt. Naples.

Attached to 2nd Platoon, A Company, Lance Corporal E. Laing.

Attached to 5th Platoon, B Company, Corp. W. Leader.

Sergt. Geo. Grange, caretaker of the armouries, has applied for permission to enlist for overseas service, and if the necessary permission is granted he will join the 93rd Battalion.

A reception by the congregation of St. George's Church, was tendered Pte. A. Phipps, recently returned from the front last evening. A very happy time was spent in song and story, Pte. Phipps in conversational manner relating a number of interesting incidents of his trench life, and his thrilling experiences at the front. Rev. James Price also made a few remarks, as did Messrs. H. Wilson and Jay. During the evening dainty refreshments were served.

Harriefield War Camp, Nov. 5.—Yesterday was the most unpleasant day that the camp has seen since it was opened. Early in the morning it began to rain and the temperature being quite low, it made the day a very dreary one, indeed. The soldiers were driven into their tents for the greater part of the day, and when the time was not taken up with lectures by officers, the men were singing and trying their very best to keep up their spirits, and exhibit the real qualities of a good soldier. The regimental canteens were kept warm and comfortable and these were liberally patronized by the men during the day. To-day there is much mud over the field, and a cold, biting wind is sweeping over the entire camp grounds, and none wil regret the order to break camp. The first units will go out to-morrow, when the 32nd, 33rd and 34th Batteries will go to the city and occupy the Cereal Works on Ontario Street. On Monday the 80th Battalion will leave for Belleville, Napanee and Picton. It is doubtful is weather conditions will permit the battalion to route march, as was their intention. It would mean a three days' march, and the men would be compelled to sleep out in the open, and under such weather conditions as now prevail, this would be a very risky undertaking. It is probable that transportation by train will be arranged for the 80th between this and Monday morning.

The winter quarters of the 59th Battalion is still a matter of conjecture, with Brockville and Cornwall included among the places mentioned by the winter home of the regiment. Kingston is able to take care of the entire battalion, and has made an offer to the Government through Mayor Sutherland. It may be that the militia authorities will only give the one-half of the battalion, and send the other half to Brockville and Cornwall which have been persistent asking for troops for the winter.

Kingston Standard. The Royal School of Artillery class for officers and N.C.O.'s, which opens at Tete du Point barracks on Monday morning, will be a very large one, one hundred officers and ninety N.C.O.'s having been accepted for the class. The list includes lawyers, electrical and civil engineers, clerks, mechanics and astronomers. Included also are two well-known hockey players, Lieut. E. H. Jupp of the 71th Battery and J. B. Jupp of the 40th Sportsmen's Battery. The two brothers figured on the champion Orillia team last year.

Speaking of the License Commission yesterday, Mr. Flavelle stated that on Monday next regulations of a military nature would be determined. The Commission is not issuing any order regarding the soldiers and hotels, but is leaving the matter with the military commanders. "We will stand behind their orders," said Mr. Flavelle, "our authority being clause 13, and we will tell the hotelkeepers that these orders must be obeyed on penalty of the cancellation of their licenses."

Company Sergt.-Major Hartshorn and Company Quartermaster Sergeant Williams of A Company, 93rd Battalion, are in Toronto to-day.

A Suggestion for Efficient Economy

Throughout the Empire has gone the call for personal economy to meet the extraordinary demands of the war. Here is a timely suggestion to men who have been spending from $25.00 to $75.00 a year on barber shop shaves:

Invest five dollars in a

GILLETTE Safety Razor

and shave yourself at home.

The saving will not be limited to money—the time you'll gain will be even more important, for the morning shave with the Gillette need not take more than five minutes.

And the comfort rivals the economy. Though you never shaved yourself before, you'll have no trouble in getting a clean, cool, safe shave with the Gillette Safety Razor. No more waiting your turn in the chair—no more breaks in the morning's work—no more dependence on unknown barbers when travelling, for the Gillette works anywhere.

Truly, the man with a Gillette is an efficient economist. Get one yourself to-day. "Bulldog", "Aristocrat" or Standard Sets cost $5. —Pocket Editions $5. to $6.—Combination Sets $6.50 up. Your Hardware Dealer or Jeweler will show you an assortment. 62

Measure Carries In Newfoundland

Partial Returns Shows Majority in Favour of Its Four Districts Heard From

ST. JOHN'S Newfoundland, November 6 The results so far in the prohibition election indicates that the movement is likely to succeed, as the counts have been completed in four out of eighteen electoral districts into which the island is divided. Of the districts which have been counted Ferryland alone gave an adverse majority, 305 votes being cast for prohibition and 341 against.

Harbor Main gave a majority for prohibition, polling 593 for and 236 against, but Harbor Main lacked 650 votes of the 45 per cent. of the registered electors which the law requires shall be polled in every district to make prohibition operative.

Port de Garve polled 631 for prohibition and 136 against. That district had 60 votes above its quota.

Carbonear polled 590 for prohibition and 49 against. Carbonear had 17 above its quota.

St. John's West will complete counting about midnight and the figures indicate about 2,500 for prohibition, 250 against. This will give about 25 0/0above the quota. The Great Bays of Trinity Bonavista, Notre Dame, yet unreported, are considered dry prohibition strongholds and are expected to give large majorities to the measures. St. Johns East, Harbor Grace and Bay de Verde are expected to complete polling to-night.

AN OFFICER'S SAD DOWNFALL IN PARIS

When the war broke out Lieutenant Maschkowitsch was in Paris, and as it was useless for him to attempt to join his regiment he at once enlisted in the French army. In the battle of the Marne he distinguished himself and became a favourite with the French soldiers. He was slightly wounded a few months ago in a skirmish near Ypres, but soon recovered. Recently he received a forty-eight hour furlough and returned to Paris. It was the last his regiment saw of him.

In September he was arrested for desertion in a cafe in Paris, a wreck of his former self. Weeks of dissipation had sapped his vitality. He was tried by court-martial, and admitted that he had known a sober moment for a long time. He was found guilty, degraded, and sentenced to two years imprisonment. Great regret was expressed by the men of his regiment for his downfall, but in view of all the circumstances the verdict of the court-martial was considered entirely just.

Losses estimated from $90,000,000 to $99,000,000 are caused by hail in France each year.

DEATH OF MOTHER CAUSES DOWNFALL

Tragic Story Revealed in Dismissal of Lieut.-Col. R. H. Ryan

ON WAY TO MEET HER

LONDON, Nov. 6.—One of the most tragic stories of the war is revealed in the publication in the Official London Gazette of the order dismissing from the service Lieut.-Col. R. H. Ryan of the 6th Canadian Mounted Rifles.

A Veteran Soldier.

Lieut.-Col. Ryan was the holder of several war medals and was formerly an officer in the United States army. He had spent nine months in the trenches and was wounded three times. He obtained a short leave of absence to see his mother, who had planned to come from Canada determined to see her only son before he was wounded again, since she believed that a fourth wound would be fatal.

The mother sailed from New York and the lieutenant-colonel left the trenches in France and came to England to greet her. He prepared a royal welcome for his mother, whom he worshipped, and reserved apartments for her at the Savoy. The mother died aboard the steamer a day before it reached Liverpool and Lieut.-Col. Ryan, who met the vessel at Liverpool, received her body.

Went to Pieces.

After he had made arrangements for the burial of the body, Ryan, already a nervous wreck as a result of his harrowing experiences in the trenches, was completely demoralized by the new tragedy in his life. He came to London unmindful of everything and disregarded the order for his return to the front. The sequel came in the Gazette's announcement that he had been dismissed by court martial.

Another Version.

St. John, N.B. Nov. 6.—Col. Ryan's mother died before he left Canada. She died on a train on her way from Nova Scotia to Quebec to visit him. It was there he had prepared a great welcome for her. This was a few days before the 6th C.M.R. sailed for England.

MR. JAMES BENOR.

On Saturday last there passed away a well-known resident of Campbellford in the person of Mr. Jas. Benor. He had been ill of the past month, but had only been confined to his bed for three days prior to the death. He was born in Prince Edward County seventy-seven years ago but for 62 years he had been a resident of Campbellford, where he engaged in the lumber and contracting business. In his younger days he was actively interested in municipal affairs and served on the Council and Board of Education. He took a deep interest in the town's welfare and lived a quiet, unassuming Christian life such as commanded the respect of all. He was a veteran of '66.

KITCHENER GONE TO BALKANS

LONDON, Nov. 6.—Official admission was made here to-night that Lord Kitchener has gone to the Balkans. It was stated that "at the request of his colleagues, Lord Kitchener has left for a short visit to the Eastern theatre of war."

The official statement was considered tantamount to the declaration that Lord Kitchener is to take command of the Allies' operations in the new war theatre.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 6.—No. 2 Canadian stationary hospital, in charge of Col. Shillington, is being moved from its quarters at Le Toquet, France, to Serbia.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—A bomb was exploded to-day in a building next to the Italian Consulate.

C. Faraforni, Italian Consul General, was in his office at the time. He was unhurt, as was his attendants at the Consulate. Buildings in the neighbourhood were rocked by the explosion, and glass was shattered in the Consulate.

Police headquarters are not far from the scene, and the police, headed by Commissioner Woods, were quickly on the spot. A number of Italian reservists were on the street in front of the Consulate, and all of them were thrown to the pavement. Except for bruises, however, they escaped injury.

One arrest was made, the man an Italian. He was taken to head quarters, charged with being implicated in causing the explosion.

The Russians Capture 10,000 Germans in Recent Attacks

Serbian Capital is Under Violent Bombardment From Heights North-east of Nish

Germans Capture Paracin While Bulgars Renew Advance on the Capital—All Attacks by Infantry Have Been Repulsed

LONDONO, Nov. 8.—Field Marshal von Mackensen Friday captured Paracin, on the Belgrade-Nish railroad and the point from which the branch to Zajecar, along which the Bulgarians are advancing, leaves the main Orient line.

Further south the Bulgarians continued their violent bombardment of the Nish fortifications from the heights six to eight miles northeast of the city. The army operating in the Nisava Valley, which was severely handled by the Serbians and forced back to Bela Palanka early in the week, has recovered its pace, and in the last reports was resuming its march down the river.

London observers believe Nish is doomed and that its capture is imminent. But thus far the Serb armies have eluded all the traps set for them and in the hills in the central part of their country are maintaining a spirited defence.

It is only at the southern end of the battle front that the Bulgars are meeting with any reverses. There' according to reports, the British are co-operating with the French, but, as heretofore, these reports are unofficial and fragmentary and it cannot be said authoritatively whether the British are in touch with their new enemy.

If the Bulgar-Teuton tide is turned the best opinion here is that it will be some weeks hence, involving a period of uncertainty such as preceded the stand before Paris and on the Yser. But giving to the Entente Powers a month's time, it is argued, they can throw three hundred thousand, and perhaps five hundred thousand men into Serbia, not including Russians, and with such a force not only dispute the advance of the Central Powers but contest Bulgaria's occupation of Serbian Macedonia.

CAPTURE TOWN NEAR NISH.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—Bulgarian artillery violent bombarded the advanced forts of Nish, on the Nishava River, on Wednesday, says a Salonika despatch to the Matin, filed Thursday. They captured Nish-Kavola, a small town two hours' march northeast of Nish.

Reports indicate that determined resistance is still being offered to the Bulgarian forces which invaded the southern part of the country. The Havas correspondent at Salonika, telegraphing under Thursday's date, says the Serbians are holding out firmly in the Babuna Pass and that the Bulgarians are suffering serious losses in the fighting there.

The Serbian city of Monastir, in the southwest corner of the country, near the Greek border, is said by the correspondent to be safe for the present, as is Prilep, twenty-five miles northeast of Monastir.

The Bulgarians bombarded the French positions at Krivolak on Wednesday, but without tangible results.

Telegraphic communication is still being maintained for the exchange of official messages between Salonika and Monastir and Salonika and Nish.

RUSSIA HAS CALLED ALL MEN IN SIBERIA

Vladivostok Has Lost Quarter of Its Population and Business Is Much Hampered

VLADIVOSTOK, Nov. 8.—Before the great European war began Vladivostok had more than 100,000 inhabitants. To-day its population is less than 75,000, so heavy have been the calls of the Russian army upon the men of Eastern Siberia.

The latest summons will take 10,000 from Vladivostok alone. These new recruits are being sent away at the rate of 1,000 a day. Many of them are badly needed in Vladivostok to help take care of the war supplies, which are glutting the port. But the call of the army is unqualified. Trained and untrained men alike of military age, men of all classes, are being sent away daily to interior Siberia, where they will go into training, replacing others now ready to go to the front.

Russia has such a great number of men that all of them are not compelled to undergo military training. Exceptions were made in the case of an only son in a family as well as under other special conditions, but now all males in Siberia are called out. More than 100 were taken by this call from a single firm in Vladivostok. Many of the American concerns with others here have lost virtually their entire Russian office force.

Retail and wholesale establishments are such reduced forces that through general agreement all the larger places of business close at the lunch hour, not having men enough left to arrange orders at mealtime. Women are being trained for positions for which they are fitted, preference being given to wives of men called to the front.

Koreans and Chinese are coming in to Vladivostok to replace dock labourers called to the war. Virtually all the heavy work on the docks is now being done by them, but they are so unskilled that there is much uneasiness as to the effect the removal of the better trained Russians will have on the handling of war supplies.

The Russian Government was slow to call out reserves in Siberia. Men are few and much needed in this new country. The Government has expended great sums in encouraging emigration to Siberia and hesitates to take the cream of the colony's manhood back to the battle line. But its need evidently became so great that it was necessary to claim Siberian men. The ahead guard, numbering over 150,000, was called out shortly after the regular army was ordered back to Russia. Three more calls were made, and it is expected another soon to come, which will claim all men in Siberia up to forty-two years old.

Almost all big businesses have entered Lag with their humblest employees. Apparently no exception is made in the enforcement of service. Every night scores o'clock express train starts for the east. Hours before train time the relatives and friends of departing reservists begin to gather at the Trans-Siberian railway station, which lies on the waterfront in the very heart of the city. Five of the new soldiers have uniforms. They carry rolls of bedding, boxes and carpet bags such as one sees immigrants lugging from the docks in New York.

There is little jubilation among the departing soldiers. The war has dragged on so long that it has become a nightmare to the families of the men liable to service, and there are so many women in black now in Vladivostok that duty at the front is regarded as almost certain death. A band plays each night as the [illegible] train leaves the station, but its music cannot drown the audible grief of the women and children, who clog pitifully to the departing soldiers and follow the train until its speed becomes so great that they cannot keep pace with it.

The reservists are transported in ordinary freight cars. Each of the cars has a stove in the middle and board benches and bunks at the ends. A single candle in a lantern lights every car. The Russian cars are small, and only forty men can be crowded into each. The troop train ordinarily consists of about twenty-five freight cars and one passenger coach for the officers.

Enthusiasm is little greater among officers than among privates, apparently. Each night officers' families and friends throng the station and other groups have farewell dinners in the cafes. Many of the women of all ages in these parties drink unconcealed, and the leave taking becomes a repetition of the old custom shown to be in vogue in first class women

Gordon Craig

Soldier of Fortune —— by Randall Parrish

Copyright, 1912, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

"But what have I to do with it" this?" I questioned, beginning to have a faint glimmer of the truth.

"Well, here was a peculiar situation. The administrators are all old personal friends of the testator, anxious to have the estate retained in the family. Some one must impersonate Philip Henley long enough to permit the settlement of the estate."

I rose to my feet indignantly.

"And you thought I would consent—would be a party to this fraud?"

"Now, wait Craig," as calmly as ever. "This is nothing to be ashamed of nor, so far as I can see as a lawyer, does it involve danger. It will make a man of Henley, reunite him with his wife if she still lives and give him standing in the world. We are merely helping the boy to retain what is rightfully his. Don't throw this chance away hastily. Ten thousand dollars is pretty good pay for a couple of months' work."

I sank back into my chair undecided, yet caught by the glitter of the promise. Why not? Surely it would do no harm, and if the administrators were satisfied, what cause had I to object?

"But—but can that be done?" I asked hesitatingly.

"Easily," Vail assured. "Young Henley has been away five years, even before that he was absent at school so much as to be practically unknown except to the older servants. These have all been discharged and scattered. The wife is entirely unknown there. Any one, bearing ever so slight a resemblance, would pass muster. All you need do is read the father's letters over, post yourself on a few details and take possession. We will attend to all legal matters."

"Then you consider that I resemble Henley?"

"No," coolly, "not in any remarkable manner, but sufficient for our purpose—age, size, general appearance answer very well; nose, eyes and hair are alike and general contour of the face is similar. There is not likely to be any close scrutiny. Here is young Henley's photograph."

He picked it up from among the papers and handed it over to me. There was a resemblance, recognizable now that my attention had been called to it, certain features being remarkably similar.

I do not know how others might have looked upon such a proposition as this, but it never occurred to me at the time to doubt the honesty of Vail's statement, nor could I perceive any great wrong in the action so calmly proposed. Vail, watching the expression of my face in the light, seemed to divine my thoughts.

"Evidently you are recovering your good sense," he remarked easily. "You will act, I take it?"

"Yes," the word was out almost before I was aware of speaking.

"Sensible decision, my man," his face lighting up. "Now, there is no need of our meeting again or being seen together. Neale, hand Craig your copy of articles of administration and of the will."

I took these and read them over carefully, yet without fully comprehending the legal phraseology. They were apparently genuine, and I gathered from them that the facts were exactly as stated. Peter B. Neale of Birmingham was named one of the administrators.

"Here is a small packet of letters from Judge Henley to his son," Vail said in a businesslike way, "which you had better read and so familiarize yourself with local names and conditions. I have also drawn up and had typed a brief sketch of young Henley's life, which will aid you in playing the part. You will need a new outfit of clothes, I presume? If you will sign this paper I will hand you a liberal advance."

I read it over slowly, but it appeared innocent enough. Of course they would require some guarantee that my work would be performed. Yet certain questions arose to my mind.

"As soon as the property is legally in my possession I am to deed it over to you?"

"Certainly. I represent the administrators and the rightful heir."

"That will involve forgery on my part."

"Technically, yes, but under legal advice, my dear boy, and agreement of the officials interested in proper settlement of the estate. There is no danger whatever."

I was not assured as to this, and yet the man's easy manner and smooth speech served to ease my conscience.

"And the $10,000?" I asked.

"A thousand will be handed you tonight. The remainder may be retained at the final settlement, together with the compensation of the woman. You make your own terms with her. So you see you cannot lose. Sign here."

"I had forgotten the woman. Is she necessary?"

"It will be better to have one, as they know down there young Henley was lately married. Any good looker with an easy conscience will do. You could coach her on the train."

"But I don't know a young woman in town," I admitted soberly, "except my landlady's daughter, and she's the limit."

Vail and Neale both laughed.

"You're slow, Craig," the former said good humoredly. "Get on your new clothes and look around. There's plenty would jump at the chance."

"That's altogether out of my line," I averred. "I'd rather go alone."

"Well, we'll not war over that. You can leave your wife north if you wish. I tell you what you do. Think it over and call me up by phone about 3 o'clock tomorrow. Here's the number. If you decide on taking a woman along I know one who will answer and will have her at the train."

"I am to leave, then, tomorrow night?"

"Yes, over the Eastern Illinois at 8.10. Sign here."

I was not hypnotized or unduly controlled. My mind seemed clear, but I yielded without a word and wrote my name at the bottom of the sheet. Vail blotted it carefully, folded the paper and placed it in a drawer of the table. Then he handed me two bills.

"There is $1,000 there, Craig, and I will send you a typewritten memoranda of instructions covering all points in the game. Where can I be sure of finding you at 9 o'clock tomorrow?"

"At 427 Green street."

I Took These and Read Them Over Carefully.

"All right; as soon as you read those instructions call me up by phone and let me know what you have done regarding a woman and ask any questions you may desire. That will be all now. Neale, you might show Craig the way out."

He put out his arm and we shook hands, although he did not arise from the chair. Neale stepped into the hall and I followed him. The entry way was in darkness and the man went to the side door without switching on the light.

"By the way, it will be as well for you to go out cautiously and not be seen. We want to play safe, you know," said he.

The door opened and closed, leaving me outside.

CHAPTER II.

The Woman.

IT was then that the power of thought returned to me. However glibly those two conspirators might gild over the affair it nevertheless was a criminal matter to which I had blindly committed myself. However, I had no thought of withdrawal from the contract, for, while I saw the danger involved and realized the illegality, yet I failed utterly to perceive any real evil. I did not doubt the truth of all that had been told me and was willing to assume the risk. The $10,000 would be "easy money."

Not a glimmer of light appeared from within the house I had just left, and I drew my hat down over my eyes and stared about, listening. The hour could not be far from midnight, the night dark, the air heavy with mist.

The light fell slantingly across the stone steps in front and revealed a narrow opening through the brick coping beyond. I crept cautiously forward until I crouched behind the brick coping. There was not a disturbing sound, and I straightened up, essaying the first step forth into the full gleam of the light. Like some confronting ghost, scarcely more real than a phantom of imagination, I came face to face with a woman.

She had turned swiftly into the narrow gateway leading through the brick coping, hurrying silently as if pursued, her foot barely planted upon the step when we met. I stopped, speechless, rigid, my outstretched hand gripping the rail, but the woman drew hastily back, her lips parted in a sudden sob of surprise, one hand flung out as if in self protection. It was instantaneous. Yet before either could move otherwise or utter a word of explanation a heavy footfall crunched along the walk, and a burly police officer, his star gleaming ominously in the dull light, rounded the corner a dozen feet away.

"Here, now, an' what are ye oop too, me fine buck?" he questioned roughly, swinging me about into the light. "Give an account o' yerself moighty quick 'er I'll run ye in."

The girl, still staring blankly at me, must have perceived how I instinctively shrank back, my lips moving in an impotent effort at speech. Some sudden impulse changed her fright into sympathy. She started forward just a step.

"Nothing in the least wrong, officer," her voice trembling slightly, yet sounding clearly distinct. "He—he was merely accompanying me home from a dance."

"What dance?"

"Over—over there on Forty-third street."

"An' do yer live here?" the gruff tone still vibrant with suspicion. "Yer if ye do yer're sure a new gurl," and he peered at her shadowed face in the dim light. She drew in her breath sharply.

"No," her voice steadying, now she realized she must carry out the deception; "my place is three blocks yet, around the next corner."

"That's a pretty thin story, miss. Then what was the two ov yer doin' in here?"

"I had my foot on the step tying my shoe," she explained simply. "You don't arrest people for that, do you?"

It was plain enough the officer was puzzled, yet he reluctantly released his grip on my arm.

"It's half O'i belave yer stringin' me roight now," he announced doubtfully, "but O'i'll give yer ther benefit ov the doubt. Don't let me run across yer along this beat agin ternight. Go on, now!"

I felt her hand touch my sleeve timidly and caught a swift glimpse of her eyes. We must carry out the deception now and go away together. Without venturing to speak or glance around we walked forward into the enveloping mist. Her fingers, for appearances' sake, barely touched the rough cloth of my sleeve. All this had occurred so swiftly, so suddenly, that I was yet bewildered, unable to decide on a course of action. The girl, I noticed, was breathing heavily from excitement, her eyes cast down upon the wet pavement. Once, beneath the glow of the lamp at the first corner, I ventured to glance slyly aside at her in curiosity, mentally photographing the clear outline of her features, the strands of light brown hair straggling rebelliously from beneath the wide brim of the hat. There was more than a mere hint of character about that resolute mouth, the white contour of cheek.

At the second street intersection she turned east, advancing toward where passing trolley cars promised some life and activity even at that late hour. Impulsively she stopped and faced me, her hands clasped.

"I—I—please—I will say good night now," she said, endeavoring to speak firmly, yet with no uplifting of the eyes.

Hesitatingly I stood still, feeling strangely embarrassed by this sudden curt dismissal.

"Do—do you mean you wish me to leave you alone on the street at this hour?" I questioned uneasily. "At least permit me to see you home safely. I will not hurt you or speak a word."

There was a tone of earnestness in my plea, but she only shook her head decisively, lips pressed close together.

"I—I am not afraid of—of you," she returned at last doubtfully. "It is not that, but—but really I cannot permit you to accompany me farther."

"Only to the place where you said you lived," I urged eagerly. "I promise not even to take note of the number and will never bother you any more."

Her fine eyes hardened, then sank slowly before mine.

"That—that was a lie also," she acknowledged, half defiantly. "I—I do not live about here."

I stared at her in sudden doubt, yet remained loyal to my first impression.

"All the greater reason, then, for not leaving you here alone."

She laughed, a faint tinge of bitterness in the sound.

"Surely you cannot imagine I would feel any safer in company with a burglar?" she asked sharply.

My face flushed. I could not explain. It would require too long, and she would in all probability refuse to believe the story. Besides, what difference could it make? She had as much to explain as I; no more reason to suspect me than I had her. Let us meet, then, on common ground.

"If I grant your hasty guess to be partially correct," I returned finally, my voice deepening with earnestness, "and confess I was avoiding observation—what then? Can you not also believe me a man capable of treating you honorably?"

"Yes," she confessed reluctantly enough. "I—I believe I can."

"Then yield me the benefit of such charity of judgment," I went on. "At least give me an opportunity to exhibit my gratitude."

She remained silent, motionless.

"Why not? Is it because you have no confidence in me?" I insisted.

She put out one hand, grasping the iron rail of a fence, and I thought I could see her form tremble.

"Oh, no! It—it is not that exactly," she explained brokenly. "I believe I—I might trust you, but—but of course I do not know. I think you—you mean well. Your words sound honest, and your—your face inspires confidence. Only I have found so much deceit, so much cruelty and heartlessness in the world I have become afraid of every one. But I—I simply cannot let you go with me. Oh, please don't urge it!"

I leaned forward, my face full of sympathy, my voice low and earnest.

"You saved me from arrest, and I'll not leave you alone here in the street at this hour of the night."

She looked at me, her eyes wide open, shining like stars, her face picturing perplexity not unmixed with fear.

"I—I have no place to go!" she sobbed.

I drew in my breath sharply, my lips set in a straight line. Already had I half suspicioned this truth, and yet there was that about the girl—her manner, her words, even her dress—which would not permit me to class her among the homeless.

"My God, girl! And—and I actually believe you are hungry!"

Her eyes uplifted to my face dumb with agony, her hand grasp upon the rail tightening. Then she pitifully endeavored to smile.

"I—I am afraid I am, just a little."

I straightened up, with shoulders flung back. It was my time to act.

"Then that settles it. You are coming with me. There is a respectable all night place over there on Desmet street. I ate there once a week ago. We'll go together."

She drew back, clinging helplessly to the rail, her eyes on my face.

"Oh, you must not. I"—

My hand touched her arm.

"Yes, but I shall," I insisted almost sternly.

Feeling my determination she made no further resistance, and I half supported her as we moved slowly forward through the mist, her face turned away, her arm trembling beneath the firm clasp of my fingers. As we advanced I became conscious that my own position was an awkward one. I had no money of my own with me—not a cent other than those two $500 bills handed me by Vail. The uselessness of attempting to pass one of these was apparent. It would be better to plead lack of cash and put up some security if the man in charge refused credit. At whatever cost the girl must have food.

Doctor Said Only Hope Was In An Operation

Was Skeptical When He Began the Use of Dr. Chase's Ointment—Relief Came Quickly

Here is a plain, honest statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Ointment. Between the lines of this letter you can read the gratitude which its writer feels. One does not suffer from annoying, distressing piles for ten years without appreciating a cure when it is obtained.

Almost every mail brings the report of someone who has been cured of piles by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Such statements are never used without the permission of the writer, and until we are satisfied that the cure is genuine and the writer a person of responsibility.

You may believe in operations for piles, and think there is no other cure. Write to Mr. Ingles, enclosing stamp, and he will gladly verify his statement. He will tell you that the pain, the expense, the risk of an operation are quite unnecessary. That relief and cure come with the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Ernest W. Ingles, Penticton, B.C., writes: "I suffered from piles for ten years, and though I tried all kinds of ointments and injections I really had no permanent relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. When I began this treatment I had absolutely no faith in it, for I had been examined by a well-known physician in Vancouver, and he said that an operation was the only thing that would benefit me. It was surprising the relief I obtained from the very first box, and now, after using four boxes, I am practically cured. My case was so exceptionally bad that I received no relief day or night, and for this reason the results are wonderful."

You can obtain Dr. Chase's Ointment from any dealer at 60 cents a box. If you do not want to risk this much send a two-cent stamp to pay postage, and mention this paper, and we shall send you a sample box free. We are so certain that any sufferer from piles will obtain relief by using this ointment that we do not hesitate to make you this offer. Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

GOD'S PERFECT POISE OF JUSTICE AND LOVE

Mercy the Outward Expression of Love.

Love's Victory in God's Great Plan of the Ages—Why God Permitted Man's Fall—Experience With God's Justice First—Man's Six Thousand Years of Schooling a Most Valuable Training—How One Redeemer Could Purchase a Race—No Human Mind Could Have Conceived So Wonderful a Plan—God's Love Soon to Be Revealed to the Whole World.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publiction.]

New York City Nov. 7.—Pastor Russell delivered a forceful address at the New York City Temple to-day, W. 63rd St., near Broadway. His text was, "Mercy rejoiceth against Judgment." He spoke as follows:

Our text signifies that Love has gained a victory over Justice; for Mercy is merely an outward expression of Love. Let us reason as to the way in which Divine Mercy, or Love, gains the victory over Divine Justice. In so doing, I believe that we shall be learning something as to our proper attitude; for we should copy God's character. We should study His methods, His ways, that we may have Heavenly wisdom. When, therefore, we see how God's Love gains the victory over His Justice, we shall see how it should be with us, in order that we may become like Him.

In considering Divine Love and Divine Justice, we are to remember that God is perfect in all His attributes. Both His Justice and His Love are perfect. But inasmuch as these are inherent, invisible qualities of the Divine Nature, we could not study them unless they were manifested. Thus far they have been manifested only to a faithful few. It is the manifestation of these qualities that especially interests us. Let us note how these attributes manifest themselves, that we may thus learn valuable lessons.

Justice the Foundation of God's Throne.

Undoubtedly there is no lesson that the people of God need to learn more than this particular one of the relationship of justice to love, in order to know how to exercise these qualities as God exercises them, and yet with some variations; for He has some rights which we do not possess. We see that God's Love operated in the very beginning, when He created His Son to be His Logos. His Love was afterwards seen in his creation of angels and men, in his own image. Then we see that the fall of our race brought into operation Divine Justice; for it was Justice which decreed that man, because of his disobedience, should not live.

"Dying, thou shalt die," was the fiat of Divine Justice. (Genesis 2: 17.) When Justice decreed that death must result from transgression, Divine Love agreed that the sentence was altogether proper, not only because it is right for God to be just and in harmony with His own Law, but also because it would not be good for man to live everlastingly in a fallen condition.

If God had permitted man to live on in imperfection, we can scarcely imagine the tremendous power he would have had by this time. As it is, we see that some of our race in three score and ten years are able to cultivate such qualities of mind and character as to give them ascendancy over their fellows; and were they allowed to live on indefinitely in sin, they would undoubtedly bring all others into captivity to themselves. Except man should exercise the attributes of his character in harmony with the Divine character, he should not be permitted to live, because of the great injury which he would do to others. Thus, in the Divine arrangement, we see Love agreeing with Justice that sinful man should die.

Why God Permitted Sin.

Again, when our race came under the death sentence, God might have cut us off more quickly than He did had He not in mind the very Plan of which we are now learning—the Divine Plan of the Ages. (Ephesians 3:11, Diaglott.) Man was to learn certain lessons during the present life, in order that he might profit by them in the future life. We see, then, that God has arranged a very reasonable and loving way in dealing with the sinner race. In His wonderful Purpose He planned to redeem man from this death condition, and to restore the race in due time.

All the experiences of the present life will have a bearing upon the members of the fallen race during the period of their restoration, in the incoming Age. God planned that mankind should have experiences of pain and death, thus to learn the needful lessons. For six thousand years the world has been getting its education along the lines of sin—lessons as to what a terrible thing sin is, how hard it is to control, how ruinous are its effects, how hardening of the heart, and that final death will inevitably result from its continued practise. Thus twenty billions of our race have had a great schooling time during the past six thousand years.

Love Plans Man's Redemption.

As we study the matter, we can see great wisdom in God's course. Love was not indifferent, though for a time God could not show man his interest. Love had beforehand arranged a Plan whereby redemption would come, whereby Love would triumph over Justice. In God's due time a purchase-price for man would be given. Then, after Justice should reign for six thousand years, during which the world would learn its needed lessons with respect to the heinousness of sin in all its manifold forms, redeeming Love should become restoring Love, calling mankind forth from the tomb, during the thousand years' Reign of the One who purchased them.

So ultimately, when death and hell (the grave) shall have delivered up all that are in them, and when the curse of death shall be no more, Love will have triumphed over Justice. Thus we read, "O Death, where is thy sting? O Grave, where is thy victory?" "Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ!"—1 Corinthians 15: 55, 57.

This is one of the most wonderful things that we see in the Bible—the more wonderful as we understand it the more. God always maintains His Justice, and He always maintains His Love; and we are blessed by both. Justice, having triumphed over the world for six thousand years, has brought our race down to Sheol, Hades—the tomb. Love, in the meantime, began to operate, though in harmony with Justice; and it has given the great sacrifice of Jesus, and has arranged that at the time of the Second Advent of Christ, and through His Reign of a thousand years, He shall awaken all humanity from the sleep of death.

How One Could Purchase a Race.

We can thus see in the Bible what a great equalization, or balance, God has arranged. Since twenty thousand millions of souls have sinned, it would, in any other way than God's way, have required twenty thousand million redeemers. But when we see how God is operating, we wonder at His arrangement. He provided that only one man should be condemned to death, and that through this one man condemnation should come upon all men while still in his loins. Thus one man could pay the penalty for all. "For since by man [Adam] came death, by man [Jesus] comes the resurrection of the dead." (1 Corinthians 15: 21.) One man was a sinner; One man was the Redeemer.

Beautiful! We never heard of anything like this except in God's Plan. Think of a great Plan, covering six thousand years, in which the salvation of twenty billions of human creatures is involved, and yet all so easily and perfectly poised! Justice will never be cheated out of its dues; yet Love gains the victory and provides the way out of the difficulty, and does this at the expense of the One through whom the whole Plan is consummated—our blessed Lord Jesus.

The penalty resting upon mankind was met by the sacrifice of Jesus' life. But is that not unjust? Oh no! The Bible assures us that God stated the proposition beforehand to the Son, and that the Son was in full agreement with it—not the Man Jesus, but the Logos, the Word, the Messiah—Michael, the Godlike One. The proposition was made to Him that by the purchase of the whole race of man through His sacrifice He might obtain the honor and glory of Messiah—the opportunity of delivering and blessing the thousands of millions of humanity who had been condemned to death in Adam. And then, what more? Oh, much more!—that He should be supremely exalted, even to the Divine nature, for all eternity—far above angels, principalities, powers, and every name that is named. (Philippians 2:3-11.) All this is the great triumph of Love over Justice. While Justice remains forever inviolate, yet Love is the victor. Mercy rejoiceth against Judgment—Justice.

God's Wonderful Plan of the Ages.

When we see the Bible teaching concerning the Divine Plan, it gives us a confidence in the Bible that we can get from no other quarter. It is the study of the Bible from the outside, by those who try to tear it into shreds, and the employment of their brains against the Bible, that proves the professors of our day the worst of all times. Only when we perceive from the inside can we see the strength of the Bible. No human mind ever originated such a Plan. It is surely Divine, surely Biblical. We did not discover it, but it was shown to the faithful "in due time."

We know that this great Plan is of God; and the Book that contains such a wonderful Message is surely the Word of God. It must be that those "holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." The Spirit of God indited this wonderful Message. The many men, in various times and places, who uttered the words did not know what they meant. The understanding was not then due. But their words constitute a harmonious whole, and "were written for our instruction, upon whom the ends of the ages have come."—1 Peter 1:10-12; 1 Corinthians 10:11; Romans 15:4.

Nor could we understand their words until we received the begetting of the Holy Spirit with its consequent enlightenment. This brought these things to our attention in God's due time, and enabled us to understand their meaning. So the Apostle Paul writes to some, "After that ye were illuminated, ye endured." (Heb. 10: 32, 33.) We now understand what it means to be illuminated. The illumination is the work of the Holy Spirit, which we received at the time of our consecration unto death. This illumination of the Church had its beginning at Pentecost. Up to that time the Spirit had not been given.—John 7:39.

The Church is a special class, called out in advance of the world. The early Church had to wait until Jesus had finished His sacrifice for sin, had ascended up on High as the great High Priest, to appear in the presence of God for us (the Church, not yet for the world), to sprinkle the blood of His sacrifice upon the Mercy Seat on our behlf, and had become the Advocate of those who would follow in His steps. (Hebrews 9:24.) Having made satisfaction for the sins of the consecrated, He imputed His own merit to them, thereby making them acceptable to the Father. Not until then could they receive the begetting of the Holy Spirit. Ever since that time the Holy Spirit has been with the Church, begetting each one who came into this class.

With this begetting comes the illumination. We are then sons of God. Not only does this illumination enable us to understand things previously hidden from our eyes, but thereafter all the Word of God becomes food to us, that thereby we may grow in grace, in knowledge, in justice, in love, in all qualities of the Divine character, that thus we may become more like our Father who is in Heaven.

Deliverance of the World Now Due.

Having, then, seen how Divine Justice has operated up till now for the future blessing of mankind, we look further, and see that Divine Mercy is now about to gain a great victory for the whole world. As soon as the Church is glorified, the merit of the Redeemer is to be applied for all the human race. But it will require the entire thousand years of Messiah's Reign before Mercy will have fully triumphed over Justice. We now perceive what Love will be doing for the world throughout those thousand years. It will be awakening mankind from death and lifting them up from degradation to holiness and life.

This will all come through the Lord Jesus Christ, who will be God's Agent, the Agent of Justice and of Love. The faithful Church will be associated with Him in all His Kingdom, glory, and honor. In order that we may be of this class, not only must we be begotten by the Spirit of God, but we must also manifest the fruits of that Spirit, we must be quickened by it. Then in the First Resurrection we shall be born of the Spirit and shall share with our Lord this work of love for all mankind, and shall also share His glory forever. At the conclusion of the Millennial Reign this glorious work of Divine Love will have been accomplished. Through all the outworkings of this wonderful Plan, the principles of absolute Justice and absolute Love will be observed, operating in full harmony.

In what manner will God's Justice operate during the next Age toward mankind? may be asked. Some have difficulty in seeing how the world in the future will have their sins forgiven. Will God not hold against the world something for wrongs committed in this life? Will the murderer have the same opportunity as those who have been more noble in their lives? How will Justice then be represented?

We believe that God's dealings will be in full harmony with Justice; that while Love will be especially operative or manifest during the Millennial Age, yet Justice will never be violated. Will mankind in the future, then, be punished for their sins in the present life? Yes, and no. They will not be punished in the sense of being held legally accountable for sins of the past; for this would nullify the work which Christ accomplished in His death in providing satisfaction for Adamic sin. Christ having made satisfaction for the sins of believers, this class are no longer legally responsible for them. The same principle will operate with the world in the future.

How Justice Operates.

For the present we will consider the Church of Christ. Suppose one had lived in such a way as to have gotten himself into a bad condition of body, mind, and morals. These things will be more or less as a penalty upon him after he has become a Christian. Although God has forgiven his sins and cleansed him from all unrighteousness, nevertheless such a one will have in his body or in his mind certain natural penalties resulting from his previous sinful course. If he had lived a sinful life for many years, the evil would be so much the more deeply entrenched; and he will have all the greater fight to overcome these deeply imbedded tendencies to sin. One who has lived a conscientious, moral life will have just that much less to overcome.

If through evil thoughts or evil deeds the mind of that person has become poisoned, he may have to battle all his life against the seeds of sin, not in the way of direct punishment for his wrong-doing, but through natural law; for the New Creature is to be developed while tabernacling in the flesh wherein the evil seeds have been sown. It is like a piece of land which has long been given over to weeds, in which case the roots would have become deeply entrenched in the soil. This land may afterward be changed into a wheat-field; but we know from experience that the weeds will be there also, and that the wheat will not flourish so readily, because of this fact.

It is even so with our hearts and our bodies. After we have given them to the Lord the fleshly tendencies are still there. God has accepted us as New Creatures; His grace has covered our sins; and they are no longer chargeable to us. But whoever has had a larger planting of sin in his former life may have to his dying day a great battle against these poisonous weeds; and that will be a proper and natural punishment for his past course. So it will be in the future. The world will get retribution for their sins, just as we do for ours, and it will take many years to get entirely free from the effects of sin.

Stomach Was Bad.

Could Eat Hardly Anything.

When the stomach gets out of order the whole system seems to become affected in one way or an other. The breath becomes foul, the tongue furred, the appetite becomes disturbed, nausea and vomiting occur, there is a rising and souring of food caused by the acidity of the stomach, and the stomach and bowels become distended causing flatulency. Unless these symptoms are met with immediately, dyspepsia or some other serious trouble is liable to follow, as a consequence.

That grand old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, has been on the market for the past forty years, and we claim, without any fear of contradiction, that there is not another medicine on the market to-day that can compare with it for the cure of all disturbances of the stomach.

Miss Lillian E. Phillips, Plumwescop, N.B., writes: "My stomach was so bad I was in pain and misery. I could eat hardly anything. I had been treated by skillful doctors for it, but they did me no good. I was giving up in despair when I happened to hear of Burdock Blood Bitters. You can't think how fast it helped me, for I had only taken two bottles before I was better. I will recommend your medicine very highly to all my friends and sufferers."

Exciting Career Ends in Toronto Rooming House

Soldier of Fortune Suicides---Stripped of His Wealth by Villa and Shot When He Resisted

RECOVERED BENTON

TORONTO, Nov. 6.—Two years ago the owner of a 20,000-acre ranch in Mexico and rated as a millionaire, Capt. Jas. Thorntown was found dead from knife wounds, evidently self-inflicted, in his heart and neck in a rooming house at 134 Duchess St., Toronto.

When General Villa started his revolution in Mexico two years ago Thorntown's ranch was looted and 100 head of cattle driven off by the revolutionists. The loss of money, property, and stock was estimated at $750,000. Thorntown had been a frequent visitor in Toronto during the summer, ostensibly for the purpose of securing another ranch. On his last trip from the United States he registered at an east end hotel. He left his hotel and secured a room in the Duchess Street house from Mrs Annie Doley. He brought his baggage with him and immediately retired to the room. Becoming suspicious, Mrs. Doley forced the door about 9 o'clock and Thorntown was discovered lying in bed with a pearl handled knife clasped in his hand.

Had Exciting Career.

Born in New York City fifty years ago, Captain Thorntown had an intensely interesting and exciting career. He was taken West by his parents when four years old. He grew up on the Star ranch in Texas and when 20 years old was placed in charge of it. He first became prominent in the border States when he led a force of fifty cowboys into battle against 300 Mexicans, who had crossed the border to rob the ranch. Thirty Mexicans and three cowboys were wounded as a result of the battle. The next heard of the youth was when he was appointed captain in the Texas Rangers at the age of 21. His success in keeping order on the border reached the ears of President Porfirio Diaz and Thorntown was placed in charge of the president's cattle and ranches. He acted as purchasing agent to Germany four years ago for the Mexican Government.

Recovered Benton's Body.

Ten years ago Thorntown purchased a 30,000-acre ranch sixty miles from Mexico City. This he conducted until it was looted by Villa's guerrillas. In the fighting that followed Thorntown was left for dead. He carried the scars of this fight to his death. As soon as he recovered he went back into Mexico with a party of Texas Rangers and recovered the body of George Benton, the Englishman supposed to have been murdered by Villa's officers, and whose death threatened for a time to cause international complications. A few months later Thorntown went back again into the troubled country to rescue a number of women who were held prisoners. This time he was captured by the Mexicans and sentenced to death. He escaped, so it is related, because of his membership with the Mason order. At the time of his death he held the title to the ranch.

Capt. Thorntown was a striking figure. He stood over six feet in height and weighed 215 pounds. He was not destitute, for a tie-pin and ring found on him were valued at $1,500. In his personal effects were letters from the National Republican Committee at Washington and one from S. Hart, of the Utica Rotary Club, asking him to address a golf club in that city.

Thorntown told a remarkable story of his visit to Germany four years ago. The friend of a German officer, he was shown when at Hamburg, the fortifications of the city. With the officer he was taken into a concrete trench built near the city. This underground affair was covered with steel doors and covered with earth. It was electric-lighted and the two men rode through it on horseback. The entire distance covered was 16 miles.

Thorntown was unmarried and as far as could be learned he had no relatives. An inquest will be opened at the Morgue.

GERMANS' ELABORATE DEFENCES IN BELGIUM

ROTTERDAM, Nov. 6.—The German military leaders have recently been giving close attention to the work of constructing a defence line in Eastern Belgium.

The Scheldt forms a great support for this line, a fact which indicates the distance to which the Germans expect to retreat if the move is forced on them. Many bridges are being thrown over the river, and around Antwerp there is being constructed a huge system of defences. There are trenches on both sides of the river. A bridge has been built at Dendermonde (sixteen miles east of Ghent), and now one is being constructed to the north of the city at a point where the Germans long since laid down concrete beds.

Certain roads in the neighbourhood of Ghent and Thielt have been robbed of stone paving in order to repair the main communication roads. This work goes on increasingly, and there are daily reports of men taken forcibly from various towns and villages to carry on work intended for the further tightening of the hold of the hated invader.

Sentences for refusal to comply continue to be passed all over the country. At Mons a group of ninety men received sentences ranging from two months to five years.

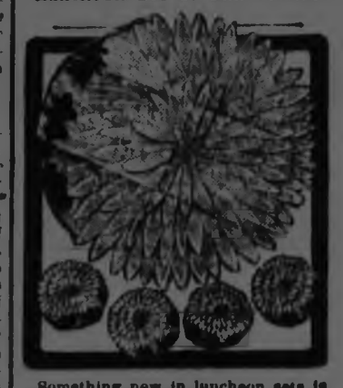
Luncheon Set of Silk Muslin



Something new in luncheon sets is made of stiff white silk muslin, very small gilt cord and white and green water color paints. It consists of a centerpiece and twelve doilies to match and is made in a conventional lzed chrysanthemum design. The doilies are small replicas of the centerpiece.

A large circle is cut from the muslin for the centerpiece and a few French knots, of dark yellow embroidery silk, are worked in the center to represent the stamens. Three rows of petals are outlined on the centerpiece with white paint and the tiny gilt cord is sewed with yellow silk thread along the outline of each petal. The petals are crowded a little at one side to allow three light green leaves to be painted in. A little white paint is brushed in at the point of each petal and the muslin about the edge trimmed away from them.

The doilies are made in the same way but on a smaller scale.

NEWSPAPER CORRESPONDENTS SEE WAR IN THE TRENTINO

AUSTRIAN RULE VANISHING

Cadorna Lets Forty Newspaper Men Go From Lake Garda to Stelvio Pass—Graphic Pen Pictures of Artillery Assaults on "Impossible" Snowbound Heights.

LONDON.—M. H. Donahue, writing in The Chronicle from the Southern Trentino, says:

Undeterred by adverse criticism, some of which found its way from beyond the frontiers of Italy, the Italian commander has resolutely risked the experiment of permitting newspaper correspondents to enter the zone of operations.

Rare indeed would be the journalist who, for the sake of some ephemeral professional success, would betray the confidence reposed in him by the Italian Commander-in-Chief in so grave and great a national emergency.

Some of that organizing energy for which Cadorna and his chief of staff, General Porro, are noted has been diverted to the organizing of a small newspaper army on something approaching military lines. I myself form part of the Eighth Division—not military division, please!

A Japanese staff officer once told me that his Government, in preparing for the war with Russia, had arranged for everything except—correspondents. General Cadorna has gone one better than the astute Japanese, for he seemingly has prepared for every possible contingency; military and otherwise—including correspondents.

It is due to his courtesy, not less than his courage, that forty of us are now making an unrestricted, unhampered tour of the whole Italian front. We represent the principal newspapers of England, France, and, of course, Italy.

Gone is every sign of Austrian rule in this part of the Trentino, now Italian, this region which the kindness of General Cadorna has enabled me to visit. Italian flags fly from every church steeple and from the flagstaff of every town hall.

Gone, too, is the hated official German language; the very children in the streets, hitherto officially tongue-tied, now chatter all day long in the sweet language of Dante, full of happiness and rejoicing in their newly found lingual freedom.

As I went through the towns and villages bordering the valley of the Chiese, there were to be seen other signs of the passing of Austrian domination. On public buildings, a coat of arms of the hated Hapsburg, and that of the House of Savoy had been substituted. Restaurants had changed their names and sometimes their owners.

Even the village dogs basking in the sun seemed to be subconscious of the mighty change that had come about.

At the sound of spoken Italian they stood up, they wagged their tails in the most effusive way. An imaginative man might have thought that was as much as to say, "Don't be afraid, we won't bite; for our sympathies are entirely anti-Austrian too."

The British divisions or groups have had delegated to them as guides, mentors and friends two officers of high distinction bearing names which have been chiseled deep in Italian history.

Conquering the Alps.

In traversing the Trentino section of the Italian front, and in going over the very ground upon which the military pride of Austria had been humbled afresh by the descendants of the men who triumphed in 1859, one does not know which to admire the most—the military genius of Cadorna, the prowess of the fighting men of Italy, or the skill of the Italian military engineers. No one has ever doubted the courage and self-abnegation of the Italian soldier, imbued as he is with a patriotism as lofty, as ardent, and as pure as this materialistic world of ours has ever seen. But what of the Italian military engineers?

I have looked with amazement, and, indeed, reverential awe, upon the monuments of their handiwork, of their triumph over Nature in the shape of the roads they have hewn out of the face of perpendicular cliffs, and the bridges they have thrown across the Alpine chasms hitherto proof against the ingenuity of man.

As Alpine roadmakers and bridge-builders they are the Romans of their day. Look, for example, at the valley of the Chiese, on both sides of which the Austrian Trentino was snatch-cocked into Italian territory. The Austrian frontier line ran along the summit of the highest mountains.

Thus geographically dominating Italy, the Austrians felt tolerably safe from an Italian offensive. Yet in the first days of the war when the Alpini and the Bersaglieri swarmed up the valley of the Chiese, driving the Austrians pell-mell before them, the Austrian hold on the high mountain crests was speedily broken. Cadorna wished to reach the Austrians, entrenched at an altitude of (in some cases) 5,000 feet, and it was the army engineers that rendered his offensive practicable.

The wooded eastern and western sides of the Chiese Valley—in these days of late summer still covered with a luxuriant vegetation—drop almost sheer into the verdure-coated valley. In less than a week the army engineers cleared away the incumbering timber and blasted roads out of the solid rock, which they metaled and made passable for animal traction and heavy artillery.

Big Guns in the Clouds.

From the high mountains, down into the valley 5,000 feet below, and up the other side runs the main Italian position.

From the trenches of the Bersaglieri, where I spent an instructive afternoon, by the aid of field glasses I could just make out an Italian artillery position among the serrated ironstone peaks, now temporarily free from snow.

Away to our left front a mass of mountain cloud drifted across the Austrian position. Presently the tail end of the cloud was driven far to the eastward by the force of the sharp ice-laden mountain wind, and looking through an embrasure in the Italian trenches in the valley, and by cartine my head well backward, I could make out a number of strike object clustering around a pinnacle-shaped rock.

They were Austrian soldiers who had crept from their burrows up there among the heights of eternal snow for a little exercise, a little warmth and sunshine.

In these regions, indeed, it is a war conducted in widely varying temperatures. The Italians holding the high peaks of the Chiese Valley in these comparatively warm August days suffer from frostbite and severe cold.

Their comrades in the valley trenches below complain of the intense heat and find it much too hot to wear a tunic.

That patient, long-suffering, but somewhat uncertain tempered traction animal, the mule, is rendering good service to the Italians; without his efficient aid men and guns at these hight altitudes would starve for supplies. His sturdy back carries soup for the soldiers and ammunition for the guns.

I happened to be at the base camp when the midday soup, the staple ration of the Italian soldier, was despatched to the hungry men up in snowland. One mule carries enough soup for sixty men, contained in stout oblong iron pots (devised on the principle of the Thermos flask), which keep the contents hot during a three hours' mountain journey.

"Avanti!"

One can never fail to be struck by the cheerfulness and martial eagerness of the Italian soldiers. In the Chieso and Ampole valleys I talked with men whose one complaint was that of inaction. "Captain," said one of a group to his officer, "when do you think we shall go forward?"

The question was addressed with all the frankness which marks the almost democratic relations of officers and men in the Italian Army.

The reply, too, was characteristic: "Boys, have patience; it will be soon now."

There was the hope of a speedy conflict with the Austrian enemy, and at the prospect thereof the men fairly beamed with pleasure. The Italian soldier, fine fighting man that he is, hates inactivity, and the cry of "Avanti-Avanti!" in its literal fulfilment, is always sweet music to his ears.

Subsequently crossing the country and negotiating many "hairpin" corners, I found myself on the shore at Lake Garda, where frowning Monte Altissimo looks down upon Austrian-held Riva. On the mountain tops Italian cannon answered those of the Austrians.

A light-draught Italian gunboat glided in under the rocky cliffs, lying in wait for a second opportunity to bombard the Austrian batteries on the hills beyond Riva, in the advanced trenches well hidden from the eyes of the enemy. The Italian soldier, in the dugout which serves as a lookout in the intervals of a chat on the prospects of British football during the coming winter, patted the regimental mascot, "Trentino," a fine collie taken from the Austrians in the first days of the war.

"Trentino" has been duly enrolled in a certain infantry regiment, and wears a collar with his regimental number. He is a sagacious animal, and for some reason or other nurses a bitter grievance against all soldiers wearing the Austrian uniform.

Long Range Amid Ice.

BORMIO.—From the Stelvio glacier, where Italy in a crooked-looking way merges itself into Switzerland, the Austrian-Italian frontier zig zags to the south-west, following the crests of the snow-topped Alpine peaks. High above Bormio begins a sharp angled frontier salient, which does not flatten out until towering Monte Tonale is almost reached. Round Tonale itself the artillery of the contending armies have been rarely silent. On the Italian side long-range guns have been by superhuman effort dragged to the summit of these snow-topped peaks. There, from emplacements dug out of snow or blasted from solid ice, they daily thunder forth their message of death, awakening deep-toned reverberations from the hills near and distant. In this high angle fire the observer behind the guns sees nothing of its destructive effects. A sharp crack, which in these snow lands smites painfully on the ear, is the announcement that an enormous steel projectile has gone forth to seek Austrian human prey. Fired invariably from behind some sheltering eminence, it soars high, crosses an intervening valley, and drops behind a neighbouring hill which is known to hide an Austrian battery.

The Italian infantry on its side has not been kept idle in this sector. Those superb mountain fighters, the Alpini, with sinews of steel and a degree of physical endurance which laughs alike at hunger and intense cold, have not lacked occupation in defending the frontier salient above Bormio. Owing to the peculiar configuration of the frontier they have had to guard against the possibility of Austrian attacks on three fronts. Their advanced line crosses a dangerous glacier and then traverses the snowfield bending westward from Austrian territory toward the Stelvio glacier and the Swiss frontier.

On the previous day a scouting party belonging to the regiment which received me so hospitably in their dug-outs on the other side of the —— glacier had, at sunrise, come in contact with a reconnoitring patrol of the enemy. Both sides dropped to cover in the deep unyielding snow. The Alpini proved themselves the better marksmen, and several of the enemy were killed. Roped together in sections, the surviving Austrians before they could retreat had to cut away their encumbering dead. The two leading sections were all dead, and in the third Austrian section, one larger at the end of the sharp, short-lived conflict found himself linked to three dead comrades. He cut the hempen bonds which bound him, and, running the gauntlet of Italian fire, succeeded in making good his escape, doubling like a hunted chamois over the snow field and down the treacherous face of the glacier, terror lending wings to his feet.

The commander of the outposts, whose name, alas! the exigencies of the censorship will not permit me to mention, is a member of a certain famous Alpine club and one who knows England and Henley and Ranelagh and British sporting centres generally nearly as well as he knows his native Italy. By his directions, and aided by a powerful pair of field glasses, I picked up the main Austrian position. The sun glare and the fitful play of light on the snow, which caused the spotlessly white intervening ground to shimmer like a too rapidly moving cinema picture, was much too painful to the eyes to be borne long, and so I gave up indesour the attempt to make a closer visual acquaintance with the wily enemy. During the day there is little doing up here toward cloudland. Usually there is a tacit truce, and the main duty, in the intervals of sleeping, snag and play the mandolin and make merry generally. The Alpini detachment among which I for myself boasted, as well as musicians and photographers, a black-and-white artist of some renown. While I was "reconnoitring" the Austrian position the artist in question was busy with his pencil, and at the end of my visit to the trenches presented me with a very creditable drawing of myself. My friend the artist, too, I found, had his susceptible, sentimental side. Drawing me aside before I began the perilous descent which ends on the upper Tellina Valley, he confided to me a bunch of edelweiss, plucked that day in a snow free corner of this "no man's land." He said:

"I have a sweetheart in England here is her address; you will pass a post office before I do, send her this." Wrapped in a torn corner of a newspaper, the edelweiss, placed on my breast pocket, made the descent in safety, and is already on its way to England, addressed to the English girl whose love is now fighting for the cause of Italian greatness high up among the Alpine snows.

The King was among his faithful soldiers on the western front. I came across His Majesty at several points during my journey. At one point he had entered an humble inn and was having luncheon. Victor Emanuel in war time at all events, does not both much about ceremony. He loves chatting first hand with his soldiers. "Bene, bene," he goes from his cheery greeting when, on leaving the modest inn, he found himself among a group of soldiers. The Colonel a familiar of the King, which the King partook of the inevitable veg I mine and thereby talked with the chosen sons of Italy in a tattoo with his children. He was amused with the artist's cheery attention, and with all the simplicity and sincerity of men who claim the possession of big, generous hearts, but who are wholly unversed in the intricacies of Court etiquette. And, too, he sympathized with them when he learned of the brave comrades who had fallen while carrying the flag of the mother-

TO NURSE MOLOKAI LEPERS

Young Woman Bids Her Relatives Farewell Before Leaving for Hawaii.

GLEN COVE, L.I., Nov. 6.—Relatives of Miss Mary Connewaka bade her a tearful farewell when she left here for Honolulu, where she is going for several months' preparation as a novitiate in the Franciscan convent to qualify as a nurse to the lepers on the Hawaiian Islands.

Miss Connewaka, who is 21 years old, expects to be assigned to the leper island of Molokai. When she enters the leper colony she will never be permitted to return to her home or to leave the colony.

"What do you think of the accusation, Miss Scurich?" whispered her neighbour.

"Oh, I don't pay any attention to scandalous. Let everybody worship in their own way, I say."

THERE IS NO DEATH.

There is no death! The stars go down
To rise upon some fairer shore;
And bright in heaven's jeweled crown,
They shine forever more.

There is no death! The dust we tread
Shall change beneath the summer showers
To golden grain or mellow fruit,
Or rainbow tinted bowers.

The granite rocks disorganize
To feed the hanging moss they bear;
The leaves bring daily life,
From out the viewless air.

There is no death! The leaves may fall,
The flowers may fall and pass away;
They only wait through wintry hours
The coming of the May.

There is no death! An angel form
Walks o'er the earth with silent tread,
He bears our best-loved things away;
And then we call them dead.

He leaves our heart all desolate
He plucks our fairest, sweetest flowers;
Transported into bliss, they now
Adorn immortal bowers.

The birdlike voice, whose joyous tones
Make glad these scenes of sin and strife,
Sings now an everlasting song
Amid the tree of life.

And when he sees a smile too bright,
Or hearts too pure for taint and vice,
He bears it to that world of light,
To dwell in paradise.

Born unto that undying life,
They leave us but to come again;
With joy we welcome them — the same
Except in sin and pain.

And ever near us, though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread;
For all the boundless universe
Is life—there are no dead!

TRY "CASCARETS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS IF SICK OR BILIOUS

To-night! Clean Your Bowels and Stop Headache, Colds, Sour Stomach

Get a 10-cent box now.

Turn the rascals out—the headache biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and bad colds—turn them out to-night and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels, or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back its Natural Color, Gloss, and Thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is dull, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of mess.

While wispy, gray hair doesn't mean sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

Cream the butter and the sugar gradually, then the beaten yolks of the eggs, add the flour sifted with the baking powder alternately with the milk and lastly the stiffly beaten whites of eggs. Bake in two layers. Put the layers together with a banana filling and cover the top with soft confectioners' sugar, or put two bananas past through a sieve, the juice of lemon and a little sugar.

THOUSANDS OF BABIES DIE BEFORE ONE YEAR

It is estimated that thousands of babies die in this country before the age of one year, and it is stated that one-half of these deaths are needless if all mothers were strong and infants were breast-fed.

Expectant mothers should thoughtfully strive to increase their strength with the strength-building fats in Scott's Emulsion which improves the blood suppresses nervousness, aids the quality of milk, and feeds the very life cells.

Physicians prescribe Scott's Emulsion; it is doubly important during nursing. No drugs. Every druggist has it. Always insist on Scott's the white food-medicine. No advanced price.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

V275

The shirt waist of the moment shows considerable fulness. Although it is not the "sloppy" garment of a year ago, it preserves the grace which goes with beauty of material hanging in natural folds.

In the waist shown in the accompanying illustration we have one of the more practical styles. Plainness is a prime feature of it; the fronts are gathered along the shoulder seam and the line of closing is in coat fashion in the centre front, while the open neck is finished with a wide Quaker collar or with a sailor one, both being provided in the pattern.

The armhole is considerably wider than the normal size and the upper edges of the sleeves are adjusted to fit this opening. If worn long the sleeves are finished in shirt style, somewhat open at the back of the arm and with a plain cuff, but when made shorter a turnback cuff is usually preferred.

The back of this waist is plain and the material of both front and back continues below the belt. It may be cut off and finished with an elastic gathering band and worn outside the waist.

The summer fabrics furnish numberless pretty materials for waists of this type. Voile is in the lead at present and it is just as pretty in a plain waist as in a more decorative one. A little hand embroidery on the fronts will add materially to the richness of the general effect, but even plain it is pretty. It is customary to make the collar and cuffs of muslin or organdie and if detachable they will be a great economy.

The waist pattern, No. 7275, is cut in sizes 4 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 1¾ yards of 36 inch material with ⅝ yards of 27 inch organdie for collar.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Suffered No End of Pain FROM BACKACHES.

If a pain attacks you in the back you should stop and think what it is and what causes it.

If the kidneys are at fault—and in nine cases out of every ten they are—you should attend to them at once, as it is impossible to have a well, strong back unless the kidneys are performing their functions in a proper manner.

Anyone with a bad back should appreciate how to get a good one. It is a very simple matter. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They regulate the kidneys, and there is no further excuse for any kidney trouble to exist.

Mrs. E. J. Graves, Oshawa Ont., writes: "My complaint lies with my kidneys. I have suffered no end of pain with them, and with backaches. I had tried everything, so I thought, until a friend advised me to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. I did try them, and one box helped me fine. So I got another, and now feel that I cannot recommend them too highly to anyone suffering with kidney trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are the original kidney pills. Do not accept any substitutes put up under similar names. Always see that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf" appears on the label and wrapper.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c a box, 6 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BRITAIN'S NEW WAR COUNCIL CHOSEN

THE SITUATION IN GREECE IS CRITICAL

ALLIES EXPECTED TO MAKE DRIVE ON RAILWAY LEADING TO CONSTANTINOPLE

Berlin Claims Railway Communication From Germany to Turkish Capital is Now Open and Enemy is Making Arrangements to Defend the Line Against Attacks From the Allies---More British and French Troops Will Be Landed---Enemy Will Have to Protect 450 Miles of Railway.

FRENCH OFFENSIVE IN BALKANS PROGRESSING

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—The Germans pushing southward from Varvarin, in Central Serbia, and the Bulgarians, advancing northward from Nish, had joined forces to-day. This established direct railway communication between Berlin and Constantinople. All that remains for Germany to do now is to provide for the railway's defence against the Allies. Military men said it is recognized that line will soon be heavily attacked by the British and French and by the shattered Serbian forces from the south. Besides the Anglo-French landing at Salonika, it is expected that Allied troops will be debarking shortly, if they are not already ashore, at Kavala and Dedchagatch, and that the Germanic armies must look for drives against the railroad all the way through Serbia, Bulgaria and Turkey, a 450-mile line. In Northern Serbia, with the movement to the south-eastward still progressing, the Germans have already been scattering along the western side of the road a defensive force, which has been "digging itself in," with a view to holding its position at the smallest possible cost in men. By the time the Allies can launch their attack it is believed by the Germans these positions will be practically impregnable.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—(French Official Communique).—The situation is unchanged at the Franco-German front. Calm has prevailed in the Serbian war zone since the Allies' victory over the Bulgarians in the Krivoluk region.

The French troops have occupied Kosjak and Babuna Heights, and are expected to effect a junction soon with the Serbian army occupying the north-western slope of the Babuna range. The French offensive against the Bulgarians is proceeding surely but slowly because of the difficulties of the terrain. In the sector north-east of Strumnitza, the French advance toward the north is continuing uninterruptedly to-day, with the British contingent on the right wing. The Serbs repulsed heavy Bulgarian attacks in the Krivolak sector, where the French also have materially extended their line.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—With the selection of the Ministers only barely completed, Greece's new Cabinet already shows signs of collapse. M. Michelidkis refused portfolio of public instruction to-day. Except M. Skouloudis, the new Premier, who consented to act also as Foreign Minister, Michelidkis was the only new man chosen, the rest of the Cabinet consisting of hold-over members from the Zaimis regime. He was chosen because it was believed he would be acceptable to ex-Premier Venizelos, the war party leader. His refusal to act is regarded as indicative of the war groups' determination to dictate the Greek policies.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The Greek situation is looked on by diplomats as still highly critical, with the prospects that the country will finally have to join the Allies or that Constantine's throne will be in serious danger. Constantine's supporters are hopeful that it will be decided to give the new Ministry a trial, but this is far from certain. If Venizelos' group decides to reject the new Ministry an alarming crisis will be precipitated. Skouloudis and his colleagues were sworn in to office on Sunday, with the exception of M. Michelidkis.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—England's new War Council has been chosen. The Evening News announced to-day that the members are Premier Asquith, acting temporarily as Minister of War, First Lord of Admiralty Balfour, and Minister of Munitions Lloyd George. Foreign Minister Sir Edward Grey, it is stated, will sit with this triumvirate whenever British foreign policies are involved.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—England is very resentful of the tone of President Wilson's note concerning the British blockade of the German coast. The newspapers, while vigorously defending the blockade and deploring what they term the "harsh" wording of the communication, are careful to explain that no serious trouble is to be expected between the two countries, and seem hurt rather than angry at the American chief executive's attitude. Individual utterances, however, are very bitter.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—"Too mild and too late," was the general tenor of the newspapers' criticism to-day of the American note to England concerning British interference with American trade at sea.

ATHENS, Nov. 8.—War or revolution may depend on the meeting of ex-Premier Venizelos with his followers in progress here to-day. This conference was called to consider the war party's attitude toward the new Cabinet under Shoulodis.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—The Austro-German occupation of Kruchevaz, Serbia, and the capture of 3,000 Serb prisoners, were officially announced to-day. The fighting was hand-to-hand for a time, and raged with the greatest desperation. The Bulgarians, although victorious, were considerably outnumbered. The battle on the Serbian side of the frontier, west of the Orint railway line, in the Krivolak-Sonitshglava region, between the Bulgarians and the Allied French, British and Serbians still rages.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The steamship Woolwich, of London, 2,936 tons gross, has been sunk. Her crew was saved.

Peterborough Boys Unable to Dig 'Dugouts' on This Account – Descriptive Letter From Quartermaster Sergeant Thomas

TELLS OF ATROCITIES

The following is a letter, minus personalities, from Quartermaster-Sergeant Sam Thomas, of the 21st Battalion, received by his wife last week, and is quite a pen picture of some phases of trench life:

Monday, Oct. 18, 1915, 9:30 a.m.

Somewhere in Belgium.

We are preparing to advance our line to-morrow which means a terrible sacrifice. We have with our 4th Brigade which consists of four battalions, 18th, 19th, 20th and 21st; the (here are mentioned British regiments which are necessarily censored). The French army is on our right, the Belgians on our left. Hill No. 60 is about half a mile to the left, and the Champagne on our right. The latter place saw a hard fight. Although we took an active part, the French, who were in the centre drove them back 22 miles and took 20,000 prisoners. We have been in the trenches now 32 days, and have just gone in again for another 10. The Peterborough boys are toughing it well, and are taking everything with a good heart. We haven't had a casualty among the Peterborough yet. God only knows what may happen in a few days; but we are here to take the dose, big or small, and we have the cream of the British army to help us.

The place where we are entrench-

WILL ASSIST THE SPEAKERS' PATRIOTIC LEAGUE

The Ministerial Association met this morning at 10 o'clock. Captain Rollins spoke on behalf of the Speakers' Patriotic League.

The Association passed a unanimous resolution to continue to uphold the hands of the League in their work.

A committee was appointed to consider the whole matter of entertainment of the soldiers, and to report shortly. The Association stands ready, however, to cooperate with the Speakers' League in this matter till their own plans have been definitely decided on.

Rev. D. Brown read a very interesting paper on "The Christian Doctrine of Prayer." After discussion the meeting was closed.

PTE. ROBERT LEVOIR LAID TO REST WITH MILITARY HONOURS

Member of 2nd Battalion Canadian Expeditionary Forces Followed to Last Resting Place by 93rd Battalion—Impressive Service Held at the Armouries—New Officers Join the 93rd—To-day's Military News.

After an impressive public service in the Armouries, conducted by Hon. Major Davidson, Chaplain of the 93rd Battalion, the remains of Pte. Robert Levoir, late of the 2nd Canadian Battalion, were laid at rest in Little Lake Cemetery this afternoon, escorted to their last resting place by the 93rd Battalion and by former comrades of the deceased who answered the call of King and Country when he did. Owing to the lack of equipment the full ceremonial of a military funeral could not be carried out, but all the honours that could be arranged for the memory of the dead soldier were paid.

A short private service at the home of the late Pte. Levoir at 699 Harvey Street, preceded the public service. The body brought to the armouries at 3 o'clock, escorted by the pall-bearers, six members of No. 2 Platoon, 93rd Battalion, as follows: Ptes. T. Davis, Pte. W. Warman, Pte. H. Clarke, Pte. B. Carpenter, Pte. A. Robinson, and Pte. Wm. Tanner.

The services at the armouries was brief, but most impressive. There was a breathless silence among the soldiers and citizens as the pall bearers bore the coffin, draped with the Union Jack, into the hall. Hon. Major Davidson and Lt.-Col. Johnston led the procession and the coffin was followed by the mourners, including Pte. Wm. Levoir, and the officers of the 93rd and Capt. Chas. Ackerman of the 2nd Battalion, of which the deceased had been a member.

Hon. Major Davidson opened the service with the reading of the 90th Psalm and portions of the 15th Chapter, 1st Corinthians.

In referring to the death of Pte. Levoir, the chaplain of the 93rd said that during the deceased's long illness he had never heard him complain. He had been proud to suffer for the Empire, said the speaker, who explained that Pte. Levoir had left Canada with the 2nd Battalion, and that the exposure at Salisbury Plain had been partially responsible for his illness. God had been with him during his sickness and would continue to be with him. "God preserve the Empire and those who defend it," remarked the speaker in conclusion.

The gathering then united in saying the Lord's Prayer, after which prayers were offered for the soldiers and sailors and for the wounded, sick and dying.

Among the returned soldiers who were present at the service in the armouries were Capt. Ackerman, Ptes. Geo. Curtis, Ernest Mesley, A. W. Phipps, Chas. Stenson and M. Mowry.

The Cortege.

The procession to the cemetery was headed by the band of the 93rd Battalion with muffled drums, playing the Dead March in Saul. Then came Ptes. Mowry, Mesley and Stenson, and then the hearse with three soldier pall-bearers marching on each side. The mourners followed and then the officers of the 93rd Battalion, followed by the men of A and B company. A number of carriages were in the rear of the soldiers.

At the cemetery, following the ceremony, the "Last Post" was sounded.

The 93rd soccer team won the final game of the series with the Normal School at Riverside Park, Saturday, in hollow fashion, by 3 goals to nil, thus winning two games out of three and scoring six goals to three. The soldiers had their best balanced side of the season in action, and had such a thorough command of the situation that the civilians had not a shot to huddle between the posts. The lads in khaki scored all their goals in the first half, Sergt. King doing the trick in all three cases. Two of the counters came on penalty kicks, and the other on the prettiest play of the day, a pass from Shaw to Hardman, who raced down the wing and centred beautifully to King, who slipped the ball neatly between the sticks.

The Band of the 93rd Battalion was on hand and rendered an enjoyable programme during the game. After the contest the band headed a triumphal parade back to the Armouries, and people along the line were given no opportunity to forget the fact that the soldier team had won the day. Sergt. Jay of the 93rd refereed the game.

The 93rd team lined up as follows:

Goal—Company Sergt.-Major Colladine.

Backs—Corp. Geo. Coleman, Bandsman W. Badley.

Half-backs—Pte. Taylor, Pte. Norman, Pte. Shaw.

Forwards—Sergt. King, Pte. Kitchen, Pte. Edwards, Pte. Scott, Pte. T. Hardman.

Lieut. J. A. MacNab of the 57th Regiment, who is taking a qualifying course at the Provisional School of Infantry, Kingston, was home for the week-end at their homes in Peterview with the 93rd Battalion, yesterday.

Sergts. Hunter, Lewis and Stanley Hagerman of the 33rd Battery spent the week-end at the homes in Peter-

Two Local Soldiers Return From Front

Pte. Wm. Levoir Reaches Peterborough in Time to Attend the Funeral of His Brother Pte. Robert Levoir.—Pte. Chas. Payne of Peterborough, Reservist, Also Home.

BOTH ARE DISCHARGED

It was a sad home-coming for Pte. Wm. Levoir of the first battalion, first Canadian contingent, who arrived in the city this morning. Pte. Levoir's home-coming was rendered so, by the fact that to-day was the funeral of his brother and comrade, Pte. Robt. Levoir. In that first Peterborough company of volunteers for the front that left on that August morning a little over a year ago were three brothers, who were ready to serve their King and country. They were the returning hero who reached Peterborough this morning, his dead comrade who was forced through ill health to come home from Salisbury Plain last winter, and Pte. Thos. Levoir, who is now in England with a reserve battalion awaiting orders to again proceed to the front. While his brother's death was not unexpected, Pte. Wm. Levoir felt keenly his inability to reach his bedside before he passed away.

Injured at Salisbury Plain.

Pte. Levoir, when seen by an Examiner reporter at his home this morning, was looking pretty well in spite of all he has gone through in the last year. Soon after his arrival at Salisbury Plain last fall, Pte. Levoir met with an unfortunate accident in which he suffered a broken ankle by being thrown from a horse. Consequently when in February when the troops moved over to France, he was unable to go. It was the latter part of April before he went across. He did not take part with Major Bennett and the rest of the Peterborough men in that memorable fight at St. Julien. He did not rejoin the second battalion but was drafted into the first Wounded at Givenchy.

It was at Givenchy on June 15th that Pte. Levoir was wounded. He received a double fracture of the right arm, as a result of which he was unable to raise it above his head. The first battalion was occupying the first line of trenches, which was only about fifty yards from the Germans. They had laid a mine to blow up the enemy's trench, and the order was given to charge following the explosion of the mine. This was done and the Germans' first trench was gained. It was in the advance that Pte. Levoir was hit in the arm. In the confusion he can't say just what hit him, but believes it was shrapnel. The second and third line of trenches were taken, but later in a counter attack the enemy gained their lost ground.

Pte. Levoir, about two hours after being wounded, was able to proceed to the dressing station. It was first thought that he would lose the use of his right arm, and while he has partially done so, it has greatly surprised the physicians by the manner in which it has recovered. He was for several weeks at hospital in Shropshire, afterwards being sent to a convalescent camp in Wales. He has received his discharge and with several other wounded Canadians returned home on the Scandanavian, arriving at Quebec a week ago to-day.

Pte. Charles Payne Reservist, Returns From the Front

When England went to war with Germany a year ago last August, the call was at once sent out for her reservists in the colonies and elsewhere to return to the colours. Among those who laid down their work in Peterborough to hasten to the call of the Motherland, was Pte. Charles Payne of 73 Smith Street. He left here on August 17th to join his regiment, the 1st Wiltshires, and to-day, Pte. Payne, after many harrowing experiences, is back again with his wife and family. He arrived this morning on the early train, and it was a happy family at the above residence, when an Examiner reporter called to see the returned soldier, this morning.

As a result of the terrible hardships experienced in the trenches last winter, Pte. Payne contracted severe rheumatism, and in January last was removed to the hospital, where he spent many weeks, only a short time ago receiving his discharge. At times

COMPARATIVELY FORTUNATE.

We Canadians are comparatively fortunate, though we sometimes think that we are being called upon to make considerable sacrifices. We sometimes wince at the frequent presentation of subscription lists, even in the interests of a great cause. We may feel that our loose cash is kept at an uncomfortably low level. But that is about the only sacrifice many and most of us are called upon to make, and it is a trifle compared with the sacrifices made by those who enter the ranks and the firing lines, putting life and limb at risk, and facing personal discomforts, and hardship, and absolute base work, beside which the sacrifice of parting with the price of a box of cigars or a new hat is a trifle and not to be counted. Besides we have here peace and plenty. We complain, of course, at the high cost of living; but we have means to live and to give. Contrast our condition with that of the people of Germany, where food prices are prohibitory, especially for those who have scant means; where food is under government control and doled out as we dole fodder out to the stock in our farm yards. There the situation is so acute in the matter of food supply and prices that serious bread riots occur. This is a matter that we cannot sympathize with for we feel no such pinch. We can be sorry for the sufferings even of our enemies, for they are the innocent victims of the monster of militarism. While we pity we can also rejoice; for the food shortage we are told exists in Germany, is one of the signs of the wearing down game the British and their Allies are playing—one of the signs that Germany and her pals have shot their bolt, and that the exhaustion in men, money and resources, is tending to the collapse of the mad and fatuous ambition of world domination.

LET US PULL TOGETHER.

Major General, the Hon. Sir Sam Hughes, has enough enemies, or playfully hostile critics, without having foes in his own political household. For a long time there has been evidence that the relations of Sir Sam and Hon. Bob Rogers have not been of a chummy character, not to speak of the show of cordiality that should be maintained by members of the same cabinet. Sir Sam has been subjected to some severe criticism by Conservative journals, inspired by, or, at least, supposed to be under the influence of, Hon. Robert Rogers, or in which he is said to have also interest to be attributed to financial holdings in them. Now we have the case of Westman, a Conservative candidate for Regina, who has made serious charges against the Minister of Militia to the effect that he has connived at irregularities in connection with army hay contracts, and has shielded the perpetrators. An investigation is demanded, and Sir Charles Davidson is proposed as the investigating instrument.

The point, in this connection, is that Mr. Westman is a Rogers protege, and here it is claimed that the hand of Esau Rogers as against Sir Sam is evident. Of course there is ground for an investigation. Even the untameable Minister of Militia cannot afford to have his usefulness at this time impaired by the odium such charges, even unproved or not disproved, will create. As between Sir Sam and Hon Robert, it is not difficult to chose. Sir Sam has a reputation to lose, and cannot afford to lie under such charges, even though the animus that inspires them is admitted. In the matter of public service Sir Sam stands head and shoulders above Mr. Rogers. With all his peculiarities or faults—for a man in his position—Sir Sam is energetically striving to serve his country in this great crisis. At the best Mr. Rogers is not to be credited with any higher motive than advancing his personal political ambitions, and his modes of obtaining his ends are not characterized by any too great nicety of scruple or openness, and innocence of method.

This is the wrong time for the development of a cabinet split, such as is likely to come whether the proposed investigation into the charge against Sir Sam results, or does not result, in a measure of justification for them. Hon. Mr. Rogers should be aiding and abetting Sir Sam in the discharge of the difficult duties to which he is directing so much energy. If he is erratic his colleagues should be as a balance wheel to regulate his movements. They, or at least one of them, should not be pushing things into the machinery of the Militia Department and breaking the cogs.

The membership of both great parties, and the public as a whole, have abstained from urging the claims, legitimate enough in normal times, of partizan interests, for the sake of presenting a united front to the emergency created by the war. It would be a pity if the men at the wheel should have their attention distracted, and their power for straight-steering impaired by cabinet squabbles. Sir Sam, however, will meet the occasion in his own upon, if sometimes blunderingly, way. He shows a disposition to fight in the open and defy the sniping of which he is the object. He has thrown down the gauntlet by intimating to Mr. Westman that he is not fit to be a Conservative candidate for Regina. This defiance is virtually directed against Hon. Robert Rogers whose candidate Westman is said to be. If the situation is not smoothed over, we shall have wigs on the green, if we do not see the Kilkenny cats fable illustrated. It will be unfortunate if the quarrel develops into a split, for the people look to the Government for leading in the work of waging war and easing for its consequences. The party spirit is held in subjection in order to not embarrass the Government in its work. The public is solidly behind the Government in supporting it in the work of helping on the struggle, and will loyally support it in whatever legitimate measures are devised to help Canada do her duty. The Government should not forfeit a claim to the support of the people by declaring a little war of its own.

THAT TRIUMPH.

There is cumulative evidence that the "great diplomatic triumph" of the administration over Germany falls far short of being a triumph at all, and that it was due to British success in combating the U-boat operations more than to any skill of Mr Wilson as a note-writer.

The British navy has largely increased its supply of undersea craft and has seriously depleted the German submarine list. The U-boat campaign which von Tripits planned has been both a naval and an economic failure. The loss of British merchant ships from this cause has never exceeded one per cent. of the total possible victims, while its cost to Germany, in boats lost as well as in money and men, has been wholly disproportionate.

Therefore the German government really surrendered nothing in its plausible, though unreal, concessions to Mr. Wilson. But the latter has sought to masquerade in a victor's robes. The stage was well set and the only trouble with the performance was that it was not the last act. The final scene was staged in London, where it became known that the British navy had taken a costly toll of German submarines and had really won the controversy for the American State Department. If anyone is to be elected President because of the episode, the most deserving candidate is Sir John Jellicoe, whose ships did what Mr. Wilson's typewriter was incapable of procuring.—Rochester Times.

THE OLD ROUTE OF NAPOLEON.

"Near Glaudan, on the Dvina, below Dvinsk, the Germans unsuccessfully tried to cross the Dvina." This extract, from the Russian official communication of November 5, is part of a long chronicle of the attempts of the Germans to establish themselves on the line of the Dvina. It is now five months since they started their great offensive on the eastern front, in the hope of enveloping and destroying the Russian army before winter. That object having failed they have, since September, been trying to occupy the Dvina with a view to turning their principal forces in the direction of Moscow, the old route of Napoleon. There is no indication that they are likely to achieve their end. Indeed, the Russian offensive is every day getting stronger, and is skilfully utilizing the enemy's tactics for the purpose of thinning his ranks. The ultimate object of Russia, to which every other consideration is being made secondary, is to exhaust the German forces. In that aim Russia is succeeding admirably.—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

The Toronto News says that Sir Robert Borden's French addresses in the Eastern Townships were "born of a fine courtesy, and had no political significance aside from their content." When Mr. Rowell says a word or two in French, however, his address is "good politics perhaps, but slippery statesmanship." The News should hire out as some circus as a juggler in words.—The Globe.

The Abomination of Prostituted Utilitarianism

The attention of The Free Press was called the other day by the action of the civic authorities in consenting to the cutting down of a number of trees on the bank of the river at the end of Daly Avenue. Having always taken a keen pride in the hundreds of old trees in the streets and parks of the city, and being interested in their preservation, as are thousands of other citizens, inquiry was made at the city hall about the matter. There it was learned that the civic authorities had given permission to a private citizen to have the trees removed because "they obstructed his view."

In explantion of his part in the matter, the official to whom The Free Press spoke stated that "the only purpose served by the trees" was in affording safeguard against vehicles running over the riverbank. As the citizen whose view was obstructed offered to put up a fence to serve this purpose, authority was given him to cut down the trees.

Having seen contractors in various parts of the city ruthlessly hack down fine old trees rather than set a projected building back a few feet the explanation did not come altogether as a surprise. Tree vandalism seems to be in the blood of a large number of our people. Walking on a country road not far from Ottawa the other day, we noticed that for a distance of over a mile every elm tree tree yards apart in a row at one side had been mutilated and completely spoiled to permit of the stringing of a power line. There seemed no reason why the poles carrying that electric wire should not have been carried out three or four feet. The tree butchers simply could not spare the axe, and the picturesque growth of half a century was destroyed in a few minutes.

What an abomination this reducing everything to a basis of utilitarianism is. For instance, the Ottawa civic authorities maintaining that this city can afford to cut down its beautiful trees and build hideous fences in their place.

In this connection, too, we fear there is a lack of proper supervision in the work of tree trimming. Twice a year one sees men cutting and slashing at the great trees along our principal streets. It is only a few weeks since we noticed such operations on Metcalf street. Protest was made by one of the tree trimmers to the foreman against the removal of a great limb. "Oh, cut it off," was the careless command of the foreman, who, whatever his executive ability may have been, did not bear the appearance of a man qualified to judge of the value of trees. As a matter of fact, the "job of tree inspector" is frequently made the subject of jokes at the board of control meetings.—Ottawa Free Press.

Peterborough does not seem to be the only place where the spirit of vandalism is rampant, among officials "dressed with a little brief authority." Such men "are of the earth earthy"; and having regard to the higher morality and the refinements of the aesthetic spirit, they are less credit to their kind, less worthy a place on the earth from whence they so directly spring as to retain its earthly savour, than the lordly trees they destroy. These, with their feet in earth, raise their heads heavenward and draw beauty, dignity, and human delight from the earth, which to many spirits is a mere place for grovelling and grubbing for material profit with never a thought above the sordid and the grossly material; reminding one of the aptness to such a class of men, of the saying of caustic John Ruskin—"men who look upon the earth as a stable and its fruits as fodder."

EDUCATING THE BELGIANS.

"We must educate Brussels and the Belgians," says the Strassburg Post. Swift, in his blackest hour of irony, could not have beaten that. The Germans have been educating the Belgians for almost fifteen months. The whole kingdom is a Kultur University. By invasion in the teeth of treaties, by the slaughter of Belgian armies, by the murder of civilians, by the pitiless savageries against women and children, priests and nuns, by the flames of Louvain, by disciplinary object lessons in massacre; by ruinous fines, by penal servitude, by famine succored only by relief from parts of the world not educated in the German ideal of eminent brutality, by a thorough and continuous course of barbarous repression and oppression, the holy Germans, the men who "march with God," have sought and are seeking to teach the benighted Belgians to cease to be Belgian patriots, to put up with intolerable wrongs, to bear the yoke meekly.

Educating the Belgians: Why, in the last two weeks ten Belgians, four of them women, have been condemned to death, thirty-two to from ten to fifteen years' imprisonment, for the crime of being Belgian, not German, patriots.

And still, unconquerable hate and hope burn in the hearts of that uneducable folk. The professors of arson, mutilation, and murder waste their talents of instruction. The 42-centimeter guns speak vainly from their steel pulpits. Burning libraries cannot illuminate the Belgian mental darkness. The Belgians have had every opportunity of education at the hands of the most educated of peoples; and they will not profit by it. At a moment when Kultur stands so high in the opinion of mankind, the perversity, the stupidity of the Belgians must be irritating even to their sympathetic masters. — New York Times.

How Recruiting For the Army Is Done in Trafalgar Square

Recruiting sergeants are highly pleased with the way in which recruits have been coming in. To take one instance only, some twenty recruits were obtained in London at a meeting in Trafalgar Square, and they all looked like men who would pass a severe medical test.

Some notable incidents were witnessed at this meeting. One of the speakers was a one-armed Colonial sergeant—a Canadian by his accent—who showed on his overcoat the two South African ribbons, the ribbon of the D.C.M., and the ribbon of the Order of St. George (3rd Class). He talked breezily of life in the Army.

"Some say it is a weight reducer," he said. "Don't believe them; I put on weight while I was out in Flanders. Others say the life is rotten; because the soldiers are poorly fed. That's another fairy tale; I had eggs and bacon every morning."

Several men mounted the plinth of Nelson's monument as the result of the Canadian sergeant's appeal.

A band of twelve young girl pipers from Edinburgh, the only girls' pipe band in the world, made an effective appearance in the Square and marched round the monument playing Scottish airs. At the close of their performance two of the girls mounted the plinth of the monument and helped up two recruits.

A touching appeal was made by an elderly soldier in khaki, showing the two South African medals. In faltering accents he told how his son had been in the great affair at Loos, and had been reported "missing."

"I gave my boy up for dead," said the soldier, "but," tapping one of his tunic pockets, he added, "I got a letter from him this morning saying he is alive and well. They have had a terrible time out there, our gallant lads, but they have never faltered. I have done my little bit, and hope to do more; my boy is doing something; won't some of you young fellows here go out and help."

At this point the recruiting sergeant asked for speakers from the crowd; "anyone; an M.P., for preference," he said.

There was no response until a quite young girl stepped forward and in a low, sad voice she told the meeting that she had two cousins at the front and both had been very badly wounded. She hoped they would recover, and then they were going out again. Would not some young fellow in the crowd like to follow their example, the young girl asked, and several showed their willingness by presenting themselves to the recruiting officer.

A PATHETIC WAR EPISODE

In view of the heroic death of Nurse Cavell, we have been asked to reproduce these verses, which appeared in The Montreal Herald on August 17th last:

"Yesterday witnessed one of the most pathetically tragic individual incidents of the war. The Red Cross contingent, including several women, started out at the dawn of day to succor the wounded and bring in the dead from the scene of last night's onslaught on the German trenches. While engaged in her errand of mercy, one of the young women, beloved by the whole division for her beautiy and compassionate tenderness, came suddenly upon the dead body of her young brother lying near a ruined mill where desperate fighting had taken place. She had not learned of his presence at the front and believed him to be at one of the concentration camps at home. While in the act of embracing her loved one and calling piteously to some of the nurses in the distance she was shot dead by a German sharp-shooter from the nearest of the enemy's trenches."—News item.

Beautiful boy with the soft grey eyes—
See where he lies, see where he lies
In a shell-torn rut of the battle's path
Where his soul sped forth 'mid the iron wrath;
A Sister of Mercy, why do you start
At the reddened gash near the brave young heart,
And who is this lies so cold and still
In the light of dawn near the ruined mill?

Not this it was that the maiden had sought
When the dawn revealed what the night had wrought,
Merciful God—'twas her brother's face
Upturned to heaven from hell's red place!
And she kneeled beside the pale mute form,
Stricken down in the wild night's storm;
And e'en as she kneeled in her sorrow there
—An Angel of Mercy surpassing fair—
A bolt of hate from a coward hand
Made her one in death with the silent band.
Beautiful boy with the soft grey eyes—
Does he know who it is that near him lies?

Over there in a Surrey dale
Anon they will tell the sorrowful tale—
How the boy was found in the girl's embrace
With her dead lips pressed to her quiet face;
And a mother will weep, and a father will moan,
For the heart must grieve for the things of its own—
And a maiden will stand by a cottage door
But the youth that she loved will return no more.
No more will they thrill to the old-time joy
This English girl and this English boy,
"Somewhere in Flanders" together they lie
In the reddened earth, 'neath an alien sky,
For mercy and honour their life-blood was given,
And surely for such was the Kingdom of Heaven.
Evermore free and unconquered he lies—
Beautiful youth with the Saxon eyes.

EVENTS IN EUROPE.

France has now centred more power in the hands of one strong man than at any other time since the second Empire fell. This is accepted by the nation and the world as evidence that the war is to be fought to a conclusive peace, however long it takes.

A similar reorganization of the ministry and the focussing of fuller authority in one man or in a small executive committee of the cabinet is likely soon to make Great Britain more effective in the field. Meanwhile both Japan and Italy have signed the compact made by the other entente Allies a year ago to make no separate peace. It was such a league of nations pledged to fight together to the end, however long delayed, which overthrew Napoleon, the greatest soldier of all time. He could crush his enemies separately but went down before a coalition he could not break, as the Hohenzollern dynasty will.

There is nothing whatever to indicate the possibility of peace until militarism is brought to its knees. All the peace rumours, talk, proposals come from Berlin. In no other capital of Europe is heard the least suggestion of ending the war by compromise before it has been won in the field and on the sea. The entente Allies will have five million men now in training ready for service in the spring, while among the German prisoners are enlisted boys of fourteen and men of sixty, a fact which is taken to show that Germany is feeling the war drain as the other powers are not.

There will be terrific fighting yet on many fronts but the Kaiser cannot replace his killed. The Allies can. The fact is that the war is already won as much as our Civil war was won in the third year when Lee had been turned back at Gettysburg. His chance passed then of destroying a Northern army. Germany's chance of triumph passed with her failure to destroy an army of her enemies, either that of Russia or that of France. Balkan successes if she wins them, will have little or no effect upon the ultimate result.—Rochester Post.

Baltimore License Board has refused liquor-selling permits to 160 undesirable saloons.

GETTING SCARED.

After feeding the people for over a year on continual "victories," the German editors are now calling on them to "bridle your joy of tidings of victory," because "the hardest times are coming." They are beginning to fear the finish. — Montreal Herald

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Green Lamp

A Story For St. Patrick's Day

By Clarissa Mackie

Copyright by American Press Association.

Daniel Delevan sat on the edge of his bed and clicked his heels in monotonous rhythm. Beside him on the counterpane there curled three one-dollar bills. The wavy mirror above the bureau reflected a handsome face with worried lines around eyes and lips. At last he sighed heavily.

"It's the divil's own luck," he muttered bitterly, with a contemptuous glance toward the money on the bed. "Tomorrow's the 17th of March and Nellie's birthday, and me with nothing but a measly three bucks for her gift when I was planning to get that ring with the fine green stone and ask her—What's the use?"

He humped his broad shoulders more disconsolately as he recollected how he had so carefully planned months ago to buy the emerald ring for pretty Nellie Burns, who might be persuaded to wear it in token of their engagement, provided she gave him a favorable answer to the question that trembled on his lips.

He had selected the ring last October in a jewelry store and paid a small deposit on it, but shortly afterward there had come an appeal for help from a relative in the old country, and a goodly share of Daniel's wages had gone across the water to ease the last days of the aged uncle and finally to furnish decent burial when the days were numbered.

"She must have something for the day," decided Daniel, recovering his usual buoyancy, "if it's only a box of candy or the biggest pot of shamrock I can find, and maybe the one or the other will open the way to say what's got to be said, ring or no ring."

Daniel shrugged himself into an overcoat and left the boarding house determined to seek the lower part of the city, where in the vicinity of the big warehouse where he worked as shipping clerk there was a florist who offered tempting bargains.

It was down on Fourth avenue that he saw the auctioneer's flag fluttering in the doorway of an antique shop. The window showed an array of brass and copper work, oriental goods of every description, among which were several delicate fans with sticks of carved ivory. One of these beauties might be purchased with the $3, and Nellie could carry the dainty toy to the ball on St. Patrick's night. He decided to ask the auctioneer to put up the one with green silken cord and tassels.

To Daniel's dismay the price on the fan went up and up. Several keen faced men who examined the fan with knowing eyes contemptuously overbid the young Irishman's $3, and at last it was sold for $15.

He turned away, disappointed, and was elbowing his way toward the door when the words of the auctioneer brought him to a stop. His imagination was fired and his ears were filled with a riot of speculation.

"Ladies and gentlemen," vociferated the auctioneer, "I now offer you a wonderful bargain. You are buying something what? A little battered vessel of brass as covered with verdigris that it is as green as the fellow who intends buying this bargain at his own price! What is it? A lamp, an ancient brass lamp—one, here in the place for the which was found in a junkshop in the city of Bagdad, Turkey. You all remember the story of Aladdin and his wonderful lamp? Well, this is said to be the veritable lamp of Aladdin!" He lowered his voice impressively. "Those who are the owners of this lamp will be attended by the genii who granted every wish that young Aladdin desired.

"Why don't you rub it yourself?" inquired one skeptic.

The auctioneer grinned impudently. "The reason I don't summon the spirit of this lamp is because I'm afraid he'll realize the value of the bargain and run off with it as well as the whole shop. Now, gentlemen, who will give me a bid on Aladdin's lamp?"

It went up to 50 cents and stayed there while the auctioneer delivered another long argument concerning the value of the ancient lamp. The story of Aladdin was repeated to Daniel's interested ears. He had never heard it before, although some of the people there seemed familiar with the story and joked about it.

"Is that straight?" asked Daniel of his neighbor.

"Of course," returned the other, grinning.

"I'll take a chance on it, then," said Daniel grimly, and presently the lamp was sold to him for the sum of $1.50. As he walked out of the shop with the bundle under his arm a single word floated out after him.

"Stung!"

But Daniel did not hear it and walked downtown with a pleasant sense of possessing something that was wrapped in mystery. All his life he had dwelt among the most practical people, and the hard knocks he had received as he made his way in the new country had vanquished all the pretty romantic fancies that attend every man, woman and child born of Erin's isle.

A block away the elevated trains rattled and thundered along. All around him was the busy hum of traffic, and, unseeing, unhearing, Daniel Delevan walked along in a dream of fairies and friendly giants, who combined to hasten his wooing of Nellie Burns and bring it to a happy termination.

At the florist shop he awoke long enough to buy a pot of shamrock tied up in green crape paper, and from thence he proceeded to a confectioner's, where he found a large box of candy tied with an emerald green ribbon and adorned with shamrock leaves. That finished the $3.

The rest of the afternoon he spent in accumulating some of the necessary cleansing materials with which to brighten the lamp of Aladdin. He decided to wait until he was with Nellie Burns before he touched the verdigris. If there was anything in the story the man had told—of course there wasn't anything in it, but Daniel had heard some mighty queer stories that bore a grain of truth—the most he hoped for was a stroke of good luck to attend his asking of the question.

The next afternoon was a half holiday for him, and he went up to Mapleton, with his packages under either arm. He had telephoned Nellie of his coming, and she greeted him at the door. He thought she had never looked so charming as she appeared in her white dress with a green ribbon twisted around the heavy coil of her black hair.

"And whatever have you got in there, Danny?" she cried when she had exclaimed over the shamrock and the box of candy.

"It's Aladdin's lamp," said Daniel solemnly, slowly unfastening the string and exposing the lamp. "I suppose you've heard all about this Aladdin fellow, eh?"

"Of course," laughed Nellie, examining the lamp with interest, "but that all happened hundreds of years ago, so you can't joke me like that, Danny Delevan. Sure, I won't believe your old fairy stories."

"There might be something in it," returned Daniel doggedly.

"Suppose the genii" uttered Nellie, with a wistful glance at the lamp.

"Why?"

"Because I want to make some wishes."

"They will come just as true without the genii," said Daniel. "You needn't try to fool me, Nancy Delevan! You bought that lamp because it was green and because today is my birthday as well as St. Patrick's, and you know very well you don't believe that rubbing it will do the least bit of good—so there!"

Daniel smiled sheepishly. "It might be something like that, Nellie, but I was all carried away with the story and so beset by hopes I was fool enough to buy the lamp. I thought I'd go home and rub it and wish on it. I'm a fool!"

"You are not!" flared Nellie. "I like you for having fancies like that, Daniel. I'll admit I have a sneaking belief in fairies myself. Now, let us rub the lamp and make wishes. Who knows what will happen?"

She opened the box of paste he had brought and found a piece of flannel. They sat together on the sofa while Nellie solemnly rubbed the paste on the coat of verdigris. The spot she rubbed grew brighter and brighter.

"Now wish!" she said suddenly.

Daniel grew red and nodded his head affirmatively. Nellie was thoughtful for a moment and then bent seriously to her task.

Nothing happened.

Suddenly Daniel snatched the lamp from her hands and flung it aside. "I'm a big fool," he said bitterly. "I'm too tongue tied ever to get anything in this world."

Nellie blushed beautifully and stood beside him. "What did you wish, Danny?" she asked softly.

"That you'd marry me," flashed Danny, whirling around. "What did you wish, Nellie?"

"That you'd ask me—why, Danny!" Her radiant face was buried on his shoulder.

"It came as easy as could be," he whispered to her after he had related his doubts and fears and the loss of the emerald ring.

"It's all that blessed old lamp," sighed Nellie. "We will always have that on the parlor mantelpiece, and we will always believe in fairies and giants, won't we, Danny?"

"Sure! Because if it hadn't been for the lamp of Aladdin I might not have been engaged to you this moment," said that happy young man.

No Military Expedition By Way Of Albania

ROME, Nov. 6.—The reports that Italy will take a hand in the conflict in the Balkans by landing an expeditionary force in Albania receives no confirmation in official quarters here. The negative attitude of officials leads to the strong conviction that no Albanian expedition is intended.

Sharp differences of opinion have developed in the Cabinet concerning the war. These differences have not reached the extent of a crisis, but have brought about a conflict in views, leading to an exciting incident.

One of the Ministers at a recent meeting of the Cabinet is said to have expressed the view that Italy's best interests would be served by assisting a movement toward the restoration of peace. This caused an angry protest, and charges were made against the good faith of the Minister suggesting peace. Epithets were exchanged, and one of the Ministers, overcome by indignation, threw a book at his colleague whose suggestion had caused the strife.

The incident is declared to have been largely of a personal nature, and the Cabinet and country are united, with this exception, for continuing the present policy.

While a Cabinet crisis, such as those which have occurred in France England and Russia, has been avoided, opinion here is divided concerning the conduct of the war, specially as regards a Balkan expedition. Lieut.-Gen. Count Cadorna's iron will has triumphed in this respect. He said he would rather resign as chief of the general staff than allow a part of his troops to participate in a Balkan undertaking and his view was firmly adopted by the Minister of War and the entire Cabinet.

The Navy Department also has passed through a crisis. Vice-Admiral Camillo Corsi was substituted for Vice-Admiral Viale as Minister of Marine, and this action was quickly followed by the relieving of Vice-Admiral Thaon di Revel from the head of the naval general staff. Vice-Admiral Corsi has now assumed active direction of the fleet, which is expected to lead an aggressive naval campaign.

An old Scots minister who did not quite regard himself as a paragon of pulpit perfection, addressing his assistant, remarked that it was singular how he felt more fatigue hearing him than in preaching himself. To this the assistant replied that he experienced a similar feeling when his reverend constituent was in the pulpit.

"There," exclaimed the minister, "I have yet to learn of any record that equals that of the Lakefield Epworth League. At the Peterborough District Convention recently, we learned that three successive League presidents from that thriving little town have already gone. When the war broke out Roy MacDonald was president. He offered his services, was accepted, went forward with the first contingent, and has been through the conflict from then until now. On his withdrawal from the chair of the League, Roy Robinson succeeded him. Fired with the same spirit of devotion to King and country, he joined the

Nor are these all who have gone from this splendid little band. Wilfrid Hull, grandson of Rev. T. R. Hull, a heroic pioneer preacher of bygone days, is a gassed veteran by now. Cephas Lemay is another, and Stanley Hill claims a place in the same roll of honour. Six valiant youths from this small society is not a bad record in it; but these successive presidents is certainly one of which any League may well be proud. It is

Thank God that in this war every church has sent thousands of her brave boys to fight for the common cause, and it ill becomes any one branch to claim anything like a monopoly of either the work or the honour. Methodists have never been lacking when duty has called to the colours. They are still among the Empire's most loyal and devoted subjects.

$20 Fine For Blacking Eye of Woman With Whom He Boarded

Tony Rontanto was fined $20 and costs, amounting to $25.75, for assaulting Mrs. Carmelo Yenno of Chamberlain Street, on Friday night, at the residence of Mrs. Basciano, 540 General Street. The complainant, a slim little woman of sharp features and snapping eyes, one of which was adorned with a discoloured patch her boarder, Tony, hung up with his fist, between 6 and 7 p.m. on Friday Mrs. Yenno, with her baby, called at the Basciano home. A little later Rontanto arrived, and, sad to say, the worse of liquor. Mrs. Yenno offered him the key to her house and told him he had better go home. Her baby was ill and she was going to remain for a while where she was. Tony was in no hurry home, but he said Mrs. Yenno had to go, too. He tried to take her child from her and when she resisted he struck her twice on the face, causing her nose to bleed. Mrs. Basciano put him out, but he re-entered the house and, grasping Mrs. Yenno by one arm, struck her between the eyes with his fist. A cloth, showing many blood-stains, was exhibited as evidence that the woman's nose had bled profusely.

Rontanto offered no defence.

He pleaded not guilty to an additional charge of conduct in a public place. However, there was no evidence against him, Mrs. Yenno stating that he had not caused a disturbance on the street, and this charge was dropped.

DARING AVIATOR SAID TO BE PETERBORO' MAN

Lieut. Mullock, Canadian Birdman Set Fire to German Zeppelin Sheds in Brussels—Flew Through Rain of Shells to Get Close Enough to Do Damage

OTTAWA, Nov. 8.—A thrilling story of the wonderful exploit of a young Canadian aviator, Lieut. Mullock of Peterborough, who flew to Brussels and did damage to German Zeppelin sheds and aerodrome quarters there is told by Major McKelvey Bell, in a letter received here. He says:

"I saw one of the Canadian flying men, Lieut. Mullock, of Peterborough, who is attached to the Naval Flying Corps. He had just come back from a flight to Brussels. He started off in a mist and rain and flew over a mile high above the clouds, and he said that every time he came down a little to see where he was the Germans opened fire on him, and fired so accurately that he had great difficulty in dodging the shells. After he had been travelling nearly an hour and a half he came down through the clouds and below him was a great, beautiful city, the most beautiful city he ever saw, with wide streets and splendid buildings. He knew where the Germans had their aerodromes and he made direct for one of them. It was a large building painted in green and red and yellow, so that from a height it looked like the ground. He swooped down towards it and the Germans opened fire on him with their guns, so that the shells burst all around him. Some of the shells were of a new type, which sent thousands of little balls of fire at him, he thinks with the idea of setting his aeroplane on fire.

"He sailed through them all and dropped a bomb on the building, then made another circle and dropped another one, and then another, and all the time bullets were passing him. One bullet went through the machine but did not hit him. Then he threw out more bombs and turned for home. The Zeppelin shed was on fire by this time.

"The rain was driving so hard that every time he put his head out to see where he was, it cut his face and he could not see where he was going. Then again he had only enough gasoline left to carry him straight home, and if he made a mistake he would have descended into the German lines. He said that every time he came down a little to see where he was, the Germans met him with showers of shrapnel and it was very dangerous to come down closer than a mile from the earth.

"After a long while he came down a little and there was no firing, so he concluded that he must be over France. He turned towards the coast and when he got there found himself almost home.

"Lieut. Mullock left Ottawa as a sergeant-major in the 1st Artillery Brigade with Lieut.-Col. Morrison. There are a lot of Canadian boys in the flying corps and they are very brave and daring and withal are just as modest over their exploits as the Englishmen."

As far as the Examiner has been able to find out Lieut. Mullock is not a Peterborough man. Peterborough has three of her sons in the Royal Naval Air Service, Sub. Flight Lieutenants Norman Geale, Leo. Stevens and Harold Meldrum, but the first two are graduates of the Toronto Aviation School, and the last named left Canada with the Borden Armoured Battery and transferred to the flying corps in England.

Germany and Italy Are on Better Terms

ROME, via Paris, Nov. 8.—Existing relations between Italy and Germany again are the object of interest among Italian political observers, owing to the lack of declaration of war upon either side because both countries seemingly are avoiding anything which might embitter their intercourse.

Reports from Berlin say that several thousand Italian workmen still are living in Germany unmolested—indeed, enjoying the thorough protection of the authorities there — while many Germans continue to reside in Italy without suffering any injury.

What is more remarkable, in the opinion of prominent Italians, is that negotiations are actually taking place with a view to an exchange between the two countries of certain products which do not bear directly on the war.

In some well informed quarters it is thought that when Italy denounced the Triple Alliance and joined the Entente Allies she made a declaration to the Entente that her participation in the war was limited to fighting Austria-Hungary, with the object of conquering the Italian provinces still subject to Austrian rule, at the same time stating that she did not wish to extend the hostilities to Germany. The situation, it is pointed out, might enable the two countries to help each other in given circumstances.

SUNDAY SERVICES AT THE ASSEMBLY HALL

The dividing effect of the "Cross of Christ" was the theme last night in the Assembly Hall, the text being taken from 1st Cor. i., 18 :" The preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness, but unto us which are saved it is the power of God." It was stated that in the sight of God the whole human family is divided into two classes. The scriptures define them clearly. In the Old Testament we read of "the good" and "the evil," "the wicked" and "the righteous," in Proverbs of "the wise" and "the simple." "In the days of His flesh" the Lord Jesus spoke only of two roads, the broad and the narrow, two destinies, "heaven" and "hell." He spoke of "those who believed" and "those who believed not." In the Epistles we read of "vessels of wrath" and "vessels of mercy," "children of light" and "children of darkness," the "just and the unjust," and in the verse quoted "them that perish" and "us who are saved." This division is effected by the "preaching of the cross." The cross literally "put a difference" between the two malefactors; one "rejoiced to see that fountain in his day," the other "received the due reward of his deeds."

From a human standpoint the cross was the scene of the greatest outrage ever committed, but from God's side it was the greatest exhibition of love ever shown. The all-important question for each to ask is "on which side of the cross do I stand?"

Soldiers Must Guard Against Temptations

Rev. J. A. MacKenzie Reminds Them of the Goliath of Temptation Within Their Own Gates

FINE MUSICAL SERVICE

In his sermon to the officers and men of the 93rd Battalion at Knox church on Sunday morning, the pastor, Rev. J. A. Mackenzie, B.A., portrayed the combat of David and Goliath, and impressed upon the men in khaki that the present situation was to be met by their youth, skill and that courage born of a triumphant faith in God. His text from the Book of Samuel, "And Saul said unto David, go and the Lord be with thee," prepared the way for Rev. Mr. MacKenzie's particular emphasis upon the fact that it was David's faith which clothed him with invincible power, and enabled him to prevail over the giant Philistine. Youth is essential. It is the spirit that never thinks of defeat, that endures hardships, that brings the assurance to a man that he can fight a little longer and a little better than his opponents. Skill is very necessary, and, in this connection Mr. MacKenzie urged the men to be thorough in their work. David's skill with his sling was not miraculous, as that word is generally understood. It was acquired by long practice while he was following his sheep. But courage springing from faith in God is the deciding factor. Saul's faith was gone; but David trusted in God, and was able to accomplish what older men would not attempt. The great factor in the last analysis is God, and Mr. Mackenzie remarked that the men would realize this before they were through with the business of war.

To Meet Two Goliaths.

In applying the prayer in his text to the men of the 93rd, Mr. MacKenzie said that they were going to meet certain Goliaths. One was within their own gates. It was the Goliath of temptation which did not loudly bawl out its challenges as did the giant of Gath across the valley of Elah, but whispered them in an ingratiating manner and presented them in pleasing dress. The soldier's life was open to great temptations. The men were away from home, they were under a heavy strain, they were rubbing shoulders with those who were not particular about their conduct This Goliath is the enemy of all the world seeking to strike away one's inward happiness and peace. Mr. MacKenzie urged the men to fear not this Goliath but to leave him the vanquished and them the victors. With the other Goliath of arrogant militarism, the pastor dealt at some length.

The music of the morning service was most appropriate to the occasion and was well rendered. The organist, Mr. Geo. Kenyon, played the "March of the Israelites" as the soldiers entered the church, and on retiring Handel's "Hallelujah." At the offertory Private Tom Smith played a cello solo with organ accompaniment, his selection being the andante from the A minor concerto by Geo. Gaultermann. The quartette, "God is a Spirit" by Misses Kenyon and Williamson and Messrs. Humpage and Smith, and the choir's anthems were presented with fine effect.

Very neat was the snub administered to a too pushful tradesman by a certain noble lord.

The tradesman—a rich tailor—had been invited to chat with the nobleman. There was a large gathering and the man of cloth, proud of the distinction conferred upon him, eyed the other sportsmen with critical eye, and observed, loftily:

"Rather a mixed company, my lord."

"Why," was the smiling retort, "did you expect they would all be tailors?"

MORAL SUASION ON DUTCH DRUNKARDS

Reformers Find the Methods of the Hague Consultation Bureau Effective

THE HAGUE, Nov. 8.—"If you are a victim of alcohol come and talk it over with us at the Consultation Bureau at The Hague!" In this helpful spirit a strong effort is being made by the Dutch authorities to combat the evil of over-indulgence in intoxicants.

The bureau has been installed in spacious premises in the centre of the city, and every Wednesday an eminent medical man and other helpers are in attendance to give friendly advice and to find work for men and women addicted to intemperance who find themselves virtually outcasts owing to their unfortunate habits. It has been found that "talking at" those people who have fallen victims to the drink habit has proved in most cases ineffective, and now the method of appealing to reason and human feelings is being tried with apparently good results.

Many men and women attend these weekly consultations, coming from all parts of the country—generally, it must be said, at the instance of well-wishing employee and to report results. No sermon is read, but the applicant is asked in a kindly way about his or her occupation and mode of life in general and as to the cause of his or her lack of occupation. Usually the reply indicates the person's lack of will power when invited to drink. The doctor inquires why the victim does not refuse the liquor, and the answer generally comes: "I cannot, for then I am asked the reason, and I don't know what to say!" "Why!" says the doctor, "now you can tell them that the doctor orders you not to take intoxicants. Try that for a week and then come back and see me."

In most instances work is provided for the drink victim and the employer is requested and consents to exercise a kind of friendly supervision over his employee and to report results.

Reports to the bureau show that the system is working well in hundreds of cases, especially when the man or woman is comparatively young.

Meanwhile a campaign is also being carried on by the numerous abstinence societies throughout the country to combat the drink evil. Congresses were held in the third week of September at Deventer by the General Netherlands Total Abstainers' Union, and at Utrecht by the National Commission to Counteract Alcoholism, while at Utrecht an exposition was held to show the bad effects of indulgence in strong drink.

Some of the military commanders in Holland have issued strict orders in the garrison cities under martial law to prevent excessive drinking.

THESE DARK DAYS

For the process of making and fitting Dr. W. H. Lacey's eye-glasses and spectacles, scrupulous exactness and precision characterizes every step. Our service invites comparison. Our examining room is so fitted and arranged that any hour of the day or night is equally good for examinations and fitting. These dark days cause some to notice any defect in vision or eye-strain. It is a mistake to suppose that an examination can only be made on bright days. We use a dark room and artificial light, so we can give equally good results on the dark, dreary days of November as on bright, sunny days. "See us and see better." Currant Mint Jelly.
Dauphine Potatoes.
Apple Pie. Lemon Pie.
Chocolate Cake.

Mrs. Brown-Lewers, the famous Better Foods, Better Homes lecturer, who opened the Examiner Home Economics School in the Conservatory of Music this afternoon, is charmed with the progressiveness of Peterborough. Its fine public buildings and its beautiful homes have made a very favorable impression upon her. This is exceedingly gratifying to our citizens, for Mrs. Brown-Lewers has travelled all over the Globe and seen all of its most beautiful cities. Her praise is therefore, worth considerable.

Night Session, Thursday.

Women who heard this teacher this afternoon at the opening session of the Examiner Better Foods Better Homes School, and tasted the delicious food prepared by her, are pleased with the announcement that there will be two sessions on Thursday. They wish there might be two sessions every day, but this is quite impossible for her to stand the strain of both an afternoon and evening session six or seven days of the week. She does, however, consent to hold one evening session for such women as are not able to attend in the afternoon, and also invites the business men of the city to attend this evening session. Silver cake and other delicious foods were served this afternoon and samples of this clever cooks' skill will be passed through the audience at every session of the Examiner Better Foods Better Homes school.

Teaches Pastry Making.

Thursday she will make a sunshine cake; Wednesday, a Weary Willie cake, and on Friday will demonstrate a very old and interesting recipe for English Tea Cakes. This teacher has paid quite as much attention to the making of good pastry as to biscuits and bread and cake baking, and will to-morrow afternoon make and serve apple and lemon pie.

The feature of this Better Foods Better Homes work which pleases most, is, that it is extremely practical and appeals to every woman who keeps house. If her talk to-morrow afternoon on 'Economical Marketing' she will give out a considerable amount of helpful information in regard to the wise spending of money.

Women who are interested in preparing well-balanced economical meals for their families with a view to keeping each member mentally, morally and physically fit at all times recognizing that this can only be done through good foods, will enjoy and profit by this lecture and cookery course. Mrs. Brown-Lewers emphasizes the matter of variety in planning all menus and shows how this may be done without in any way increasing the market bills.

Weary Willie Icing.

To each egg white, UNBEATEN, use four tablespoonfuls granulated sugar.

Place whites and sugar in a thin bowl, set over a pot of boiling water, being careful that the bowl does not TOUCH the water.

Stir slowly (not beat) JUST EXACTLY five minutes. Remove from heat and beat vigorously. If the icing does not get stiff enough, return to steam and beat for one or two minutes longer.

Never beat over five minutes the first time or the icing will sugar.

RIGHTEOUSNESS EXALTETH A NATION

Missionary Sermon at Mark Street by Rev. C. E. Manning of Toronto

"He shall have dominion also from sea to sea and from the river unto the ends of the earth."—Ps. 72: 8.

This was the text chosen by the Rev. C. E. Manning, assistant secretary of Home Missions, for his missionary appeal to the people of Mark street Methodist church, Sunday night. Combined with it was a masterly oration on the greatness of Canada, wherein he dwelt on the magnificent possibilities ahead of our Dominion, and the place she would surely occupy in the years to come.

The Fathers of Confederation, during their deliberations were considering an appropriate name for the federated provinces. Name after name was proposed. At length Sir Leonard Tilley rose up, pointed to the map, and drew attention to its vastness, extending from the Atlantic on the east to the Pacific on the west, from the border line of the United States to the North Pole, also to the mighty St. Lawrence threading its way to the Inland seas, and closed his remarks with the quotation: "He shall have dominion also from sea to sea and from the river unto the ends of the earth." As if by a common inspiration the name "Dominion of Canada" was unanimously chosen. Was is mere coincidence? It would seem that the hand of God was making it prophetic of fact. "For He must reign, till He hath put all enemies under His feet."

Canada truly is a great country, and it is hard to surmise what the future has in store.

Many believe that the experiences of the individual are repeated in the life of a nation. They argue: We come into the world helpless, pass from childhood to youth, from youth to maturer years, and on to old age finally. "It is appointed unto men once to die." Therefore there is only one destiny for Canada, Britain, Germany, United States, and all other nations. They point to the past lined by the ruins of nations that have been and are not. Greece, Persia, Babylon, once flourished, then came upon evil days, crumbled and decayed, and are now known only in history.

But why should the experience of the individual be repeated in the case of Canada? Canada seems to possess all the elements of permanency.

In the first place, no nation is great that is not great in material things. Great Britain and her allies are fighting a terrible foe. Mr. Asquith long ago remarked that the last hundred million dollars would win the war. Britain is great because she is the wealthiest nation in the world.

What country has brighter prospects than Canada? Her 3,500 miles from east to west, 1,400 miles from the United States to the North Pole; 300 million acres of fertile land untouched, 100 million acres of pasture land, and a perennial source of wealth in her forests which will be as fertile 100 years from now as they are to-day, if properly looked after; great coal and iron mines, as well as silver and gold; fisheries yielding 30 millions a year, and timber lands practically unlimited. What country has brighter prospects than Canada?

Yet, material things, in themselves, never made a nation great.

Canada will never become a great nation without righteousness. If Canada is to become a great country, she must have great citizens, great in intellect and in moral character; men and women with the fear of God in their hearts. It is the moral ideals of a people that determine the standing or falling of a nation. "Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people."

After the victory at Waterloo Victor Hugo was asked who defeated Napoleon. His reply was: "Napoleon bothered God."

To lay the foundation of national greatness is the work of the church, and this is being furthered in Canada by missionary endeavours, first among English speaking people in the west as well as in the older provinces.

The Missionary Society helps support workers in the west for about two and one half years, when they usually become self-supporting. At the present time there are 16 communities in Alberta, alone, who are without any Protestant preached administering to their spiritual welfare.

Generic, among European communities. This work is being carried on in Winnipeg, Fort William, Crow's Nest Pass, Vancouver and in some parts of Ontario.

Truly the work is great. By 1921 Canada will have a large population. Lord Strathcona has predicted 50 million by the end of this century. Dr. Grant places the figures at 150 million, which the speaker thought was a more likely estimate.

At the beginning of the last century the United States had about the same number of people as we had at the beginning of this century. During the hundred years the United States increased eighty million; surely Canada will increase more rapidly.

When the United States began to develop she had no nation of 100 million alongside her. Canada, however, is in that position to-day.

Great multitudes will flock to our shores when the war is over. Travelling has been made easy compared with 100 years ago. Then it took a month or more to cross the Atlantic, and the voyage was extremely uncomfortable and dangerous; now the trip can be accomplished in less than a week and becomes a delightful holiday on board a floating palace.

Even travelling in Canada has changed. He recalled the leave taking of his brother, a former pastor of St. James' Methodist church, from his home to take up missionary duties at White Fish Lake in the Northwest Territories. He was a delicate boy, and the farewell was particularly sad on that account, as the aged father did not expect to see his boy again. He and his family journeyed by way of Chicago, and on north to the boundary. From there to Winnipeg their goods went by ox-cart, while they themselves travelled by buck-board. From Winnipeg 400 miles across the continent by the same crude method of transportation.

They were all summer getting to their destination. Now, the speaker could leave Toronto at night and travel across the continent in four days, in the luxury of a Pullman car.

All of which would facilitate immigration, filling up the waste places of the Dominion.

However, great resources, and great population do not make a country great.

China with a population of 400 million is a helpless nation, a plaything in the hands of other nations.

If Canada is to become a great country

A Trained Nurse Writes

"I am a trained nurse and have been using Crisco for some time, in cooking for the sick. I much prefer using it in place of lard, as the latter renders foods so indigestible when cooked with it."

The letter, of which the above is the main part, is but one among many which have been received during the past four years by the makers of Crisco.

CRISCO
For Frying

Your own experience will agree with that of this nurse, if you will give Crisco a thorough trial.

Try it, not in one thing, but in all—cake-baking, pastry-making, frying—wherever you are accustomed to use lard or butter or any substitute for these.

Crisco will not fail you—or fail to measure up to the good opinions of it that are held by its many users.

Entire City of Havre Devoted to War Making

No Flags Nor Confusion Just Work--Nothing Now Fit Place of Storage--Visitors Not Welcome

(BY HERBERT COREY).

HAVRE, Oct 3 (by mail).—Imagine a great city utterly given over to the business of war making. If you can get that picture before the eyes of your mind you can see Havre as it is to-day. No flags or hurrahs, understand. No bustle, gun-firing, dust, confusion, general officers, epaulets, or music. Merely a factory town which takes in raw material over the pier and sends it out in finished form over the railroad.

"Fifty thousand British soldiers reached here one week and were sent on to the Front," said a resident who has had unusual opportunities for observation.

"The town must have been hysterical."

"Not at all. You would hardly know that anything was happening. War has become a business."

Havre is the fourth of the great Channel cities the British have taken over to facilitate the work of fighting the German. Boulogne and Calais and Dieppe are the principal gateways for troops and supplies. Havre is at a greater distance from the fighting line, and therefore is used as a base. Tenderfoot troops come here to be hardened for a little time before they are sent forward to the trenches. A circle of convalescent camps surround the city. Millions of pounds' worth of supplies are received here and held against orders. The city has become a storage place, in which is warehoused men and motors, and food and cannon. It has no business except war.

VISITORS HELD UP.

The visitor makes this discovery before he is fairly in the town. When he attempts to leave the railroad station his laisser-passers and his passport and his tickets are examined by officials. If he is a native born a French official attends to him. If he speaks English he is turned over to a Scotland Yard man. The yardsman wears a British uniform, but he is a London detective to his last inch. He is inquisitive, courteous and efficient. Sometimes the visitor stays right there in the station, waiting for the next train out. Sometimes he gets his orders:

"Go to the Hotel Moderne."

It may be the visitor had formed other plans. Possibly he doesn't like the Hotel Moderne. No matter. He goes to the Hotel Moderne. There he discovers that all the hotels in town have been taken over by the military. Some are in use as hospitals. The guests at the other for the most part wear officers' khaki. They are fresh-faced British boys, as a rule, not yet seared and hardened by the ordeal of the trench. With them are many Belgians, indistinguishable as to the uniform nowadays from the British, but quite different in appearance. There are occasional Scotsmen.

Havre is under a dual control that on occasions becomes tripled. The British are in complete charge as to certain phases of the local government. The French are in equally complete control of other phases. The Belgian capital is now located here, so far as Belgium has a capital. The various Belgian departments are housed here and there about town, and all the diplomatic representatives once accredited to Belgium are here, except the American and Spanish Ministers and, of course, the Ministers of the Central Powers. One's first conclusion is that a wild confusion is inevitable. Later on one discovers that this tripartite administration is not only efficient, but courteous.

"You will present yourself to the French military authorities," was the order I received.

THEY KNEW COREY.

In the course of the day I reported myself all over the lot, to French, English, Belgian, city authorities everywhere else. I found they all knew all about me in advance, and all sought to do what they could to make things easy for me. It seems perfectly easy nowadays to make an efficient organization in one army. But when three nations undertake to run one town for the purpose of making war, as France and England and Belgium are running Havre, and manage to do so with so little fuss, noise or misunderstanding, it seems to me the fact is worth reporting. There must be a marvellous give-and-take somewhere.

There are perhaps 100,000 British soldiers in Havre. That figure is the purest guesswork. There was a time when there were 200,000 soldiers of all nations there, gossip says. The military population fluctuates. But no one asks questions in a "base camp." There is a vague rumour of a German-American woman whose papers were all right, but who had an itching curiosity about the movement of ships in the harbour. Nothing happened to her which could disturb international relations, but she felt an urge to get out of town. In places like Havre one is well advised not to neglect a hunch like that. It saves time always, and sometimes it prevents an attack of cell-rheumatism and occasionally it obviates the need of floral tributes. To return to the 100,000 soldiers.

Nothing gets into camp that is not wanted there. One of the most prominent American residents of France wanted to see that camp. He has millions, a place in society, letters from ambassadors of sorts, and he has been infinitely helpful in this war.

TURNING DOWN A MILLIONAIRE.

"What do you want to visit the camp for?" said the British officer in charge of the issuance of passes.

"Mere curiosity," said the American.

"Sorry," said the British officer. "You can't go. I don't want to see your letters."

In peace times Havre is the second commercial port of France. Its system of docks is especially noteworthy. When war came the docks automatically became a part of the military organization. Ships with war cargoes took precedence in them. One ship with a peace cargo lay in the harbour for five weeks, and was then only discharged because she was needed to carry a war freight. Once there were seventy-five ships lying in the roadstead, while ships were ranged five and six deep at the docks. To-day that congestion has practically disappeared.

"Havre's imports are greater than they have ever been in her history," said an official. "But they may never show on the reports."

Take a sample of the business that is being done and the way it is being done. In a single week 5,000 motor trucks were swung out of shipholds here. They were assembled on the docks, their tanks filled, and they were driven to another part of the docks, where they were loaded with supplies for the front. Their trial trip was to go hunting over roads that had been torn to pieces by military traffic, to charge of drivers who thought they were triumphant if they stayed on the roads, and headed until their steel frames twisted.

Havre's war activities are not confined to the harbour and the camp. In peace times the picturesque portion of the water front is dotted with very handsome villas. The owners of the villas have been turned out. To-day soldiers in the butchery blue uniform of the British convalescent peer out of these windows. One is rarely out of the range of the iodoform. The Belgian chief of staff occupies what was once a summer hotel.

MEMORY OF A NATION.

One of the most touching memories of the war is that of the salute to the Belgian flag at the close of day.

Perhaps a dozen men and women refugees from a ruined land, watched it with their hearts in their eyes. An officer with one arm in a sling gave the orders. A soldier with a band about his head fired a little trench mortar—a pitiful mortar that had been "cast" because it was unfit for the real work of war. The half-dozen soldiers attached to headquarters came smartly to salute. As the last rays of the sun glimmered on the blue sea the Belgian flag fluttered down. It seemed a courageous exile.

In one narrow, stone-walled lane I heard the sound of children singing. At first the air was elusive. Then we recognized it through the quaint disguise of language and race, and little piping voices.

"Tipperary," said my companion. "France will never be rid of it."

A long double line of little ones came down the steep road. Belgian orphans, some one said. They were being shepherded by two stout, young British subalterns, who grinned as they passed us, but sang lustily on. We tried to hire a cab. For a long time we were unsuccessful. Havre cabmen, it appears, are specializing in trips to and from the camps and docks.

There may be businesses here which are not connected with the business of war, but they are hard to find. The department stores have bought almost no new goods since hostilities opened. Their windows look like a rummage sale. Upon the authority of a worried father their toy departments contain only the toys which outlived the Christmas demand of 1913. The only additions they have made to their stock is of khaki, blue shirts for soldiers, waterproof shoes, and trench tinware. We went into a bookstore.

ALL BUSINESS IS OF WAR.

"Maps, gentlemen?" asked the proprietor. We said we didn't want any maps.

"Then English novels, or perhaps postcards?" said he.

His guess was right. He said he had not sold a book of any sort in weeks, except paper-covered novels to the soldiers. His business was solely a war business. In peace Havre does a certain amount of business in seaweed and flint pebbles. The seaweed is being gathered for use in soldiers mattresses. No one is bothering to gather pebbles, for the pottery business has lapsed during the war. One of the most popular brands of after dinner cordials is made near here. The manufactory has been turned in to a hospital. The cure of one of the churches said that his congregations nowadays are almost exclusively soldiers.

On the Place Gambetta is a rather popular restaurant. Last night every guest was in uniform, with the exception of some wives of officers and half a dozen civilians, who were obviously here on business connected with the war. Every public or semi-public building in town is harbouring at least one annex of the war. It is doubtful if a motor car is being operated in town except for war purposes, except the two or three taxicabs, which still ply between stations and hotels, and their business is almost altogether with officers. The men who remain in Havre are either physically deficient or engaged on war work. The work which once was done by men is now being handled by women. A woman is sweeping the street in front of the hotel. There are women porters at the little railway stations in the outskirts of the city. The local Y.M.C.A. keeps a number of light cars constantly busy. All are at work for the war.

There is a complete lack of the bustle and confusion which one instantly looks for in a "base camp." Every day a certain number of ships come in, and others which have been unloaded go back for more war freight. Wounded men arrive from the front for a stay in the convalescent camps. New soldiers come in from Britain to be hardened up for a time in camp before being sent on to the front. Men who have been fighting come back for a rest. Motor lorries thump continually through the streets. No one is drunk, no one is in a hurry, no one pauses. Khaki-clad men stand about the streets on "town leave," but they hold themselves erect and do not loaf. One gets the impression of a ceaseless and orderly activity.

War has become a business.

AGED GRANDMOTHER

Right here in Peterborough we have seen such excellent results from Vinol that it is a pleasure to know it is doing so much good for old people in other parts of the country.

Woodbridge, N. J.—"My Grandma was recovering from the grippe and was so weak she could hardly stand, and as she keeps house for my father and myself, she could not get around at all. She had taken cod liver oil and many other medicines, but nothing seemed to do her any good. At last we heard of Vinol and tried it, and Grandma commenced to feel better right away, and got strong very soon, so she gets around as well as ever. We all praise Vinol for it is a splendid medicine." Myrtle H. Bunn.

The reason Vinol is so successful in restoring strength to the aged is because of the rare combination of tonic iron, the curative medicinal extractives of fresh cods' livers, beef peptone and mild native wine. It supplies iron to the blood, quickens the appetite, aids digestion, promotes proper assimilation of food, and enriches the blood, and brings back the strength of renewed health.

A BIRDS EYE VIEW OF "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" TO BE SEEN HERE SOON

Premier performance, March 3, 1915, at the Liberty Theatre, New York. Some of the subsequent productions were: Tremont Theatre, Boston, Mass., beginning April 10; Illinois Theatre, Chicago, Ill., starting June 8; Brighton Beach Music Hall, N.Y., July 5; Nixon Theatre, Atlantic City, N.J., July 19. All these were long runs of many months, the five separate companies aggregating a total attendance of 10,000 patrons weekly. Never before has a play run half a year simultaneously in so many cities, including also seventeen weeks in Los Angeles and eighteen weeks in San Francisco.

In Canada, "The Birth of a Nation" was first booked for a try-out at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, Toronto. Immediately following its announcement the house was sold out solid for every evening performance. Daily matinees were given, and still the capacity was overtaxed. It was held over for a second, third and fourth week, playing twice daily. The engagement had to terminate on account of other bookings that could not be cancelled.

In Montreal the same condition prevailed. "The Birth of a Nation" created new records in Toronto and Montreal. Never before was it found necessary to hold over any high-class production for more than two weeks in order to satisfy the demand for tickets.

Produced by David W. Griffith, the foremost of directors and pioneer of the new art. Suggested by Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman."

The play contains 5,000 scenes; presents 18,000 actors and 3,000 horses; cost $500,000 for actual production expense, and took eight months to produce. Story divided in two acts. Total time of performance, two hours and forty minutes.

Some of the greatest battles of the Civil War re-enacted. A production of Atlanta as it was in 1864, built up to be destroyed by fire, in the picture of Sherman's march to the sea. Lee and Grant shown at Appomattox; Ford's Theatre, Washington, reproduced to the smallest details for the Lincoln tragedy. Reconstruction pictorialized in the actual South Carolina scenes, climaxing with a series of wild Ku Klux Klan rides that commandeered a county for a day and cost $90,000.

Women's dresses used 12,000 yards and Ku Klux costumes 25,000 yards of cloth.

Night photoplay of battle scenes invented and perfected at cost of $5,000.

Wonderful artillery duels in which real shells — costing $60 apiece were used. Miles of trenches—thousands of Confederate and Federal fighters —"war as it actually is."

First time in the history of theatricals for a motion picture to be handled and presented as a regular attraction. It requires two sixty-foot cars to transport the equipment. A regular travelling organization of fifty people, with its own stage director, crew, musicians, operators and mechanical experts to readjust the theatres to scientific local requirements. Not depending solely on local musicians, a complete symphonic orchestra is carried. The musical score is synchronized to the several thousand distinct and individual scenes.

The spectacle has met strong opposition at various times but has been approved by every Board of Censors in Canada and the United States, and by scores and scores of the most eminent Senators and Representatives, Governors of States, Judges, Publicists, diplomats, educators and clergymen. It has been viewed and commended by a larger number of priests and ministers than had ever previously approved a theatric entertainment.

Receipts and attendance have likewise made a new page of theatrical history. Within the first eight months the gross attendance was approximately 1,500,000. Receipts have dwarfed those of "Ben Hur" and every other great spectacle hitherto presented.

Artistically, "The Birth of a Nation" combines exquisite domestic comedy and romance with the grandeur and thrill of History's greatest moments, inculcating the lesson of patriotism that springs from the "nation re-born" as the result of War between the States and Reconstruction.

Seven members of the 93rd Battalion were on the line-up of the Collegiate Old Boys' team in the Rugby game against the Collegiate, Saturday. They were Sergt. W. Lemay, Corp. E. Brown, Pte. Sloan, Frost, Brown, Patterson and Horsfield.

Major Sears, the officer commanding the 33rd Battery, C.F.A., for which Peterborough has supplied so many men, paid a visit to Lt.-Col. Johnston at the armouries this morning.

Lieut. Carter, who has been attached to the 77th Regiment, Ottawa, has been transferred to the 93rd Battalion and has notified Lt.-Col. Johnston that he will report for duty to-day.

Lieut. H. C. Gillam of the 5th Princess Louise Dragoon Guards, Ottawa, has been appointed signalling officer of the 93rd Battalion. Lieut. Gillam is at present in attendance at the School of Cavalry and will report for duty here on Nov. 17th.

Capt. Rollins, quartermaster of the 93rd Battalion, reported for duty this morning, as did Captain Gordon Hall of the 57th Regiment. Lieut. Worth and Capt. Loch will take up their new duties this week, the latter on Saturday.

The football and Rugby games at Riverside Park on Saturday netted $10.40 for the Band Fund. The 93rd wish to thank the owners of Riverside Park for lending the grounds free of charge, and the Collegiate and Normal teams for furnishing the games.

There have been some arguments among the Peterborough soldiers ever since it was known that the local battalion was to be the 93rd, as to what unit in the British Army had the same number. It will be interesting therefore to point out that the corresponding regiment in the Imperial Army is the Princess Louise Argyll and Sutherland regiment, which took in the old 91st and 93rd. The regiment in the Canadian militia which bears the same number as Peterborough's overseas battalion is the 93rd Cumberland Regiment, Spring Hill, Nova Scotia.

Lieut. R. J. Moore, one of the newly appointed officers to the 93rd Battalion, reported for duty to-day, and has been posted to C Company at Lindsay.

Bandsmen Waino and Neal, formerly of the Salvation Army Band, Hamilton, reported for duty with the 93rd Band, to-day.

At the meeting of the amalgamated T.A.S. on Sunday afternoon Rev. Father Phelan reminded the members, especially the younger members, of the serious need of recruits and the duty which devolves upon the young men capable of bearing arms.

Lieut. Gordon Graham of Peterborough, who returned from the front in the latter part of the summer, and has been engaged in machine gun instruction in the camp, returned to the front yesterday. He was recently married to a Peterborough lady. Lieut. Graham was wounded in operations around St. Julien. He was promoted on the field from a non-commissioned officer to a lieutenant, as a recognition of his excellent services.—Kingston Standard.

FOUR RESERVE BRIGADES ARE IN ENGLAND

OTTAWA, Nov. 8—Additional details have reached Ottawa regarding the composition of the Canadian forces at the front and in training in England. The new Canadian army corps is composed of the first and second divisions, which are complete in themselves, and the corps troops, which consist of Lord Strathcona's Horse, the Royal Canadian Dragoons, two brigades of Canadian Mounted Rifles, the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, the Royal Canadian Regiment of Infantry, the 42nd Montreal Battalion, and the 49th Edmonton Battalion. General Alderson, as already announced, commands the corps. Among those attached to his staff is Major C. H. L. Beatty, D.S.O., a brother of Admiral Sir David Beatty.

The cavalry brigade is in command of Lt.-Col. A. W. Peterkin, 2nd. Dragoon Guards, Lieut.-Col. R. W. Paterson, 19th Alberta Dragoons, Lieut.-Col. W. Sanford, Strathcona's Horse, Lieut.-Col. [illegible], 12th Manitoba Dragoons, Lieut.-Col. [illegible], 6th Dragoon Guards, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, Lieut.-Col. [illegible], Royal Canadian Horse Artillery. The cavalry division artillery consists of the 1st, 2nd and 3rd brigades, Canadian Field Artillery, which forms the Canadian Artillery corps of the training division. The Canadian Engineers training corps is in command of Lieut.-Col. J. M. Macleod, R.E.

For their more effective administration and training the various infantry units of the Canadian training division have been organized into four new reserve brigades. They are constituted as follows: The infantry corps brigade, headquarters at St. Martin's Plain, Lt.-Col. A. Liner is On Fire at Sea

AMERICANS' DEATHS LAID TO THE TURKS

The strain and shock of the travedies that the war has brought to Turkey during the last year is responsible for the deaths of five of the American missionaries on duty in the Turkish Empire since the first of last May, the period covered by the Turkish campaign against the Armenians, according to the annual report of the Rev. Dr. James L. Barton, the foreign secretary of the Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions, made public here yesterday.

The missionaries whose deaths are attributed to the terrible conditions in Turkey where Mrs. Mary E. Barnum, died at Harpoot, May 9, after fifty-six years of service in Turkey; Mrs. Charlotte E. Ely, died at Bitlis, July 11, after forty-seven years' continuous service; the Rev. George P. Knapp, died at Diarbekr, Aug. 10, after twenty-five years' service at Harpoot and at Bitlis; Mrs. Martha W. Reynolds, wife of the Rev. Dr. George C. Reynolds, died Aug. 27, from injuries received while in flight from Van to Tiflis, Russia, and Mrs. Elizabeth Ussher, died of typhus fever at Van, July 14, after sixteen years of service.

The report goes into the war situation in detail. Among the hundreds of thousands of Armenians and other Christians who perished in Turkey, Dr. Barton states, were "professors and teachers in our schools, pastors and preachers, pupils, and all other classes," every one of whom, he adds, "miserably perished at home, or have died of exposure upon the road toward northern Arabia or elsewhere, where vast multitudes have been exiled."

"Probably in all history," Dr. Barton continues, "two hundred missionaries have never been called on to pass through more terrible experiences than have our missionaries in Turkey during the last nine of ten months, and the end is not yet."

Referring to the treatment of Americans by the Turkish authorities, Dr. Barton says that when Harpoot was made a military centre several of the buildings of Euphrates College were voluntarily turned over to the Turkish military authorities. A large dormitory was not and the American Consul sealed the door with the official seal of the United States.

"This seal," adds Dr. Barton, "was ostentatiously broken by the Kaimakam of Harpoot, and so since March the college has discontinued its work altogether. The mission buildings at Afion and Kara Hissar were early taken possession of by the Government, as was the school building at Adabazar.

"In their dealing with Americans the officials have assumed that the decree of abrogation of the capitulations has put all foreigners under local official control. As a result their houses as well as their persons have been searched repeatedly, their communications with the United States Consul and even with the Ambassador have often been suppressed, their movements seriously obstructed, and in one instance, that of Dr. and Mrs. Smith at Diarbekr, they were arrested and sent out of the country by court-martial. No charges worthy of consideration were preferred. Several missionaries have suffered brief periods of imprisonment."

SHOOTING GALLERY.

Messrs. Yeates Bros. who hold the lease of the store formerly occupied by the Peterborough Typewriter Co., under the Town Clock, are tearing out the whole interior of the store, and will put in an up-to-date shooting gallery. They expect to be open by Saturday.

In a recent shooting contest the three brothers, took first, second and third places. Fred won first, Martin second and Nelson third, and their conduct has been as exemplary as their shooting.—Madoc Review.

Many Bodies Lie Beneath Trenches

out" (that is a hole in the ground where you crawl in to live.) If we ever yet poor enough that we can't pay the rent, I will be able to build one for us. Well, you can't dig any place just here without digging into bodies. In Fred's trench there are several places where just the feet and arms are sticking out with a little inscription in French (some unfortunate unknown French soldier).

I think it was Arthur Pullen and some one else crawled from their trench back to a house to see what could be stolen or bought. When they got there a soldier was leaning out of window, fully equipped and dressed. He had been shot through the head about two months previous. He was a Belgian cavalryman. The boys took off his spurs and took his carbine, then buried him at night. These are only a couple of instances of the gruesome sights that I see ed in now is Hell. There are about 9,000 or more dead. In one place I walked over the ground was perfectly spongy with dead. The stench is terrible. You can't dig a "dug-daily. (God strafe the Huns).

You should see some of the little kiddies here with their hands cut off. It was in one house where one of the family was a boy of about 15. He speaks fairly good, though broken English.

He was a Belgian. He told me the Huns shot his father down because he refused to give information about British positions. The boy's father was a hotelkeeper. The lad went on to say that the Huns cut off his mother's breasts and his sisters, shot one girl of about 20, and took his other three sisters, from 10 to 27, off with them to their trenches. (You can guess the rest). God help Germany once we get on their territory.

I am writing this letter midst the roars of heavy guns; the fire of our battalion is gradually dwindling. Our company has been fortunate. We haven't had a man from Peterborough hit yet, but have received plenty of casualties in the company, about 25. I have met quite a number of Peerborough men who went out with the 1st Division. Their number is very small believe me. They have just relieved us from our last position.

It's great to meet a friend from your own home town. I met fellows with the Lancashire Battery that I used to go to school with. One fellow, Jim Musker, was with me in South Africa. Your father should see some of the farm machinery over her. Some of it is all hand work, ploughs, harrows, scuzlers. Charlie Manners is cooking for the signallers. Remember me to Tom Miller if you see him. Tell Mrs. Batterson that Fred is fine and going good. Harry Ward is in the record office.

GALLIENI HITS FAVORITISM.

Forbids Outside Recommendations in Behalf of French Soldiers.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—General Gallieni's first step as Minister of War was to lead a blow at favouritism. He sent a circular to all the Generals commanding the districts announcing that all letters recommending soldiers, whatever their rank, would be returned to the writers. He furthermore advised the Generals that the soldiers thus recommended would be warned on the first and punished on the second offense.

Ex-Premier Georges Clemenceau has been elected President of the Senate Committee on the Army, in place of Charles de Freycinet, who is Vice President of the Briand Cabinet.

GERMANS FAIL TO PAY BELGIUM FOR SEIZED GOODS

Antwerp Chamber of Commerce Says Germans Owe $12,000,000 for Supplies, But Enforce War Levy

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 8.—The Chamber of Commerce of Antwerp has issued a report written by its President, E. Castelain, to the members of the permanent deputation before the Belgian Government, outlining the steps which the Belgian provinces took to pay the Germans war levy of [illegible] francs, ($[illegible].) The report says:

"The Belgian provinces have just paid the German administration the ninth monthly installment of the war levy of [illegible] francs. They have up to date actually paid out [illegible] francs, of which [illegible] are to be credited to [illegible] imposed specially, with the guarantee given by the German authorities in December, 1914, that indemnity for requisitioned merchandise, or merchandise which would still be requisitioned en bloc, would be paid as soon as possible in currency, in commercial bills of exchange, or in credits on German banks. It therefore remains to our provinces, in order to free our country completely from the heavy burden imposed upon her after four months of invasion and devastation, to make monthly payments for September, October, and November, 1915—that is, another [illegible], of which 15,000,000 are on account of the 60,000,000 special imposition in exchange for the guarantee of prompt payment for requisitioned goods.

"These facts show that for the last nine months Belgium has most scrupulously met the engagements made in her name at the time of the convention relating to war contributions. This convention is, however, of an entirely reciprocal character. Moreover, if Belgium has fulfilled her obligations, the German administration is very much behind with theirs, which is shown clearly by the facts gathered by the Antwerp Chamber of Commerce and from the general commercial world of Antwerp—facts which it is my duty to lay before you gentlemen in all sincerity and with due deference and loyalty.

How Goods Were Seized.

"I had the honour to send you on March 19, last, a duplicate report which I addressed to the Intercommunal Commission on the subject of requisitions en masse which had been imposed on the trade of Antwerp. These requisitions reached an enormous figure, embracing the total amount of stocks in our warehouse and stores accumulated there at the time of the occupation of our town by German troops. The requisitioned goods were for the most part removed from the town during the months of November and December by virtue of might which is greater than right, without any regard to the rights of the owners or holders, without any previous agreement as to the price of the sale. The actual figures of the requisitions, of which I have been able to get details only regarding raw merchandise, this then representing the major part of our imports, have reached and passed 85,000,000 francs. Five months more have passed since I described the situation in my report of March without the smallest improvement in that situation. Payments received since then do not represent a tenth part of the sums still owing. May I also persuade myself to call these so called 'payments,' advances representing some thirty to fifty per cent. of bills, advances made by credits in marks payable at the Reichstag bank, recoverable three months after the conclusion of peace and the payment of which on maturity involves the parties in the risks of exchange to an extent which can be appreciated by all.

"In short, on bases within the limits of my report of March, giving an approximate round value to goods removed from shipping and transport houses, (which I was not able to do before), I can assert that from 60,000,000 to 70,000,000 francs, $12,000,000 to $14,000,000,) for requisitions remain to be paid—requisitions which include nothing but merchandise coming from the various principal sources of commerce of Antwerp; I excluded from my calculations everything relating to the industrial world, factory buildings and yards. I have no facts or authority in this quarter, which is not within the domain of the Chamber of Commerce, but it is general knowledge that here, too, the requisitions have been considerable and should represent in sum total a great number of millions. I shall allow myself to call them to your attention because the interests involved therein have as much right to be included, from the point of view of reparation, of acts and formal engagements by which the Germans and Belgians regulated the matter of requisitions, saying that at first the Germans made many requisitions forcibly in a summary manner. Then, in December, the war levy was fixed at [illegible] francs monthly for a series of twelve months. The Belgians accepted this figure after long hesitation, and after obtaining a formal promise of prompt settlement of [illegible] was raised to [illegible], with prompt settlement stipulated. On January 9, 1915, Governor General von Bissing confirmed this agreement, the reports sets forth, and the promise was made that a body of Belgian business men would be appointed to reach a solution of the problem of payment for irregular requisition. M. Castelain continues: "Of all this gentlemen, nothing has materialized. No commission was appointed at Antwerp, and with few exceptions the requisitions were not paid for."

Whole Plan Changes.

M. Castelain says that in April, through promises made by Senator Strand, President of the German civil administration, it looked as if a solution would be reached, but when the settlement dragged the Senator informed him that the scheme was being recast in Berlin, and that this would take three weeks. A commission was finally organized in Berlin, apparently, according to M. Castelain, to take the place of the promised Antwerp body. This commission prepared questions described as of an inquisitorial character and gave some relatively insignificant advances, finally leaving the question in the state described at the beginning of the report.

M. Castelain maintained that the procedure adopted in Berlin made a complicated thing out of what should have been the simple business transaction of paying for goods which had been seized. He asserts that the time is now ripe to demand of the Germans a fulfillment of their side of the contract, and he argues that liability, citing Article 52 of The Hague Convention of Oct. 18, 1907, which he declares obligates Germany to repay requisitions even without a formal undertaking such as the Belgians signed with them.

"Lastly," he adds, "we have not only a claim under The Hague Convention and international law, but also especially under the simple law—that superior law regarding the word of honour given which is hedged in everywhere with such a character of inviolability that for precise and clearly determined objects, such as is the case here, one honours one's self by recognizing and religiously observing it, even between enemies, even on the battlefield."

After stating that the report has the full approval of the Chamber of Commerce, M. Castelain states that no line of procedure is recommended, but he is convinced that the members of the deputation will take a resolute attitude for enforcement of the Belgian claims, "with the consciousness of defending something of the national heritage at the same time that you will serve the cause of justice and right."

COLLEGIATE TEAM BEAT OLD BOYS

1915 Team Won Easily By 25 Points to 0

The Collegiate Institute team had little difficulty in defeating the Old Boys in the Rugby game which followed the soccer contest at Riverside Park on Saturday. The 1915 team beat the Old Uns 25 to 0. The Old Boys had a scratch team and went on the field without a practice, all of them being in uniform for the first time this season. They were unable to stop the Collegiate's bucks, or the runs of Eastwood and Long. The running of the former was the feature of an otherwise featureless game.

LAKEFIELD WON EASILY FROM T.C.S.

ANOTHER BOY ARRIVES HOME UNNERALDED

Trooper Percy Perrington of the Strathcona Horse Was One of Two Survivors of a Group of Eight Near Whom a German Shell Burst

NERVES AFFECTED

In the engagement at Festubert about the middle of last May, a German shell burst over a group of eight troopers of the Strathcona Horse. Only two of them survived, the other six paid the supreme sacrifice of loyalty with their lives. One of the two who escaped arrived in Peterborough this morning from Montreal, unharmed, unreceived and just as satisfied, probably more so, as if his friends and citizens had greeted him with enthusiastic welcome. For Percy Perrington, late trooper with the Strathcona Horse, says he wants to forget all about it. His nervous system was so affected by the concussion of the shell's explosion that when he was given his discharge and is now on the pension list.

When war broke out Percy Parrington enlisted with the Cobourg Heavy Battery and spent the first months at Victoria, B. C. When the Pacific alarm subsided the battery came east, and without wasting any time to consider his next step the Strathcona Horse drew Trooper Parrington. This afternoon he was wending his way to the armouries when the Examiner met him and had barely time for a greeting. He has returned to mufti but the effect of war was evident in the cane he required in walking. He has seen many Peterborough boys and states that Capt. Cecil Arnott of the Strathcona is still in France.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—The southern half of Bulgaria will be filled soon with French and British troops, according to reports current in Paris to-day. Hopes are felt that the Russian soldiers will overrun the northern half at the same time.

If Roumania enters the struggle, the indications are that she will strike to the north into Transylvania, while the French, British and Russians are dealing with the Bulgarians, who will be glad to have the Austrian attention distracted from the Serbian operations by an invasion across her own shattered borders. It is accepted as certain here that Lord Kitchener will command the Franco-British Balkan campaign. This is supposed to have been the subject of talk he had with Premier Briand, War Minister Gallieni and Gen. Joffre.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The German protected cruser Udene has been torpedoed off the south coast of Sweden, the Admiralty announced to-day.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The British armed steamship Tara has been sunk by a submarine in the Eastern Mediterranean, and 34 of its crew are missing, according to an official announcement this afternoon.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—The weather, which has turned wintry, has not interfered with the Russian offensive along the eastern front. The Russians have extended their attacks to the district west of Riga and thence to the south of Dvinsk.. They are keeping the Germans on the move, and the latter admit that in the region of Lake Swenton the Russians penetrated their lines.

The capture of 8,500 Germans in the south-western theatre, on the River Stripa, as the result of a surprise attack, is reported in an official statement issued by the Russian War Office. The statement tells of violen, but futile efforts on the part of the Germans to wrest the prisoners from the captors. Another Russian success is claimed by Petrograd in the fighting around Rafalovka, on the Kovno-Szarny. Here the Czar's forces took 33 officers and 712 men.

A Reuter despatch from Petrograd says:

"In the region of Czartorysk bodies of Russian cavalry from 500 to 1,000 strong have been very active in attacking German infantry detachments in various localities east of Kovel. These operations have resulted recently in the capture of 2,000 prisoners."

The Austro-Germans forces on the Stripa River, in Galicia, have lost 28,000 men and 14 guns, says a Lemberg despatch.

The Daily Mail's correspondent at Petrograd telegraphs:

"The amplitude of munitions now is emphasized by the fact that the most recent consignment of ammunition secured at Dvinsk bore on every box the inscription: 'Don't spare cartridges.'"

THE BRITISH REPORTED TO HAVE OCCUPIED BAGDAD

80,000 RUSSIANS HAVE LANDED ON BULGARIAN COAST

Lord Kitchener's Trip to The Balkans Speeds Up The Allies at Salonica

Large Reinforcements Are Arriving at Greek Port and Troop Trains Are Continually Moving From Sea to Serbian Front.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—An intense activity, almost coincident with Lord Kitchener's start for the Balkans, is reported from Salonika, where the Anglo-French contingent is receiving large reinforcements. Troop trains are leaving the port in rapid succession for Serb territory. Most of these forces, if we may judge from the meagre reports, are being sent to the vicinity of Tzvor, toward which village the allied front is being extended from Krivolak. A part, however, is being used to strengthen the lines facing north-east toward the Bulgarian frontier. The best available information places the British contingent at about forty thousand men. Two divisions were landed last week and at least a brigade was included in the original debarkation at Salonika.

The Bulgarians, who are in force on the Allied flank near Prilep, are being held well by the Serbs at Babuna Pass, while the French, assuming the offensive on the right, are reported to have occupied several villages across the Bulgarian frontier.

One report says an Anglo-Italian army has landed at Valona (Avlona), on the Adriatic, with the purpose of crossing Albania. The Russians are still concentrating in Bessarabia, to be prepared to make a descent on Bulgaria from the east.

Meantime, in Northern and Eastern Serbia, and on the Montenegrin frontier, big battles are in progress. The Austro-Germans are advancing all along the line and have reached the Western Morava River, which has been crossed at some points. In their advance they are picking up prisoners, guns and war material.

The Montenegrins, like their Serbian allies, are fighting stubbornly in defence of their country and report that they have repulsed an attempt by the Austrians to cross their border from Herzegovna and captured four guns, a quantity of supplies and a few men. They also captured four more field guns and several hundred men.

It would appear therefore that the Central Powers, who have obtained their initial objective, the opening of the road to Sofia and Constantinople, have a lot of fighting ahead of them if Serbia is to be overwhelmed.

The weather, which has turned wintry, has not interfered with the Russian offensive along the eastern front. The Russians have extended their attacks to the district west of Riga, and thence to the south of Dvinsk. They are keeping the Germans on the move, and the latter admit that in the region of Lake Sventen the Russians penetrated their lines.

The political crisis in Greece, which has clouded the Balkans, has been finally overcome, Mr. Skouloudis having accepted and performed the task of organizing a Cabinet, which, being composed of all the members of the Zaimis Government with the exception of its Premier, will carry on the retiring Government's policy of maintaining neutrality.

The new Cabinet is at the mercy of the Venizelos majority in the Chamber, but the impression is that no attempt will be made to turn it out, thus avoiding dissolution of Parliament and a consequent election, the result of which could not be predicted while the army remains mobilized.

SHOOT PRISONERS IS GERMAN ORDER

Russian Commission Says Letters Found on Dead Tell of Treatment of Captives

PETROGRAD, via London, Nov. 9.—What purports to be extracts from two letters found on the bodies of German soldiers on the field of battle have been published by the Imperial Commission of Inquiry into the Conduct of the War. The first reads:

"In this case, when the advance becomes too hard, we take Russian prisoners and drive them before us against their fellow countrymen. Thus they, at least, in some measure diminish our losses."

The second reputed quotation follows:

"We don't know what to do with prisoners. Henceforth we shall drive every Russian who surrenders before the line of our fire. Thus we shall save ammunition."

The commission announces that the letters will be photographed and translated into the leading languages of the world to be sent broadcast.

After a week filled with all kinds of rumours the Duma commission was authoritatively informed yesterday that Mr. Sergius Sazonoff would retain his post as Foreign Minister.

SERBS DESTROY NISH MAGAZINE

BERLIN, via London, Nov. 9. — "Following the fall of Nish," says the Tageblatt's correspondent at Austrian press headquarters, "Serbian troops, which have been holding the Morava sector between Nish and Varvarin, are beginning to retreat beyond Kruschevac.

"After stubborn fighting in the outer line of forts, the Serbs held Nish only long enough to permit them to remove baggage and munition trains. Then they blew up the magazine and evacuated the city, the main army protected by rearguard fighting."

TURN OVER TIME

When Nature Hints About the Food.

When there's no relish to food and all that one eats doesn't seem to do any good then is the time to make a turn-over in the diet, for that's Nature's way of dropping a hint that the food isn't the kind required.

"For a number of years I followed railroad work, much of it being office work of a trying nature. Meal times were our busiest; and eating too much and too quickly of food such as is commonly served in hotels and restaurants together with the sedentary habits were not long in giving me dyspepsia and stomach trouble which reduced my weight from 205 to 160 pounds.

"There was little relish in any food and none of it seemed to do me any good. It seemed the more I ate the poorer I got and was always hungry before another meal, no matter how much I had eaten.

"Then I commenced a trial of Grape-Nuts food, and was surprised how a small saucer of it would carry me along, strong and with satisfied appetite, until the next meal, with no sensations of hunger, weakness or distress as before.

"I have been following this diet now for several months and my improvement has been so great all the others in my family have taken up the use of Grape Nuts with complete satisfaction and much improvement in health.

"Most people eat hurriedly, have lots of worry, thus hindering digestion, and therefore need a food that is predigested and concentrated in nourishment."

"There's a Reason."

BAY RUM FOR HAIR TROUBLE

Do you know that ordinary bay rum is of great value in treating hair and scalp disorders? But the bay rum alone should never be applied to the hair or scalp. If you want to get rid of dandruff, stop falling hair, stimulate hair growth, beautify the hair and make the scalp feel good, undoubtedly the best thing to use is a mixture of six ounces of bay rum, two ounces of lavona de composee and one-half drachm of menthol crystals. You can buy these ingredients at any druggists, and mix them yourself at home or the druggist will mix them for you. If you like add a teaspoonful of your favorite perfume. The bay rum is a fine scalp cleaner and the other ingredients make this mixture remarkably good to destroy dandruff, stimulate the hair growth, etc. Apply night and morning and rub well into the scalp with the finger tips.

NEWFOUNDLAND'S SHARE

Has Sent 3,100 Men Already to Fight for Britain.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Nov. 8.—The seventh contingent of 250 men recruited in this colony for the British army has arrived in England. The company which patrolled the coast during the summer, left with the best rifle shooting record of any of the detachments thus far sent. Another company is in process of formation and the Patriotic Association will continue enlistment as long as the war is in progress.

In addition to the 1,750 Newfoundlanders now with the army, the colony has sent 1,350 experienced sailors for service with the British naval reserve.

Newfoundland's contribution of 3,100 from a total population of 238,670 is a most creditable one.

FRANCE PUNISHES GRAFT.

MARSEILLES, France, Nov. 8. —A campaign by the French government to punish persons who have profited unduly from the needs of the nation is well under way. A supply corps officer and his soldier clerk have been sentenced to five years in prison and fines of $200 for accepting commissions from contractors. Jean Bussorer, a tent manufacturer who obtained $600,000 in orders by payment of commissions, has been sentenced to ten years' imprisonment and a heavy fine. Three other business men also go to prison.

The change to electric power on Sweden's most northerly railroad in the world has increased the train capacity 40 per cent. and the speed 50 per cent. over steam operation.

Don't Buy Cereals as You Do Millinery.

When you buy millinery you choose something charming and pretty. But don't choose cereal foods because of their pretty appearance. A light, highly refined, fancy cereal, no doubt, looks prettier than the coarser, darker Roman Meal, but it isn't nearly so nutritious. It is the dark parts of the grains that contain the greatest nutriment—that best enrich the blood, build up flesh, muscle, and bone, and stimulate the bowels and liver. Since flavour also resides in the darker parts, dark cereals are also more delicious. If you select a cereal for food value rather than for pretty looks, your first choice will certainly be Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal. At all live grocers', 10 and 25 cent packages.

King Ferdinand Sees Re-opening of the Danube

SOFIA, Sunday, via Berlin, by Wireless to Sayville, L. I., Nov. 9. — The announcement of the reopening of the Danube to navigation has caused a far deeper impression here than mobilization. The political leaders and newspapers express satisfaction that Bulgaria is no longer isolated, because it is now linked with the Central Powers by the Danube steamboats, and therefore look to the future with assurance that they will never lack military means for carrying on the war to a successful end.

The reopening of the Danube was considered so momentous an event that King Ferdinand and the Premier, Mr. Radoslavoff, went to Lom-Palanka to witness the arrival of the first boats from Hungary. They returned to Sofia.

Passenger service will begin in a few days, making Bulgaria independent of the Roumanian railways. Several telegraph lines will be laid, further greatly improving traffic conditions for the Central Powers, Bulgaria and Turkey. The opening of the Danube will greatly strengthen Turkey, as it will enable the exchange of foodstuffs and raw materials for German and Austrian arms and ammunition. It is expected that thousands of carloads will be moving eastward and westward within a few days.

Soldier of Fortune — by Randall Parrish

The all night restaurant through the glass front revealed a lunch counter and a number of cloth draped tables awaiting occupants. A few of these were in use, a single waiter catering to the guests. A woman was scrubbing the floor under the cigar stand, while a round faced, rather genial looking young fellow stood leaning negligently against the cashier's desk. Farther doubtfully I glanced cautiously up and down the deserted street, and then into the still averted face of my chance companion. I had no desire she should comprehend my dilemma.

"Would you mind waiting out here on the step a moment?" I questioned awkwardly, attempting to explain, "only until I make sure with are inside. There are some fellows I am not friendly with, and I am not hunting a roughhouse with a girl to look after. You won't care for just a minute, will you?"

"No," wearily; "I won't mind."

"You'll promise not to go away?"

She shook her head, her eyes staring dully in to the mist.

"No; I won't go away. Where could I go?"

Scarcely satisfied, yet feeling obliged to take the chance, I stepped within and advanced across the room toward the man at the cashier's desk. He glanced up curiously as I approached and spoke low so as not to attract the attention of others. To my good luck he was an ex-army man and willing to trust me for two meals. When I returned to the girl she was waiting motionless, her back to the window, and when I spoke followed me in without a word. I led the way to the secluded table behind the screen, seated her and took the chair opposite. Without questioning her wishes I ordered for both, the girl sitting in silence, her face bent low over the menu card, a red flush on either cheek.

"What will you have to drink?" I asked as the waiter turned aside. "I'd rather like a cocktail to drive the wet out of my system. Shall I make it two?"

She glanced up quickly from under shading lashes, her eyes, big and brown, meeting my own.

"I prefer coffee. That will be quite sufficient."

I ordered coffee, tea, and we sat there waiting without further speech, she nervously fingering the card, her eyes veiled by lowered lashes. I glanced cautiously across at her, conscious of my cheap clothing and vaguely wondering why my usual offhand self-assurance had so suddenly failed. I felt embarrassed, unable to break the silence by any sensible utterance. My eyes rested upon her hands, white, slender, shapely. They were hands of refinement, and my gaze, fascinated by the swiftly recurring memory of other days, grew slowly to a contemplation of her face. It was a womanly face, strong, true, filled with character, not so apt, perhaps, to be considered pretty as lovable—a face to awaken confidence and trust; a low, broad forehead, shadowed still by the wide brimmed hat and the fuzzy brown hair; the skin clear, the cheeks rounded and slightly flushed by excitement; the lips full and finely arched; the chin firm and smooth. She suddenly glanced up questioningly.

"You—you do not at all understand my position, do you?" she asked timidly. "I mean why I should be homeless, on the street, alone at—at such an hour?"

"No," I responded, surprised into frankness. "I do not understand, but shall we not permit the whole matter to rest and pretend at being friends for the moment? You have already acknowledged being both homeless and hungry. What more do I need know to be of assistance? The cause of such a condition is no business of mine, unless you choose to tell me voluntarily."

She continued to gaze at me, her eyes misty, yet full of wonderment. My language was not that of the slums, nor were my manners. To her I must have seemed as strange a character as she appeared to me. We were both advancing blindly through the dark.

"You are also," she affirmed finally, as if half regretting the words. "You are just as penniless as I."

"Why should you say that?"

"Because I know." And by now her eyes were blinded by the tears clinging to her lashes. "You—you humiliated yourself to serve me. You had no money. I watched through the window, and—and I almost ran away, only my promise held me."

I laughed uneasily, yet sobered almost at once, leaning across the table, all earlier embarrassment vanished.

"Well, even at that it would not be my first experience," I said swiftly. "Poverty is extremely unpleasant, but not a crime. Do not let that unfortunate condition of my exchequer spoil your appetite, my girl. I can assure you that is among the least of my troubles. Good luck or bad, I am not the sort to desert a woman in distress."

"You are a man of some education?"

"Two years at the university."

"And now?"

I smiled grimly, determined to admit the worst.

"Little better than a tramp, I suppose, although I have held a job lately—driving for a lumber yard across the river." Then I told her of my former life and my army career.

A moment she sat in silence, her eyes lowered to the table.

CHAPTER III.

Her Story.

"I HAVE had experience also," she said. "I used to believe this world was just a beautiful playground. I never dreamed what it really means to be hungry and homeless, to be alone among strangers. I had read of such things, but they never seemed real or possible. But I know it all now; all the utter loneliness of a great city. Why it is easier to fall than to stand, and, oh, I was so desperate tonight! I—I actually believe I had come to the very end of the struggle. Whatever happens—whatever possibly can happen to me hereafter—I shall never again be the same thoughtless creature, never again become uncharitable to others in misery. Why were you at that house and so afraid of the police?"

"Well, that is a long story," I replied hesitatingly. "I had been talking with some men inside who had offered me work and good pay. There was a reason why I did not wish to be seen coming out at that hour."

"Not—not anything criminal?"

"No; I've confessed to being a good for nothing, but I'm clear of crime."

She drew a long breath of relief.

"I do not quite believe," she said firmly. "You—you do not look like that."

I laughed in spite of my efforts.

"I am delighted to have you say so.

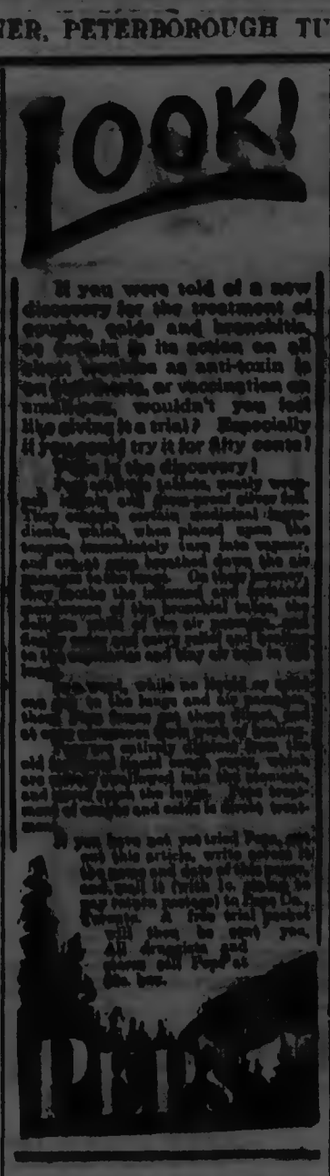
LOOK!



If you were told of a new discovery for the treatment of coughs, colds and bronchitis, so prompt in its action on all these troubles as anti-toxin is on diphtheria, or vaccination on smallpox, wouldn't you feel like giving it a trial? Especially if you could try it for fifty cents?

PEPS is the discovery!

They contain certain medicinal ingredients, which, when placed upon the tongue, immediately leap into vapour, and extend pine breathed down the air passages to the lungs. On their journey they destroy the germs and inflammation, the very cause of the trouble, and finally reach and cure even the deepest seated cold. Peps are as much a food as a medicine and they do their work through the blood.

If you have not yet tried Peps, cut out this article, write across it your name and date of this paper, and mail it (with 5c. stamps to pay postage) to Peps Dept. Toronto. A free trial packet will then be sent you. All druggists and stores sell Peps at 50c. box.

No more do I feel like that now. For so the record reads, and you must accept me just as I am or not at all. I have nothing else to offer."

"Perhaps I have no more."

"I have asked no explanation of you."

"True, yet you cannot be devoid of curiosity. You meet me after midnight, wandering alone in the streets; you see me boldly, shamelessly, interfering to prevent the arrest of a strange man; you hear me deliberately falsify again and again. What could you think of such a woman?"

"You ask my individual judgment or that of the world?"

"Yours, of course. I know the other already."

I extended my hand across the table and placed it over her own. A swift flush sprang to her cheeks, but she made no effort to draw away. The action was so natural.

"I have no desire to pry into your secret," I said. "I am content to remain grateful, to count this a red letter day, because somehow, out of the mystery of the dark, we have thus been brought together. An old professor used to say all life hinges on little things, and I believe our chance meeting is going to change both our lives and for the better."

"You mean you accept me upon trust?"

"Certainly; even as you must accept me. I have no letters of recommendation."

She was again looking directly toward me, her brown eyes earnest and fearless.

"I—I am afraid you will not understand. You can scarcely appreciate how strictly I have been brought up or what such an unconventional meeting as this means to me. I ought to be ashamed of myself."

"But are you?"

"Really I—I do not seem to be. It almost frightens me to realize I am not. I do not understand myself at all. Why should I talk thus frankly with you? Why feel confidence in you? It is not in accordance with the rules of my old life nor of my nature. Such actions would shock those who know me. They ought to shock me. Am I in a dream from which I am going to awaken presently? Is that the explanation?"

I shook my head.

"No. You have only been thrown against the real world. You find it not to be what you supposed. It is no more the shame or regret. Woman-hood lies deeper than any pretense at gentility. Men seldom fail to recognize this fact. Their lives of struggle compel them to, but a woman finds it hard to understand."

"To understand what?"

"How any man meeting her as I have you—in the street at night, under conditions society would frown at—can still feel for her a profound respect and pay her the deference which a gentleman must always extend to one he deems worthy."

For a long moment she did not speak, but withdrew her hand from beneath mine, resting her chin in the palm.

"What is your name?" she asked finally.

"Gordon Craig."

The lashes drooped quickly, securely shadowing the brown depths, the head descending on her breast. In the momentary hush that followed the waiter came shuffling forward with our order.

I had never supposed I lacked audacity, yet I found it strangely difficult to again pick up our conversation. This woman puzzled me—was becoming an enigma. Her eyes again glanced up and met mine.

"I am penniless and alone," she said with a shudder. "I can never condemn some forms of evil as I once did, for now I have felt temptation myself. I—I have even learned to doubt my own strength of character. I—I am glad I met you. I think you have saved me from myself."

"I think you have saved me from myself."

"You asked me my name," I broke in eagerly. "Would you mind telling me who you are?"

"I?" the clear cheeks reddening. "Why, I am only a fool."

"Then there is, at least, one tie between us. But if we are to remain friends I must know how to address you."

Could Not Sleep.

To the thousands of people who are tossing on sleepless beds night after night, or who pace the floor with nerves unhinged, and to whose eyes sleep will not come, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer the blessing of sound, refreshing slumber.

They restore the equilibrium of the deranged nerve centres, thereby producing peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep, and will cause you get up in the morning feeling that you have the strength and vitality to go through your day's work.

Mrs. Hollas Knox, St. John, N.B., writes: "I suffered greatly with my nerves, I could not sleep at night, nor work, and the least little thing worked on my mind and bothered me. Last winter I thought I would go out of my mind, I would screech out, and my mother really thought I was going crazy with my nerves. It was so terrible I would hold my head and cry. I tried two doctors, but they did not do me any good. I thought I would tell you that to-day I am perfectly cured by using three boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I can recommend them to all sufferers from nervous troubles. You can tell everyone that they are the only thing that did me any good."

THE SUMMONS OF THE BAG-PIPE.

When the wind is on the heather,
Whistling winds that whips and thrills,
And the voice of many waters
Wanes and waxes in the hills,
In Braeriach's mighty corrie,
Hanging high o'er Pools of Dee,
Sounds the elemental music—
"Come, my children, follow me!"

Long ago when cunning clansmen
Caught the secret of the Bens,
Shut it up within a sheepskin,
Bore it from the hidden glens;
And today in sordid cities
Something stirs in you and me,
When the pipes cry down the causeway—
"Come, my children, follow me!"

Hear them in the streets of London,
Drawing men in growing ranks,
Men who never say a corrie
Or a mountain's smoking flanks;
But their heart-beats tell me truly—
"Follow if ye would be free!"
Straight they answer to the summons—
"Come, my children, follow me!"

FELL IN A FAINT.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall on the floor. I could not sweep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can wash and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Sealed Paper

It Was to Be Given to a Dying Man's Widow

By Evan C. Hunter

Copyright by American Press Association

Strolling into my bankers in Paris for any mail there might be for me, I was handed a letter from Bernard Carey, dated at Thun, Switzerland. Carey and I had been chums ever since we were five years old. He had lost his health in the Spanish-American war and had gone abroad for its recovery. He had asked me to go with him, but at the time a matter of importance prevented. However, I was worried about him, and as soon as I could get away I followed him, for I loved him like a brother and wished to do what I could to enable him to get well.

His letter told me that he was at a hotel in the town of Thun, on the lake of that name. The town, he said, was a quaint old place, taking one's fancy back to the middle ages. The Kursaal (or casino), was but a stone's throw from his hotel; from the window of his room he had a view of the lake and the Bernese Alps beyond. Altogether it was a charming spot. Unfortunately, however, he was in such poor health that he took but little pleasure in anything. He looked eagerly for my coming.

A night journey brought me to Thun and the same hotel as my friend. I was shown at once to his room and found him in bed. I was troubled at having left him so long alone, but when I began to reproach myself to him he stopped me to tell me that although he would have been glad to have me with him he had all the attention he required. Then he let me into a secret that both surprised and pained me.

I need to preface what he told me by saying that travelers in Europe are constantly meeting American girls there who go from place to place relying entirely on themselves. Sometimes two or three will travel together; sometimes they will be found singly; sometimes they will attach themselves to parties they happen to meet on their travels, for Americans abroad quickly become acquainted and often become bosom friends.

Carey had met a party that had been joined by an American girl, a Miss Edith Hubbell. He had traveled with them, and they had been very kind to him. Miss Hubbell was nursed sick, and unfortunately an attachment had sprung up between them. I say unfortunately, for I did not believe Carey would ever recover his health. This party, including Miss Hubbell, were at the same hotel with him at Thun. While I was sitting beside him he rang for a maid and told her to ask Miss Hubbell if she would come to him. When the young lady entered I naturally looked at her somewhat intently, which brought a slight blush to her face. I have, or think I have, a faculty of reading character in faces, and I judged that Miss Hubbell was one of those kindly disposed persons who would sacrifice herself for one who needed her good offices. As to how much love had to do with her attentions to Carey, I could not judge of that without seeing more of her. She said at once that she was glad of my arrival since Bernard had been looking forward to my coming eagerly, and, I being there, she would feel more free in her visits to him.

Carey was not well enough to leave his room and, fearful that both I and his fiancee would devote too much time to him, urged us to take walks and trips together. We would stroll along the banks of the lake sometimes to Oberhofen, sometimes farther, and when we went too far to care to walk back would return on one of the pleasure boats constantly plying on the lake. Then at Carey's suggestion we took trips to Interlaken and thence up into the mountains. These outings were a great relief to me from attendance upon an invalid, and I noticed that Miss Hubbell, who on my arrival was pale and thin, began to take on a rosier hue.

One afternoon on returning from Lauterbrunnen Carey sent for me to come to him. I found a great change in him.

"Dick," he said to me, "I'm going to die."

I tried to reassure him.

"No," he persisted, "I'm going to die, and I wish to speak to you about Edith. I must take steps to secure to her my property, which is about $30,000. I don't know anything of the laws covering cases where the parties are Americans in a foreign land, do you?"

"No."

"How shall I manage it?"

I thought a few moments, then told him that the safest way I could suggest was marriage.

He took to the idea so quickly it was evident to me that marriage was what he wished me to suggest. He asked me to go at once to the girl, break the news to her that he had given up all hope and suggest to her the plan by which she should inherit his property.

I did not see how I could refuse anything to my dying friend and promised him I would do so.

Miss Hubbell was much shocked at hearing the news. Death coming between two betrothed or married persons when young is best described as a shock. It is not the prolonged suffering of later years. I delicately hinted that it would be a comfort to Bernard if he could be united to her before his death, saying nothing about the inheritance. She acquiesced at once, and I had the satisfaction of telling him that she knew nothing of the marriage giving her a fortune.

There was a marriage, and as soon as it was over Bernard signified that he wished to see me alone. His young wife went sorrowfully away, and as soon as the door was closed behind her he asked me to reach under his pillow and take out what I would find there. I found a sealed letter addressed to his wife.

"Keep it," he said, "for six months without mentioning it to her, then give it to her."

I made the promise and at his request left him, since he said that after the excitement he had passed through he must rest.

Bernard died that night. I suggested to his widow that she remain abroad, where she might the sooner recover from her sad experience, and I took the body of my friend to Amsterdam. Before leaving I told her that the marriage was partly a plan to insure her inheritance of Bernard's property. She was overwhelmed with the kindly act of the man who had loved her so well.

My trip to join Bernard Carey was my first visit to Europe, and, since it had been very short and circumscribed, after having remained at home a few months I concluded to return there. I had interested myself in the settlement of his estate, and, since it was necessary either that his widow should return to sign certain papers, that she might be put in possession of her inheritance, or that she should sign them abroad, I arranged with the attorneys in the case to take them to her. Indeed, if she signed them abroad it was necessary that some one should represent her in the matter.

My stay at Thun had been during the autumn, and now February had come. Mrs. Carey—nee—st. Hubbell—was in Paris, and I went there. Paris in winter is the gayest city in the world, and there all Americans gather in great numbers during the early months of the year. So I took a steamer for that port via the Atlantic ocean and the Mediterranean. On reporting myself I learned that my quest was at Marseilles, on the southern part of the bay, and in a couple of hours I was at her hotel. It was built on the edge of the cliff overhanging the beautiful waters and in the center of an orange grove.

There are stories the principal part of which is left out. So it is with this one. But it is time for me to admit that my return abroad was rather to see Mrs. Carey than to see Europe. The bay of Naples is beautiful, but my eyes did not view it with the same pleasure as that with which I looked upon the face and figure of Edith Carey. There was so much about us that was beautiful that we enjoyed it, she acting as my pilot, before settling down to dry legal documents. She knew that I had the papers pertaining to her inheritance with me, but she did not speak of them, and when I did she asked if tomorrow would not do as well. I assured her that it would, and she informed me that, left being with a party, she had no one to go about with her and longed to see some of the attractive sights near at hand. So we went to Paestum and Amalfi and Capri—indeed, any place that we could reach and return the same day. We were both young and had largely recovered from our melancholy experience at Thun.

"Why," I remarked to her one day while sitting on the steps of the ruined temple of Jupiter in the forum at Pompeii, "should we be long moved by the death of a single person when the many who were formerly hurrying about in the open space before us all passed away eighteen centuries ago?"

It was nearly seven months from the day of Carey's death that I sat down beside his widow with the inheritance papers I had brought with me. She signed them as I directed without reading them or asking a question. When the work was finished we went out and sat on a marble balcony overhanging the bay. The moon was at the full, and its light in Italy is very bright.

"By the bye," I said, "here is a paper Bernard asked me to give you after six months from the date of his death had expired."

"Please open it," she said, with a shudder.

I did as she asked. I could easily read it by the light of the moon. I started to read it aloud to her, but stopped suddenly.

It expressed a wish that she should marry his friend—myself.

And then and there we agreed to comply.

HER LITTLE BOY HAD PNEUMONIA
NEARLY LOST HIM.
DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP
SAVED HIM.

The slight cold, the irritating cough, the tightness of the chest, if not attended to, will sooner or later develop into some serious lung or bronchial trouble, and our advice to you is that on the first inception of a cough or cold "Cure Run or Is" Mrs. H. Washburn, Gaspereaux Station, N.B., writes: "I thought I would write and tell you just how much I appreciate Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, for I would not be without it in the house. Twice my little boy, now four years old, has had pneumonia, and nearly died, but since using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup I have kept him clear of even a cough. I often say that if it had not been for "Dr. Wood's" I would have lost him."

"My little girl, ten months old, is subject to bronchitis, but when she seems to be stuffed up and has difficulty in breathing I give her a few drops of Norway Pine Syrup every two or three hours, and in a very little while she is all well, in fact, on the first signs of a cold or cough we all fly for 'Dr. Wood's'."

You can procure Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup from any druggist or dealer, but be sure and get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it, as there are many imitations on the market.

The genuine is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c.

How To Have the Best Cough Remedy and Save $2 by Making It at Home

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large quantity of plain syrup. Two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, stirred for 2 minutes gives you as good syrup as money can buy.

Then get from your druggist 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth), pour into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with sugar syrup. This gives you, at a cost of only 54 cents, 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50—a clear saving of nearly $2. Full directions with Pinex. It keeps perfectly and tastes good.

It takes hold of the usual cough or chest cold at once and conquers it in 24 hours. Splendid for whooping cough, bronchitis and winter coughs.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals and soothes the inflamed membranes in the case of a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol, and has been used for generations to heal inflamed membranes of the throat and chest.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

A CAVALRY CHARGER.

I'm only a cavalry chargey—
And I'm dying as fast as I can
(For my body is riddled with bullets—
They've potted both me and my man);
And though I've no words to express it,
I'm trying this message to tell
To kind folks who work for the Red Cross—
Oh, please help the Blue one as well!

My master was one in a thousand,
And I loved him with all this poor heart
(For horses are built just like humans,
Be kind to them—they'll do their part);
So please send out help for our wounded,
And give us a word in your prayers—
This isn't as strange as you'd fancy,
The Russians do it in theirs.

I'm only a cavalry chargey,
And my eyes are becoming quite dim
(I really don't mind, though I'm "done for,"
So long as I'm going to "him");
But first I would plead for my comrades,
Whose duties, and suffering, too—
Oh, please help the poor wounded horses;
I'm sure that you would—if you knew.

NOT MUCH.

Obvious of the world and its worries Mrs. Turner yielded her ample form to the delight of forty winks. The rattling of a tray down the stairs roused her with an indignant start. "Jackie," she called. "You little wretch! I'll come down and warm you if you don't keep quiet! Not a bit of peace can I get in this house! ow let me hear you again, that's all!" The unnatural quiet that prevailed for a moment or so testified to her powers of "warming," and, with a contented air, she closed her eyes again. But it was not to be. A moment later the door-bell rang. "Oh, you!" she said, trying hard to look pleased at her afternoon visitor. "Sit down a minute while I go and change." "Isn't your ma afraid of catching cold in those slippers, Jackie?" said the visitor to the youngsters. "Not much!" came the scornful answer. "Ma warms the whole family with them!"

PEG IN THE CELLAR

Laurette Taylor, who is still playing "Peg o' My Heart" in London to such large audiences that she doesn't dare return to America to carry out the plans made for her, doesn't like the Zeppelins. In a letter to George C. Tyler, her American manager, she thus sets forth her feeling in the matter:

"The night the Zeppelins came I was just finishing the last act. It seemed difficult for a few moments to realize (after a year of darkened streets and threatening talk) that they were really over the housetops. I went down in the cellar, and, like a good Christian, said my prayers.

"The company followed me into the cellar, but I was the only one that said my prayers. 'A lot of heathens,' I calls 'em. For three days afterward I was really fearfully ill. I had fully determined never to act in London until the war had finished, but, as everybody else went on, 'business as usual,' you know, I didn't feel as though I could afford to have people say I was afraid, so I came back to prove that I am not afraid, but I do not mind telling you I am scared to death.

"I will say the English are the most remarkable race I have ever met with and, if I were a German, I should hate their insides. Even Hartley, whom I have never considered an especially brave man, went up on the roof of the Green Room Club to look at the Zeppelins, and walked all the way over here to the Globe, and, finding me in the cellar, quoted one of the lines from 'Peg': 'Come out and look at it; they're beautiful in this part of the country.' I was furious with him."

THE ALLIED TROOPS DISEMBARKED WITH "COMPLETENESS, QUIET AND SPEED"

LONDON, Nov. 6.—Probably the first eye-witness of the Anglo-French landing at Salonica to reach England, the Rev. and Mrs. A. H. Sewell, of Bishopston Vicarage, Bristol, England, recently arrived in London.

Mr Sewell has been chaplain to the British hospital units working in Serbia since June, while his wife was engaged in military nursing. To a special press representative Mr. and Mrs. Sewell spoke in enthusiastic terms of the 'completeness, quiet, and speed' with which the Allied expedition disembarked in the harbor of Salonica, and the unmistakable cordiality with which its arrival on Greek territory was welcomed by the populace.

"At or leaving Belgrade at the end of September for Salonica, we had our first warning of impending events in the shape of badly interrupted train service through Serbia, due to the moving of troops to counteract the menacing Bulgarian mobilization. Arrived at Salonica on September 27, we had to wait only three days, till September 30, for a glimpse of the vanguard, consisting of Brig.-Gen. Hamilton (whom, of course, everybody took for Sir Ian Hamilton) and his staff, with an entourage of twenty strapping British Tommies of brand new khaki.

The Ethical Question.

"Both officers and men made themselves as inconspicuous as possible in Salonica, their purpose evidently being to inspect the camps prepared for the landing force some two miles outside the town. On October 3 reports gained general currency that a force of "Anglo-French troops' was already waiting in a huge fleet of transports outside the harbor. They were coming, people said to help the Serbs checkmate the Bulgarians. There was academic discussion as to the 'ethics' of a landing on the crossing of 'neutral Greece' for such a purpose, and one heard, here and there, suggestions that it was 'what the Germans had done in Belgium,' but nowhere was even this mentioned in a tone which savored at all of hostility to our plans. Indeed, when opinion was expressed at all, it was in terms of cordial welcome.

"On October 5 transports actually began to arrive in the harbor proper. They were crammed with French troops, which poured over the gangplanks on to the 'Serbian quay' in an increasing stream. The French newspapers of Salonika now published two pieces of intelligence side by side—first, that the Greek Government had lodged a protest against the landing, and secondly, that the governor of Salonika harbor had given orders to clear it, in order that no other traffic might interfere with the comfortable disembarkation of the Allied forces!

The Public Stunned.

"Thus, when the news of M. Venizelos' resignation, and the causes of it, reached Salonika on the afternoon of October 5 the public was stunned. It could not understand or account for it. It seemed at such complete variance with the spectacle unfolding itself before Salonika's own eyes. It was a thunderbolt.

Only Drinking Water to Get.

"Thus there was little occasion for 'demonstrations,' either pro or con. There certainly was not at any stage anything in the nature of a hostile reception. The disembarkation took place beneath a broiling sun such as London occasionally gets in mid-July but in every detail it was carried out with the most workmanlike precision imaginable. The Allies—British troops were arriving when we left Salonika on October 7—brought with them every solitary thing an army needs to live on and fight with. They needed to ask their Greek hosts for nothing except water. Artillery, stores, horses, mules, tenting, ammunition—everything seemingly, in great quantity and spick and span shape—was on hand, and the troops simply marched out to their encampment and made themselves at home. The camp is on a plateau-like area quite close to the beach.

"Fraternizing between Tommies, piou-pious, and Greek soldiers set in with little delay. There seemed to be a little more intimacy between the French contingent and the Greeks than with our men, because Greek soldiers in many cases can talk French, but not English. On the other hand, there is a great physical resemblance between the Greek soldiers and our own. Their khaki field kits are much alike and the general 'cut of their jib' is quite similar

The Right Of Way.

"What the Greek authorities at Salonika think if the British is sufficiently illustrated by the fact that the harbour-commander issued instructions that British orders outside and within the gulf are to be regarded as paramount. It is quite evident that our warships in and about the port have 'the right of way.'"

Mr. and Mrs. Sewell said the taste the Serbians have already had of comradeship with Admiral Troubridge and the officers and Navy men around Belgrade has made them long for still more intimate and extensive acquaintance with British fighting men. "The Serbian army is 'fit.' Its gunnery is especially fine. When it is forced into its natural defensive positions in the mountains—if it is forced—Englishmen may be quite sure that our Serbian Allies will conduct themselves finely."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S WORK APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

In this model we have a late addition to the class of bungalow aprons which are really dresses reduced to primitive dimensions. They are ideal for country places where no one is apt to drop in, for they are cool, neat and practical. They may be worn over a dress or instead of one, and this model is so constructed that it can be opened in front and may then serve as a negligee.

As shown in the figure this garment has body and sleeves in one piece, but the sleeve will have to be pieced in any of the materials usually employed in making aprons. The neck is cut out round and the sleeves can be made quite short.

If the width of the material requires it there may be a seam in the centre of the front of the apron.

To use as a negligee this same garment is opened in front and the neck is made high with a small, flat collar as a finish. In this case the sleeves are generally preferred full length and are gathered into a band at the wrist. A belt which is made of a strap of the material is placed around the waist, fastening in front, and the patch pockets which are so desirable in an apron are omitted.

Any wash fabric may be used for such an apron, and gingham, calico, chambray and the like are those which most women prefer.

The apron pattern, No. 7286, is cut in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inch bust measure. Medium size requires 6¾ yards of 36 inch material.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

WOMAN IN TERRIBLE STATE

Finds Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cape Wolfe, Canada.—"Last March I was a complete wreck. I had given up all hope of getting better or living any length of time, as I was such a sufferer from female troubles. But I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am in good health and have a pair of twin boys two months old and growing finely. I surprised doctors and neighbors for they all knew what a wreck I was.

"Now I am healthy, happy and hearty, and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies. You may publish this letter if you like. I think if more women used your remedies they would have better health."—Mrs. J. T. Coon, Lot No. 7, Cape Wolfe, P.E.I., Canada.

Because your case is a difficult one, and doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has remedied many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and it may be exactly what you need.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of women—ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

58 IN PRISONS FROM A FAMILY OF DEGENERATES

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 8.—Fifty-eight blood relatives confined in penitentiaries, jails, infirmaries, institutions for feeble-minded, or industrial schools.

This is the record of an extensive family of degenerates traced out during the last year by the Ohio juvenile research bureau. In announcing the results to-day Dr. Thomas H. Haines, director of the bureau, declared the family history already discovered was the basis of a record comparable to that of the notorious Jukes family, which has been familiar to sociologists for the last forty years.

The "Mengold" family—this is the fictitious name which has been chosen for the newly traced clan of degenerate men, women, and children—lives mainly in south-eastern Ohio and lower Ohio River counties of West Virginia.

Five generations of the family have been charted, including 474 individuals. Definite data which have been secured on 281 of these show the following condition of degeneracy:

Sixty members of the family have courtroom records, 15 have been in jail, 14 in the penitentiary, 9 in the infirmary, 9 in children's homes, 6 in the workhouse, 2 in the girls' industrial home, 2 in the institution for feeble-minded, and 1 in the boys' industrial home.

Seventy-seven are immoral, 74 criminal in varying degrees, 55 feeble-minded, 23 alcoholic, 12 public women, 7 tubercular, 6 children adopted into other homes, 4 subject to epileptic fits, 3 insane, and 3 tramps.

Crimes of which they have been convicted include burglary, larceny, forgery, destruction of property, bootlegging, operating or being inmates of immoral houses, intoxication, riot, perjury, various degenerate forms of assault, homicide, shooting to kill, and attempting to poison husband.

The mentality of most degenerate members of the family as determined by the Binet test is that of children between 8 and 11 years.

Most members are living at large, marrying and producing large families. One man, whom the juvenile research investigators call Jasper, is in the Ohio penitentiary for a crime against his daughters, one of whom is in the Girls' Industrial School at Delaware.

"GRIT"

There are times in the life of every man
When everything goes dead wrong
When the skies turn grey, and friends are few,
And it's hard to jog along.
When the earth appears to be upside down.
And the heart is sore with care,
And the light of hope burns ever so low,
While trouble seems everywhere.

It is then that the manhood in a man
Gets a chance to win the fight;
'Tis then we are shown what he really is,
And his soul looms black or white.
He may choose to rise, he may choose to fall,
But the choice on each is laid
And the devil grins or the devil cries
Whenever the choice is made

So let us be men, let us choose aright,
When trials like these come our way;
A little of grit is worth heaps of gold
When we find ourselves at bay.
The more we are tried and the more we win,
Each will become more strong,
For the flame of life is a wearisome game,
And the way both drear and long.

WHAT WOMEN DO IN AMMUNITION SHOPS IN FRANCE

Average Wage is Fifty Cents to a Dollar a Day—Many White Hairs Among Workers

The proportion of women that can be advantageously employed in making such heavy ammunition as cannon shells is comparatively small. In the factories where such small objects as cartridges for rifles are made the proportion is quite large. It is in the making of shell-caps, which contain a great number of small parts that women are employed in the artillery ammunition factories. It was only in one room of the St. Jacques plant that I saw women occupied in putting 75 or 90-millimeter shells into the lathes that were turned by electricity. The machines had been recently installed, and it was a clean and airy room, though for some of the frail-looking women the work of handling those steel shells must have been rather hard. I asked several of them whether they did not find the work too fatiguing, but they replied with a good deal of spirit that it was not. They had been at work since last July, and will probably be kept busy until the war is over.

In the national arsenal at Bourges, where the number of women employed runs up into the thousands, much of the skilled work in the assembling and the fitting of shell caps is done by women. The same is true of the rather dangerous operation of filling the fulminate-of-mercury caps, from which comes the original spark that sets off the whole shell. In other rooms I saw women soldering leaves of tinfoil over the holders of those fulminating caps. It was an operation that would seem to be more suitable for men than for women. In one room, where shell-caps were being put together, there was at work a gray-haired woman who frankly confessed that she was 72 years old. She said that she had been employed in the arsenal for the past thirty years, but, when a photographer asked her to pose for a picture, she promptly slid off her high stool and hid under the table.

On the whole, the women I saw employed in making materials of war were rather young. Many of them either have husbands at the front, or else they are engaged to marry soldiers upon their return.

They all seem to find a great deal of satisfaction in the work, undoubtedly sustained by the thought that the product of their hands will ultimately be used in disposing of the hated Germans. For one unusually intelligent looking young woman I felt a great deal of sympathy. She said that before being employed in the ammunition factory she had been a dressmaker. Her young husband, who had been mobilized at the outbreak of the war, had been killed, she said, in a battle near Strassburg early last fall. She did not make any philosophical remarks about continuing his task, but that is literally what she is doing.

The wages received by the ammunition workers necessarily vary considerably. In the large Schneider plant at Le Creusot I questioned a grey-haired woman, who was busy with several others in putting wooden plugs into the mouths of the shells, preparatory to their being shipped elsewhere to be filled with explosives. She told me that she was earning 3 francs 90, or a little over 50 cents a day. The women doing more skilled work, such as tending lathes, naturally receive higher pay. Their wages run up to a dollar or a little over a day. Near Paris, where the cost of living is considerably higher, piece workers sometimes earn as much as 8 francs, or $1.60 a day. The average pay of the boy between the school and military age is from 75 cents to $1.00.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Hurts of Bladder Bothers You Drink Lots of Water

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts, which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

A CHILD HATES OIL CALOMEL, PILLS FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Give "California Syrup of Figs" If Cross, Sick, Feverish, Constipated

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt

The Serbian Situation Satisfactory To Allies

The Anglo-French Armies Are Advancing

Advance of the Allies Against The Bulgarians is Continuing

In Southern Serbia the Invaders Now Occupy Only One Village---Bulgarian's Attack on Krivolak Has Been Repulsed--Behaviour of Greece is Causing Some Alarm Among the Allies Although Greece is Said to Have Appealed to Allies for Financial Assistance.

STEAMER DACIA IS SUNK BY SUBMARINE

PARIS, Nov. 9.—Reports from the Serbian front represent the situation as satisfactory for the Allies. The French have reached Gradsko, on the railroad from Krivolak to Veles.

A Bulgarian attack against Krivolak with heavy forces of infantry and artillery was repulsed, after which the French occupied the village of Komental. On the Anglo-French front north-west of Guevgeli, the advance of the Allies continues, and the Bulgarians now occupy only the village of Ourmandi in Serbian territory.

PARIS, Nov. 9.—(Official).—Fierce cannon fighting and savage encounters between advance guards were reported in the War Office official communication to-day. "In the Loos region there have been hot patrol combats, in which we have had the advantage. Violent artillery duels have occurred in Champagne, in the vicinities of Beauvraigues and Le Trapeze. They were begun by the the Germans and we replied energetically."

PARIS, Nov. 9.—The Cabinet to-day authorized Finance Minister Ribot to introduce in the Chamber of Deputies a bill for another five per cent. loan and a measure taxing the profits of the industries which have benefited by the war.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—The behaviour of Greece is beginning to alarm the Allies. Pro-Germanism is growing at Athens. Inside information to-day is that the Greeks may not even stay neutral. There are hints of an understanding with Bulgaria. The people perhaps are still with the Allies, but even this is not certain. Strong Court influence has been brought to bear, and unquestionably it has produced some impression. More than anywhere else it has been effective among the army officers.

PARIS, Nov. 9. The hottest submarine campaign the war has yet seen is predicted by naval experts to-day in the vicinity of Salonika, as soon as the German U boat fleet known to be on its way through the Mediterranean can reach levantine waters. Their activities just inside the Strait of Gibraltar are taken to be merely incidents of the voyage, and their attacks are expected to occur daily further to the east against the transports engaged in landing Allied forces on the Greek, Bulgarian and Turkish Aegean Sea coasts. What preparation the French and British have made for the visitors' reception is not known by the French. The public takes it for granted that the probable inauguration by the Kaiser of this sort of fighting has not been left out of consideration.

ALGIERS, Nov. 9.—The Dacia, which was seized by a French cruiser last February while carrying a cargo of cotton from the United marine.

PARIS, Nov. 9.—The Greek Government is reported to have appealed to the Allies for further financial assistance. The Government desires to obtain an additional advance of 40,000,000 francs ($8,000,000), and that this request is being considered sympathetically.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—"Have succeeded in extinguishing fire. Am proceeding directly to Bordeaux. All well aboard." This message was received from Captain Juham, at the French liner Kechamaran at the offices of the line to-day.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—The destruction of two more British and one Japanese steamship by German submarines was announced to-day by the Admiralty. The British vessels are given as the Buresk and Glenmoore, and the Japanese as the Yasukuni Maru. The crews were all saved. The Admiralty does not state where any of the incidents occurred.

SALONIKA, Nov. 9.—Prince George of Greece showed the Allies to-day that his country has an army not to be despised. Thirty thousand perfectly equipped men—artillery, infantry and cavalry—passed in review before him on the water front here. The military display was in commemoration of Salonika's seizure by Greece from Turkey three years ago. British and French officers, soldiers and sailors mingled in the watching crowds.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 9. "Damage done by the Serbs before retreating to the Serbian section of the Orient railway is delaying the Germans in reopening the line to Constantinople." Repairs are being made as rapidly as possible.

ATHENS, Nov. 9.—The French and British are pushing the Bulgarians in Southern Serbia steadily to the northward. The Bulgars have made a number of attacks, but nowhere have they checked the Allies' advance. In attempting to accomplish this at Krivolak they lost very heavily. Fierce fighting still is in progress in the Veles district with the odds continuing in the Allies' favour. French and British reinforcements are arriving at the front from Salonika in greater strength daily.

R. H. MULLOCK WAS EMPLOYEE OF C.G.E. TEST DEPARTMENT

It is Thought This is the Young Flight Lieutenant Whose Name Was Mentioned in the Despatches on Saturday for Recent Flight Over Brussels

BELIEVED THE SAME MAN

Employees of the Test Department of the C.G.E. works are of the opinion that the Lieut. Mullock, hero of a recent air raid over Brussels, is really R. H. Mullock, son of Chief Justice Mullock, and a student in the Test Department from the years 1909 to 1912. One of the employees states that he saw Mr. R. H. Mullock at Valcartier, that he had enlisted and probably went into the air fleet. He boarded at 336 Rubidge street. Certainly this is the only connection Peterborough can attempt to establish with the name mentioned in Saturday night's despatch. Enquiries have produced no other young men of that name from this city. At that, however, it is difficult to understand how Peterborough happened to be mentioned as a designation of the young airman who would be most widely known through his father.

IN AID OF THE BOYS IN THE TRENCHES

Big Programme at the Royal Theatre Next Monday Evening Under Auspices of Kitchener League

The programme arranged for the Kitchener League for their performance at the Royal Theatre on Monday, Nov. 15th, promises to be the hit of the season. A number of local artists have been engaged to take part together with members of the 93rd Battalion. The show will consist of high class singing, dancing, banjo solos and elocution, but the main feature attraction is the big comedy dramatic sketch, "The Dissatisfied Wife," with a cast that will present it with a punch.

The ladies of the Kitchener League are working hard to raise money to get comforts for the boys in the trenches, and they look to the public for hearty cooperation. They are doing their bit. Will you do yours?

As a special attraction, the souvenirs just received by Mr. Charles Perry, proprietor of the American Hotel, will be exhibited and explained by one of the Overseas men. Tickets can also be bought at the box office, Royal Theatre.

Peterborough and Lakefield have furnished fifteen of the officers of the 93rd Battalion. Capt. Bygott, Lieut. Carter and Lieut. Marling are Lakefield's share in the honour list.

An item in last night's Examiner, referring to Signaller Chas. Manners of Peterborough, was somewhat misleading, inasmuch as it gave the impression to some that he was not on the firing line. It might be mentioned that Signaller Manners is fighting, and has been for the last few months since the 21st, when they landed at the front. He has only been out of the trenches twice during that time, for eight hours at a time. Mrs. Manners received a letter from her husband this morning and it stated they were having it pretty rough, but were getting lots to eat. Signaller Manners was foreman at the H. Hope factory when he enlisted, a little over a year ago. He is one of seven brothers who answered the call. His brother, Ben, who also worked at Henry Hope's factory, was killed. Signaller Manners also has one brother badly wounded and one invalided home. Mrs. Manners also has a brother at the front.

Confirmation of the report published in the Examiner a few days ago that the 93rd Battalion would have to depend on Peterborough County for recruits enough to replace the Lindsay company of the 93rd, is to hand in the authority received by Col. Hemming to proceed with the organization of the new battalion in Victoria and Haliburton, with headquarters at Lindsay and commanded by Lt.-Col. Fee. The Lindsay battalion will be known as the 109th Battalion, C.E.F., and will undoubtedly absorb the 50 recruits in Lindsay who now form the nucleus of C company of the 93rd. Lt.-Col. Anderson and the other Lindsay officers named in yesterday's list of the 93rd staff will be transferred to the new 109th. In the meantime the Lindsay company is being administered as part of the 93rd, and the Lindsay officers who have report d to Lt.-Col. Johnston, have been detached for duty in Lindsay, so that the transfer will only be a formality that will not involve many changes.

The procedure will be much the same as in the case of the Peterborough company of the 80th which was transferred to form the nucleus of the 57th.

Nothing definite has been heard yet about a new Lakeshore battalion which would take in the Cobourg company of the 93rd. Cobourg is the headquarters of D company, but so far Port Hope has secured more recruits than Cobourg, and is holding them at home.

It looks more and more like as if Peterborough county will have to rise to the occasion and furnish the whole battalion.

In reference to the new regiment the Lindsay Post says: It will be seen by reference to an item in another column that the new battalion to be raised in Victoria and Haliburton is to be known as the 109th. Lieut.-Col. Fee will be in command with Lieut.-Col. Anderson second in command. The other officers will, it is understood, be selected from the 45th Regiment. Lieut.-Col. Fee is expected to arrive in Lindsay the latter part of the week, when a big recruiting campaign will be organized here. There is a splendid opportunity for the young men of Victoria and Haliburton to rally to the defence of the Empire. The fact that a battalion is to be organized in our midst should stimulate them to greater enthusiasm and greater desire to do their part.

Two members of the 93rd Battalion, Pte. McMillan and McTaggart, who gave their addresses as Haliburton, and who have been drilling here for over a month were arrested on parade this morning at the request of

ITALY TO SEND TROOPS TO ASSISTANCE OF SERBS

Bulgarians' Threat to Invade Albania Has Aroused Italy Who is to Take Immediate Steps to Stop Plans of Bulgars.

TO DESPATCH FORCES

ROME, Nov. 9.—The forecast that Italy will send troops to Albania to aid the Serbians is contained in a semi-official note which says that while Italy did not participate in the recent expedition of the Allies to assist Serbia she has found a better way to oppose the Austro-German-Bulgarian attack upon Serbia. This way the note says, was opened by the Bulgarians, themselves, when they threatened to invade Albania to reach the Adriatic, a decision so dangerous to Italy's interest that "the mere threat must oblige Italy to take appropriate measures to frustrate it immediately."

KITCHENER ON HIS WAY TO INDIA SAYS ONE REPORT

Washington Despatch Says Secretary of State for War Will Straighten Out the Situation in Far East

LOOKS LIKE POOR GUESS

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—An Associated Press despatch from Washington to-day says: "Earl Kitchener's ultimate mission during his mysterious absence from the British War Office is said to be India, where British rule is confronted with a more serious state of unrest than has generally been known outside of British official circles. Through a thick veil which British censorship has thrown about the events in India and Egypt comes the statement that Nawab, the Sultan Ul Mulk, the Nizam of Hyderabad, one of the most influential of the native princes and a staunch supporter of the British, has been deposed by his people. This development coming as one of the climaxes to successive reports of mutiny and unrest, many of which have been substantiated and admitted by the British Government, is said to be the leading reason for Earl Kitchener's departure from England.

DON'T DENY YOURSELF THINGS YOU'LL NEED

E. V. Warne's Auction Sale of Jewelry, Clocks, Watches, etc.

To-morrow at 2:30 o'clock begins the much-talked of auction sale of high-grade jewellery, etc., at the store of Mr. E. V. Warne, 325 George street. The particulars announce that the whole stock in store is to be offered regardless of cost, in order to convert the goods into cash quickly. A necessity to some prices, money will make the goods go freely. These days when economy is the rule in well regulated households, shoppers are anxious to make their dollars do double duty whenever they can. The sale of jewellery at auction prices would warrant conclusion. Many people will want to remember their friends at home and abroad at Christmas, "the boys at the Front" included. Here is a good chance to secure jewelry gifts, but remember that November 15th is the latest that parcels can be despatched to ensure delivery at the Front in time for Christmas.

Mr. Warne has been very fortunate in securing the services of Mr. J. R. Gill, of Atlantic City, who is one of the best known auctioneers in America. He is a man of very high integrity and will not misrepresent goods under any consideration.

VARIETY SHOW AT THE ROYAL THEATRE

In Aid of the Overseas Band of the 93rd Battalion on Thursday Night

The programme selected for the variety show at the Royal Theatre on Nov. 11th in aid of the Overseas Band, is one which will meet with the approval of the theatre-going public of Peterborough. There is good material in the 93rd Battalion, who will from now on rehearse nightly in order to place themselves at the service of the Band and the Kitchener League.

The programme for Thursday will be a selected one, when a number of prominent local talented young people will take part. Corporal Frank E. Traynor and Sergeant-Major Hartshorn will introduce a very funny sketch, entitled the "Raw Recruit," with a laugh in every line. Mrs. Scholey, singer, who alone is well worth the price of admission to hear, will render a number of popular solos. Miss Stevens, who is well known in Peterborough for her fine singing, will entertain with a number of other local artists, making this performance of quality.

Tickets may be secured by members of the 93rd Band or the boys in khaki. Buy freely. If you can't go yourself send your friends. You can do your bit by assisting in this way. Get tickets early and often.

A MONSTER MOOSE HEAD

What is probably the largest moose head secured in New Brunswick this year had been shot in the Tobique Woods near Nictau Camp, the well-known shooting grounds of Gude Adam Moore of Scotch Lake. He has had a party of eight American sportsmen at Nictau for the month of October, and they have shot four fine moose this year, one of the moose having antlers spreading 62 inches, while the others had large spread too.

The moose were never more plentiful around the Nictau Camp than this year, and the party are now after caribou, having started for the caribou barrens this week. After a couple of weeks caribou hunting, they will return to Nictau and finish their trip hunting deer.

THESE DARK DAYS

For the process of making and testing Dr. W. H. Locke's eyeglasses and spectacles, scrupulous exactness and precision characterize every step. Our service invites comparison. Our examining room is well fitted and arranged that any hour of the day or night is equally good for examinations and fitting. These dark days cause some to notice any defect in vision or eye-strain. It is a mistake to suppose that an examination can only be made on bright days. We have a dark room and artificial light, so we can give equally good results on the dark, dreary days of November as on bright, sunny days. "Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

TUESDAY, NOV. 9, 1915

WHO WOULD COMMAND?

Mrs. Nellie McClung in her demands has little of the negative about her. She is positively positive in her demand for the concession to her sex of the right of suffrage, and she is positively startling in her demand for recruits. At a big meeting in Massey Hall, Toronto, she made a plea that the men in the penitentiaries of Canada should be allowed to enlist; be given "a chance to make good in the eyes of society, and defend the principles of freedom and humanity." This is perhaps, not the quixotic proposal it, at first glance, seems to be. If the physically fit inmates of our penal institutions were given their liberty on the condition that they enlisted, it would perhaps be a much easier task to enlist the criminals in duress than to get the criminals, who being physically fit, refrain from doing their duty. Anyway there would be a sort of poetical justice in giving freedom to men on condition that they fight for the freedom of the world of humanity. It might be possible to raise a regiment by enlisting the prisoners in our penitentiaries. But we should be faced with the problem of providing such a regiment with officers. Men who move free among men, as honest men and law observing citizens, might not take kindly to officering men who are branded as law-breakers. This difficulty might be got over. If we want officers that might, according to the fitness of things feel at home commanding criminals, we might select as officers some of the criminals, that are abroad in Canada to-day; the men who, taking advantage of the country's and the Empire's necessity, make piratical profits out of contracts for supplying war materials. This might not, however, be fair to the penitentiary privates in the ranks. The officer is theoretically supposed to be superior to the men they command. Though this obtains in theory only, in the event suggested, the officers would not even in theory be superior in any sense except perhaps rascality—to the men they command. Among the thousands "doing time" in our penal institutions, there could hardly be found any with the cold-blooded calousness of crime, to be charged against the man who will rob the country in the way of criminal overreaching in fulfilment of war contracts.

THE LETTER AND THE SPIRIT

The United States' note to Great Britain dealing with the alleged interference by Great Britain with American trade is not couched in any too gentle terms, and seems in contrast with the mild spirit of the numerous "notes" to Germany in regard to her piratical actions of outrage. Of course, in its notes to Germany, the United States was only protesting against the destruction of the lives of United States women and children; while the note to Great Britain deals with the loss of dollars. The stronger and more peremptory character of the note to Britain suggests the possibility of a higher regard for mere money than for the lives of helpless United States citizens. Any surprise, however, that may be felt at the vigour of the language used towards Great Britain might be lessened by reflection upon what strong expression the exigencies of United States domestic politics, in the face of impending elections, and the placation of certain voting elements, may demand.

Of course the note raises some questions that are arguable; but a point to be remembered is that the circumstances are exceptional and that the claims and arguments that would be consistent and reasonable in a case of a war of less complicated, and, on one side, outrageously savage character, are ruled out by the doctrine of necessity, which cannot recognize the limitations prescribed by international law and polity, under less exceptional war conditions. The London Post very aptly points out that this war is a "fight for civilization"; and that the "United States, neutral as she is, must either be for civilization with all that civilization means, or against the ideal."

It is worth remarking that the note declares that the United States "unhesitatingly assumes the task of championing the integrity of the rights of neutral nations." In that regard she is a poor second to Great Britain, which has assumed the task of championing the neutrality of Belgium, with deeds and not words. Great Britain has in the field in championship of Belgium neutrality and civilization one-eighth of her population capable of bearing arms. Her navy is keeping sleepless watch, and has swept the commerce and shipping of the violator of Belgian neutrality from the seas; she has spent money like water on her own account, and has financed her allies to an amount enough to equal an army of four million men in the field. While Great Britain is doing this the United States makes a strong point of her trade rights, and champions neutral rights, by assuming towards Great Britain an attitude of rigid formality. No matter what technical justification such an attitude may have, it has too much of the pound of flesh spirit to be consistent with an "unhesitating assumption" of the task of championing the integrity of the rights of neutral nations. Standing on the letter of legal justification, it makes demands upon Great Britain, the real champion of the neutrality of Belgium, that tend to hamper her in dealing effectively with the outrage not only of Belgian neutrality, but of every item of the international decalogue, and all the laws of civilization and humanity.

"THE STATE? I AM THE STATE."

The Kaiser's assertion of the doctrine of absolutism based on the Army has been unceasing and passionate. It is the thread that runs through all his turgid speeches, through his repudiations of Parliamentary control, his fiery denunciations of the Socialists as the enemies of God and of himself, his addresses to the recruits in which he tells them that they must shoot their own parents if he orders them to, and through his declarations that the Army is his and his alone.—London Daily News

SAVING THE BIRDS.

The Conservation Commission of Canada is to be commended for taking up the question of the preservation of wild bird and animal life in the Dominion. It is to be hoped that the commission will not stop at mere consideration, but will quickly evolve plans for effecting its aims. If something worth while is to be accomplished there should be action at once. The trouble with such movements has generally been that they have been delayed too long, until the task of repopulating the fields and forests is a most tedious one.

To the great mass of conscientious people it must be a matter of deepest regret that such wanton destruction of bird life is permitted. But outside of enacting the formal game laws, the governmental authorities have not considered it worth while to take many active preventive steps. The same destruction was permitted in the United States until recent years, and now the federal authorities are busily engaged in trying to retrieve the mistake and bring back the birds. Prevention would have been so much more effective.

We suppose that in accentuating the economic side of bird slaughtering the Conservative Commission has felt it necessarily to appeal to the material instincts in order to get anything done. It seems to us that the view of Mr. Saunders of London, Ont., that the aesthetic side of bird life is of at least equal importance, is one worthy of consideration in the movement for preservation. It is a pity that there are not more people like that Mr. Jack Milne of Kingsville, Essex County, who expends three hundred bushels of wheat annually as an inducement for wild birds to come to his property.

The subject of wild life preservation has never been one that appealed strongly to governments. It has not been considered practical enough. There will come a time, however, in the life of Canada, when there will be keen regret that more attention was not given it.—Ottawa Free Press.

PARADE FOR SUNDAY BEER

Over 44,000 People in Chicago in Wet Demonstration.

CHICAGO, Nov 8.—A fight to the finish is on to-day between the leaders of the "wet" forces and Mayor Wm. Hale Thompson who is enforcing the state Sunday closing law in Chicago.

The Mayor to-day declared that the "wet" parade of 44,155 persons in line—the largest demonstration of the kind ever staged in this city, was "anarchistic." "If those people want to battle, Thompson will accept the leadership on the side of law and order," he said.

On the other hand, "wet" leaders to-day began plans for a fight in to-night's City Council meeting, which they declared would result in the presentation to the grand jury of charges that the Mayor and his aides have been guilty of malfeasance in office.

The Share of Delcasse and King Edward VII in The Anglo-French Entente

Two men are mainly to be held responsible for the fact that France and Great Britain are to-day fighting as allies. One, Edward VII., died before the fruits of his labours were ripened; Theophile Delcasse has lived to see accomplished the great purpose of his life, a European coalition against the German peril he early recognized and long prepared for.

In two of the most dramatic crises of recent history Delcasse played a prominent part. The first was in the Fashoda crisis when Britain and France stood face to face on the upper Nile and Colonel Marchand, who a few weeks ago greeted Kitchener in Flanders, met "K." of K." in Africa and peace or war hung on the decision of the French government. The second crisis was provoked by the Kaiser's excursion to Tangier in 1905, when Germany and France played similar parts.

In 1898 Delcasse made the great decision for his country. France having for a quarter of a century pursued a policy of colonial expansion, which provoked quarrel after quarrel with Great Britain, at last stood frankly before the dilemma which could no longer be avoided. Should she renounce her ancient European aspirations, her longing for the Rhine frontier, and fight England for colonial greatness in Africa as she had in Asia and America, or should she compose her differences with Britain and retain her European policy born of 1871?

Delcasse never hesitated. He compelled his nation to suffer the humiliation of Fashoda, to give up forever the Egyptian dream. He brought France back to Europe. But at the same time he made agreement after agreement with the British, in Siam, in West Africa. Finally in 1904, by a general liquidation agreement France and Britain settled all differences and the road was clear for Edward VII. to go to Paris and France and England to make their entente.

But Berlin perceived the draft of Delcasse's policy and of Edward VII's diplomacy. The cardinal principle of Wilhelmstrasse policy had been that France and England should be kept forever apart and Russia bound to Germany by a "reinsurance" treaty. Russia had already escaped; France and Russia were allies if Great Britain were now to join France. German continental supremacy, which had endured since 1871, would be shaken.

Thus in 1905, on the morrow of Russian defeat at Mukden, the Kaiser landed in Tangier and Europe faced the first of the series of incidents which lie between Fashoda and Armageddon. After Tangier Delcasse was forced to retire from the Quai d'Orsay to save France, taken wholly unprepared, from a war with Germany.

But German diplomacy in scoring a brilliant superficial success lost a great battle. For at Algeciras not only Britain but Italy stood with France, and it was the Triple Alliance which was shaken. Germany had struck to convince France that she could not join with England, and Algeciras brought the two nations closer together than before.

After Tangier Delcasse temporarily disappeared. But France, then at last aware of the peril that overhung her, began the work of national regeneration which was revealed at the Marne. When the Agadir crisis came France and Great Britain were disclosed as virtual allies, and before their combined firmness Germany recoiled. She was not ready for war, and the triumph of Tangier was turned into the disaster of Agadir.

Only once in this time does Delcasse appear in a conspicuous role. Clemenceau, as Premier, in one of the utterly incomprehensible domestic quarrels of French politicians one day launched into a violent assault upon Delcasse, and his own ministery fell. After Agadir Delcasse reappears in the Cabinet of "all the talents."

Nearly twenty years ago, then, Theophile Delcasse gave the first decisive turn to European affairs which culminated in the present struggle. About his own personal fortunes have centred some of the most dramatic steps in world history. Ten years ago Germany recognized him as her most dangerous foe, and struck him down, but his work had been done. In bringing France and Great Britain together, in removing the causes that kept alive their age-long rivalry, Delcasse created a barrier to German ambition which only war could force.

In German minds Delcasse was the author, the joint author with Edward VII., of the policy of "encirclement." He was the statesman who sought—and succeeded in his efforts—to fence Germany with an iron ring of foes. His policies and his purposes to the German mind, made this war. History may write the verdict differently, but there can be no escape from the conclusion that when in 1898 Delcasse chose to go to London rather than Berlin he set in motion the forces that made another Continental war inevitable. From Fashoda to Armageddon will undoubtedly be the fashion in which the future will describe contemporary history.

The actual causes of Delcasse's present retirement are obscure. Possibly the failure of Allied Balkan policy, possible questions of Parliamentary politics, conceivably ill health, traceable in part to the anxiety for his only son, a German prisoner—perhaps all these have contributed to this result. But his departure takes from the field the man who has, on the whole, exerted greater influence upon European affairs than any man since Bismarck. If France comes from this supreme test victorious and territorially again the France of the Third Empire, she will owe much to Delcasse. If she is defeated, his name may be accursed hereafter. But on one will underarte the greatness of the part he has played.—New York Tribune.

Corp. Stewart, a Peterborough member of the 59th Battalion, home on leave, who charged the two men with being deserters from the 59th. They were turned over to the guard and will be taken to Kingston.

Lieut. Marling of Lakefield reported for duty with the 93rd Battalion, this morning.

Ptes. Burrowes and Davis, of A Company, have been detailed as an escort to take the two deserters arrested this morning back to Kingston. They will be in charge of Corp. Stewart of the 59th Battalion.

Sergt. Major T. Miller, of the 93rd Battalion, went to Lindsay at noon to-day on regimental business

Lieut. Ivan Moore, of Lindsay, appointed to the 93rd Battalion, has been studying law in the office of Mr. T. Stewart.

The preparatory work in connection with the installation of the 93rd Battalion in barracks at the Armouries is being rapidly carried out. Lieut. Hill, the supply officer, is turning over a quantity of blankets and other supplies to Capt. Rollins, quartermaster of the 93rd, and this end of the work will be ready before the contractors have been finished with the alterations.

The Lindsay Warder says: Bandsman Barnes of the 59th Battalion Band, Kingston, is in town renewing acquaintances and in the course of a short conversation with a Warder man, stated that the 59th Batt. is about to break up winter quarters, a number of the men to be stationed in Kingston, and others scattered over several towns and cities.

Recently the 59th Band, which has a strength of over 40 members, was inspected by Lt. Bandmaster Slatter, of the 48th Highlanders, of Toronto, who stated that they were the best Canadian Band in the overseas service. As there are three Lindsay men in this band the bouquet will be appreciated by Lindsay citizens. They are: Bandsmen Shingleton, Barnes and Stubbins.

New recruits for the 93rd Battalion to-day are:
Patrick J. Dewey, Havelock.
Martin Neary, 27 Aylmer St. south.
Earl Koster, 341 Rubidge St., 7 years in 57th Regiment, 18 months in the Royal Canadian Regiment.

Speaking of the new battalion at Lindsay, the Lindsay Warder says: "There may be 1,000 soldiers stationed in Lindsay this winter," said Lt.-Col. Anderson to The Warder this morning. About 280 can be accommodated at the armouries, the balance of the men will be billeted in boarding houses throughout the town.

It is expected that Lt.-Col. Fee will be first in command, with Lt.-Col. Anderson, second. The latter officer leaves for Peterborough on the night train to report to the 93rd, but will return to Lindsay.

Lieut. Ivan Moore, Lieut. L. J. Flurey, and Lieut. W. K. Anderson, are also asked to report in Peterborough.

A new regiment will be formed in Lindsay which will be known as the 109th and it is the expressed opinion that all officers in command will be from this district, which belongs to the 45th.

"It is now up to the Victoria and Haliburton County men to enlist at once and get into the local Battalion," said the Colonel.

During Lt.-Col. Anderson's recruiting meeting in the north last week fifteen men in Fenelon Falls Haliburton. The recruits are expected in this week to report to the officer.

Mr. Burnham, M.P., in training at the Government Infantry School, Kingston, has been notified that he has been appointed captain and paymaster in the 93rd, now forming in Peterborough. Mr. Burnham desired, however, to fully qualify as a combatant, and has been granted permission to finish his course to that end. Mr. Logie, manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia here, will act for him as paymaster until the member returns. It is understood that the appointment, for which Mr. Burnham did not apply, was made by the Government in order that the member might have an opportunity of looking after the affairs of his constituency during the training of the regiment and its preparation for the front

Lieuts. Stock, McNab, Browning, New, and others, of Peterborough, now training at Kingston, will in all probability be appointed as lieutenants in the new local corps. Major Bayley will be assistant-adjutant it is said in Kingston.

TELL OF BELGIAN REIGN OF TERROR

Letters Received by Latest Mails Charge Many Cruelties—Famous Library Destroyed.

Despite the fact that the German censorship of Belgium is so rigid and so elaborately organized, more news concerning conditions in that country arrived in the mails from Europe yesterday than had been the case in many months. Much of the information came out of Holland, where the news was smuggled from Belgium. There was also some information direct from Belgium. In addition to letters there came copies of newspapers printed by Belgians in Holland. The information was all of the same kind, and seemed to verify the vague reports cabled from Europe recently that the Germans have instituted a reign of terror in Belgium.

A well-known Belgian, whose activities on behalf of his unfortunate countrymen are known from one end to the other of the United States, was the recipient of a batch of this mail from Belgium and Holland. To a Times reporter he showed some of the letters and newspaper articles.

"This information all goes to prove," he said, "that the German commanders in Belgium and their subalterns are finding a thousand different ways to terrorize the people. One of these, which is disclosed in to-day's mail, is to post a city or town with proclamations and statements supposedly signed by prominent Belgian citizens or priests, in which the signers tell the people that King Albert and his Government have deserted them and that, after all, their German conquerors are their best friends.

'Only two weeks ago there was posted in several of the Belgian towns a big poster signed Belgian philanthropist,' in which the people were told their King was against and not for them, and which urged willing subjection to the German invaders. An investigation traced the authorship of the poster straight to the German military headquarters.

"Another letter tells of the arrest and imprisonment of the old sexton of the Cathedral of St. Gudule in Brussels. A German officer entered the Cathedral. He had his dog with him, and when the sexton politely informed him that dogs were not allowed in the Cathedral, the officer had him arrested for disrespect and he was sent to jail.

"Here is a bit of information that goes a long way toward showing how far the German authorities will go to make life as miserable as possible for the unhappy Belgians. A short time ago the German commandant at Namur sent a circular letter to all the priests in that vicinity ordering them to notify him in writing of the time when the bells of the churches were to ring. No bell was to be rung without previous notification to the German commander, and the ringing had to be on the minute of the hour named. As a result of this order several priests were fined 1,000 marks, ($250) each, and sent to jail for three months for permitting the bells to be rung at unauthorized times.

IT'S FINE OR JAIL TO CONCEAL BRIDE'S AGE

TOPEKA, Nov. 9.—Kansas bridegrooms who make false affidavits about the ages of their intended brides face fines and possible imprisonment, according to an opinion of the Supreme Court. The court upheld the decision of the Ellis County District Court fining Jacob A. Rupp $100 for making affidavits before the Probate Judge that his bride was eighteen, when in fact she was fifteen.

According to the testimony on which Rupp was convicted, he was in love with the girl and danced with her continuously until long after midnight. Then she was taken before the Probate Judge and the couple were married. The girl returned to her father's farm a little later and Rupp fled to Denver. He was arrested and brought back to answer the charge of making false affidavits before the Probate Judge.

GinPills FOR THE KIDNEYS

Why Demanded

"Gin Pills did for my husband and me what no other remedy could. I have advised two other parties to use them, one of them being my mother who has been a great sufferer for upwards of 20 years, and one box cured her, so as to enable her to sleep on her left side, something she could not do for many a year. The doctors told her they could not cure her, but could relieve her by an operation for a floating kidney, but on account of her age they did not think it advisable for her to go. Upon my advice she tried Gin Pills which cured her and for which she is ever ready to speak in terms of praise."

How the Second Division Said Farewell to the Guards

Affecting Scene When the Guards Brigade Who Had Fought For Months Alongside the Gallant Lads of the Second Departed for Other Scenes.

WAS A FAMILY AFFAIR

LONDON, Oct. 25.—Mr G. Valentine Williams, special correspondent on the western front for The Daily Mail, tells recently of the parting of the columns when the Second Division said good-bye to the Guards' Brigade. He writes:

"What of the faith and fire within us,
Men who march away. . . . . .
To hazards whence no tears can win us,
What of the faith and fire within us
Men who march away?"

Thomas Hardy.

It was good-bye to the Guards' Brigade. To-day they were leaving the Second Division, with whom they had been brigaded for a year, ever since our little Expeditionary Force first set foot in France. The valor and tenacity of the Guards' Brigade "the brigade that never lost a trench"—is legendary in our army in the field, and their comrades in the Second Division, by whose side they had fought in the winter water and the summer heat, had turned out in the early morning to bid the Guards God-speed.

Veterans of Mons.

In the dull greyness of the summer morning the troops waited beneath the tall poplars bordering the highway, while staff officers, the red brassard of the division on their army, galloped busily to and fro giving the final directions that the send-off for the Guards might be well-ordered and dignified as befitted an historic occasion. Among those fine, hard bitten troops, with their tanned faces and straight backs, many of them veterans of Mons, the Marne, and the Aisne, were infantry from the shires and Scotsmen, both kilted and "trewed," gunners very smart in their riding-breeches and spurs, transport men. "The Bazaine Lancers," as they call them out here, and hospital orderlies with the badge of the Red Cross of Geneva on their sleeve.

Was a Family Affair.

It was quite a family affair of the division—the leave-taking of the Guards. A few peasants stood and gaped in front of the old red-roofed cottages of the faubourg and little children ran in and out among the troops. But otherwise no stranger came between these faithful comrades of a hundred fights. The highest officer present was the general commanding the division, than whom no man there was heart-stricken at the parting with the Guards. I saw him come riding up the road to take up his position in front of a way-side shrine, an elegant figure with grizzled hair, sitting a splendid bay.

"The Herts Guards."

It was a sad leave-taking. My eye fell on the Hart badge of the Bedfords on the collars of the detachment of infantry lining the road. There were Hertfordshire Territorials, the only non-Guards battalion in the Guards' Brigade, known accordingly all through the army as "the Herts Guards"—a most honorable title which should surely survive the war. The Herts Guards were being left behind, and very sad they looked as they stood and listened to the distant crash of the band which proclaimed that the Guards were coming.

Oh, that there were more music in this war! It did the heart good to see how heads went up and shoulders were thrown back as the thud of the drum and the crash of the brass came billowing down the road, resounding above the sudden burst of cheers that greeted the Guards as they emerged from the town, and the steady tramp of feet. Here is the drum-major, with tarpling staff, here the big-drummer with flourishing drumsticks; all around him with a glint of brass and a blare of noise the band. And behind them march the Guards.

The Same As of Yore.

These drab figures in khaki-covered caps and stained khaki, with their dull green web equipment and short brown rifles, have little in their outer man of the Guardsmen we used to know. Their dress is not the historic attire of Waterloo nor the scarlet tunic and black busby of St. James's Palace only thirteen months ago. But their magnificent physique, their long stride, their perfect alignment, the harmonious swing of them arms, the grand poise of the head, the clear, cool look of the eye—this is all of the Guards, seasoned in the field, strong in their great traditions, proud of their fine record in the war.

Comrades' Cheer.

Behind the band came the cyclist company of the 2nd Grenadiers, and then the Grenadiers themselves. A subaltern stepped out from the front of the "Herts Guards." Lifting his cap, he cried: "Three cheers of the 2nd Grenadier Guards!" With a roar his men responded while the Grenadiers swung by, smiling and nodding, with here and there a hand thrust out from the ranks to give a friend a farewell grip. With iron tramp the battalion, four abreast, goes down the road, the colonel on horseback at its head, behind him the endless files of stalwart figures stretching away into the distance, the officers strangely unfamiliar without their swords.

As the leading files of the Grenadiers came level with the general the command rang out: "Eyes... right!" All heads turned towards the immobile figure on horseback by the little way-side shrine and the grave face of the divisional commander broke into a warm smile of recognition as he raised his hand to his cap in response to this parting mark of respect.

Irish Giants.

A skirl of pipes, the roll of drums in the distance, and the Irish Guards come past preceded by friendly Highlanders who are piping them on their way. Big men all they are, with some regular giants in the ranks, lean, muscular fighters with long heads and great hands in which the rifles seems but a toothpick. With them, at the head of his platoon, marches Sergeant Michael O'Leary, a small body of a man, on his tunic the scrap of blood-red ribbon which he risked his life to win a dozen time at Cunchy.

With many adieux in the broadest of Scotch the pipers take their leave of the Irish Guards at the saluting point and go back to bring up the Coldstream Guards, the 2nd and 3rd Battalions, heroes of Cunchy, worthy peers of their 1st Battalion that suffered so heavily at Ypres last year.

The One Who Was Not There.

As the last files of the Coldstreamers disappeared round a bend of the road, amid a never-ending burst of cheers, I felt that nowhere in the world to-day a finer body of fighting men could be seen. We all regretted both the Guards and those who gave them God-speed that the general whose name will for ever be associated with the work of the Guards' Brigade in the first year of the war was not there to see his men go by. He took command of the Guards' Brigade on the Aisne, and until his promotion a few months ago, shared with them all the fortunes of war. The idol of the Guards, he infected them with his own fine spirit of intrepidity and endurance. He was present to-day in the thoughts of many who saw his old brigade go by, "the brigade that never lost a trench."

A New Harmless Way To Banish Hairy Growths

(Beauty Topics)

By following this suggestion any woman can, in the privacy of her own home, remove every trace of hair or fuzz from her face. With powdered delatone and water mix enough paste to cover the hair wanted hairs; apply and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off and wash the skin. The method is untailing, harmless and quick in results, but care should be employed to get the genuine delatone.

6,148 Men Have Been Trained At Barriefield Camp Since It Opened Last May

2 992 Soldiers Have Gone to the Front From There—About a Million Dollars Has Been Expended in Pay Alone

BARRIEFIELD WAR CAMP, Nov. 9.—The big military war camp is on the eve of closing for the period of training of 1915 to open again early in the spring of 1916, and continue training men for soldiers until the echo of the cannon and the clash of arms has ceased in the present stupendous struggle with the Hun, the Teuton, Turk and Bulgar, and the dove of peace once more spreads her wings over the continent of Europe and Asia.

The present camp was opened on Friday, May 21st last, and on Saturday, the 22nd, the camp staff, with Colonel Hemming as camp commandant, marched into camp and commenced to prepare for the reception and training of troops. On Monday the 24th of May, the 7th artillery brigade entered camp. They were followed by the 38th battalion of Ottawa under the command of Lt.-Col. Edwards. Then came the 8th C.M.R. of Ottawa under Lt.-Col. Munro, and last, the base battalion in command of Lt.-Col. Fee, which is now the 59th battalion in command of Lt.-Col. Dawson.

With these overseas troops were camped a detachment of the R.C.E. under Major Burritt, No. 5 field company of Field Engineers from Queen's under Major Wilgar, No. 2 detachment C.P.A.S.C., No. 3 company C.A.S.C. in command of Captain Welsh and now commanded by Lieut. George Driver, No. 3 detachment C. O.C. under Major Prideaux, a detachment of the P.A.M.C. under Captain Turner, the A.M.C. under Major Gardiner, A.D.M.S. a veterinary detachment under Lt.-Col. Morgan, the headquarters staff under Colonel Hemming, the dental corps under Captain Winnett, the field hospital under Captain Richardson, with staff chaplains, Y.M.C.A. and gospel tent. Since the 22nd day of May last these have all been in operation training men for the serious work of defending the integrity of the British Empire, and contending for the liberty and freedom of the nations of the old world and the new.

Camp Overseas Units.

When the camp opened it had the 25th and 26th batteries with the ammunition column, the 8th C.M.R., the base battalion which was changed into the 59th battalion on the 21st day of last June, and the 38th battalion. At the close of the camp it contains the 32nd, 33rd and 34th batteries C.F.A., "C" squadron Depot C.M.R., the 59th infantry battalion and the 80th infantry battalion. The 25th and 26th batteries, with the ammunition column, have gone overseas, followed by the 8th C.M.R., both units being in England at present. The 38th battalion is doing service in Bermuda, the 80th battalion will entrain for Belleville, Picton and Napanee on Monday, the 59th will move into the armouries on Tuesday morning, until their winter destination is definitely settled by the militia department. the 32nd, 33rd and 34th batteries have gone into winter quarters in the Cereal Works, Kingston, and "C" squadron, Depot C.M.R., were placed in the dormitories at artillery park until they are ordered to proceed to regimental headquarters at Hamilton.

Number Trained in Camp.

Since the 24th day of May last, 6,148 men have been trained for active service. Of this number, Barriefield camp has sent 2,992 men to the front. Most of these men have been drawn from civil life, and had no previous military experience. About 200 hundred officers have been trained in the Provisional School of Infantry, and 50 officers, non-coms. and men given the most complete course in the use of the machine gun, in the Machine Gun School, and later a class of 80 more given machine gun instruction. Courses in signalling have been conducted, and a school of military cookery has recently qualified 24 army cooks. Special courses of lectures have been delivered on every phase and feature of military activity by Lieut.-Col. Thompson, of the R.M.C. staff, and officers who have returned from the front. Route marches, night attacks, outpost duties, trench digging and rifle range work have been carried out without stint, and active service conditions have prevailed in every department of camp training. On the breaking up of camp, which started yesterday, there were 3,156 men under canvas, exclusive of departmental corps. The big task of supplies and equipment for the camp has fallen to the lot of Major Hamilton, A.D.S.T., and Major Prideaux, senior C.O.C. officer.

Money Spent in Camp.

Few people have any idea what it costs to run a camp like Barriefield for nearly six months. In pay alone for men and officers, Barriefield camp has paid out since last May $680,000, and before the camp closes up all its pay lists, the total will easily reach one million dollars. Supplies and equipment for the camp have cost the Government over $350,000, with incidentals covering another $25,000. Each ration has cost the Government 50 cents per day, per man, and with total camp costs figured in has meant 50 cents a day for every man that has been trained during the summer, and the camp population has fluctuated between 3,000 and 6,000 men throughout its duration.

Mail Service in Camp.

The camp has maintained its own post office service, in charge of members of the Canadian postal corps. Since last June this department has sold over $4,000 worth of postage stamps, $12,000 worth of money orders, $1,000 worth of postal notes. It has sent out over 3,000 registered letters containing money, and has received over 1,500 pieces of registered mail for members of the camp. The post office has averaged a collection of 1,000 letters a day for the outgoing mail, and has received an average of 1,200 letters a day for distribution among the men.

Hospital and Dental Work.

Over 10,000 operations have been performed by the Dental Corps, and 2,600 men have passed through the hands of the dentists since the first day of last June. For the month of October alone, the dental department made 44 plates. The field hospital has been well managed, and has averaged since camp opened 70 patients daily. Fully 10,000 cases have passed through the capable hands of Capt. Richardson, in his field hospital, and in the base hospitals which were the General, Hotel Dieu, and military hospital on Queen street.

FRANCE'S BIG GUNS AT TAHURE

The following despatch has been received from Mr. H. Warner Allen, the representative of the British Press with the French Army:

The important news of the capture of the village and hill of Tahure has given general satisfaction, as it implies the fall of a really important and extremely powerful fortress in the German second line. As in the previous attacks the field and heavy artillery prepared the way for the assault and enabled the French infantry to get to close grips with the enemy. Two days ago I had the opportunity of witnessing a portion of that "solide preparation par le canon," as the communique calls it, which led up to the capture of these positions. We were scrambling, as best we could, over what remained of the captured German trenches, which, torn and shattered by French shell, were a vivid example of the devastation that these same shells were working a mile or two ahead on the second German line trenches. The Champagne Pouilleuse is a country of distant views. Its undulating hills run up to a height of 500 ft. or 600 ft., and between then one has glimpses of hills behind the melancholy woods, until it seems that the bare monotonous landscape must reach to the end of the world.

The air was quivering incessantly with the noise of guns, sometimes each individual shot would be lost in a general deafening roar, and sometimes the sound would lull a little, so that one could distinguish its component parts. The line of the German trenches were they lay by the village of Tahure was marked by great columns of white smoke, that slowly drifted eastward. The French in the advanced lines were making liberal use of aerial torpedoes, which carry a heavy charge of explosives. These torpedoes have played no small part in destroying the German underground fortresses over which we were walking. Here and there one of them which had failed to explode was still sticking in the chalk, an ugly fat case of explosives with twisted metal wings that suggested some unspeakable reptile which had tried and failed to fly.

The Human 75.

Meantime, the Germans, though they were firing more slowly, were searching blindly for the French batteries. Sometimes the whurr of the shell would increase in volume, instead of gradually dying away towards the enemy's line, until an explosion not far away told us that it was what the French call an arrivee, that is a projectile from the Germans. Their shells seemed to have a wonderful faculty for finding empty ground that they were welcome to tear up to their heart's content. Sometimes a wounded man, with head or arm bound up, would walk past us, towards the ambulance, showing that occasionally a German shell had not been so far from its mark, but never were they able to find the batteries for which they were spasmodically seeking.

With the 75's perhaps one does not fully realize that the present war is a war of machines. There is something human about them, and they do not utterly dwarf the men who are serving them. It is when one comes to the heavy artillery that the human element seems—though, of course, quite erroneously—to be non-existent. Throughout the fighting in Champagne the heavy guns have played an all-important part. Guided by the all-seeking aeroplane, they have wrecked ammunition and store depots and railway lines far away in the German rear, spreading confusion, and depriving the front trenches of reinforcements in men and munitions. So effective was their fire that in several cases prisoners were taken who for forty-eight hours had received no fresh supplies of provisions or ammunition.

SNOWSTORM IN MANITOBA.

Public Utilities in Winnipeg Were Tied Up.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 8.—Snow fell last night in Winnipeg and most of Manitoba, and the ground here is covered two inches deep this morning with snow falling. The storm in this city tied up public utilities. Telegraph wires west of Winnipeg are not working. There was snow also in parts of Saskatchewan.

Blood Thin and Weak Too Nervous to Sleep

Here is Another Case in Which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Proved Its Great Reconstructive Influence

Thin blood and exhausted nerves usually go together. A considerable portion of the blood is constantly consumed in keeping up the vitality of the nervous system. Once the blood is deficient, either in quantity or quality, the nerves suffer and bodily pains result. Headaches, neuralgic or sciatic pains are the indications in some cases, while in others weakness, nervousness, irritability and sleeplessness are the most marked symptoms.

Mrs. R. F. Catlin, Elm Springs, Sask., writes: "For years I was troubles with nervousness, and could not sleep nights. Also had lack of colour as a result of the blood being thin and weak. My husband saw Dr. Chase's Nerve Food advertised, and got some for me, and wanted me to try it. I did so, and it has proven a wonderful help for me. By enriching the blood, it has restored colour to my face and has built up the nervous system so that I rest and sleep well. It is a pleasure to recommend so excellent a medicine."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food goes direct to the formation of pure, rich blood, and for this reason is the most certain means of increasing the quality as well as the quantity of blood in the human system. The feeble, wasted nerves are restored, and through the nervous system new vigor and energy is imparted to every organ and member of the body.

You will be surprised at the way this food cure puts new strength and vitality into the weakened body. And the best of it is that the benefits are both thorough and lasting. In this the Nerve Food differs from mere stimulating medicines which give rise to false hope and when discontinued leave you as weak as before. Put this great restorative treatment to the test and prove its merits in your own cases. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Men of Peterboro' are hearing a great deal about the splendid work being done by the famously good cook who has charge of the Examiner Better Foods Better Homes school, in Conservatory of Music this week and they heartily approve of the reports their wives are giving of this teacher's work. It is proverbial that men do not like fancy cooking and they are gratified to know that the teacher who has been secured by the Examiner, teaches how to make bread and cooks meats and devotes her time to such substantials as men like. They are grateful for the invitation extended them to attend the evening session Thursday and it is more than likely that the class Thursday night will be pretty equally divided between the sexes.

Gives Bread Lesson

Mrs. Brown-Lewers teaches how every housewife can make good wholesome bread if she knows a few secrets as to why they must have certain proportions and what happens if they have some other proportions. At Thursday's session of the Examiner Better Foods Better Homes school, Mrs. Brown-Lewers will show how to make a loaf of good, sweet, white bread, which is literally the "staff of life."

The cookery program at the Better Foods Better Homes school is proving an expansive one. Women learn from this teacher fundamental rules which can apply to every process of cooking and recipes which they can vary from time to time in such a way as to make the matter of planning three meals a day a simple and fascinatingly interesting one. The cookery lessons are exceptionally interesting and helpful both to experienced and amateur cooks and women, young, old and middle aged are attending and have only words of highest praise for their teacher and the foods she serves.

Serves Pie.

The interesting subject of pie is being discussed at this afternoon's session. Pastry that is delicate and brittle and delicious to taste and not hard to digest, is one of her hobbies, and she is teaching definitely in this afternoon's cookery lesson how this may be made and is serving apple and lemon pies.

The entire menu to-day is a mouth-watering one and characteristically English, except perhaps, the pie, and under Mrs. Brown-Lewers' tutelage, it is more than possible that the housewives here will learn to make such excellent pastry that this favorite American dessert will became exceedingly popular here.

The recipe for Mulligan from the northwest is particularly interesting during this, the game season because it is a "man's dish" and very toothsome.

Currant Mint Jelly.

1 cupful currant jelly
1 orange rind grated
1 teaspoonful mint leaves
⅛ teaspoonful salt

If dry mint leaves are used pour boiling water over or steam a moment to soften.

Beat jelly with fork, add grated orange rind, salt and mint. Let stand two hours before using.

Serve with lamb or mutton

Dauphine Potatoes.

To an equal portion of chou paste add mashed potatoes, to each cupful add ¼ teaspoonful nutmeg. Fry in deep crisco hot enough to brown a cube of bread in sixty seconds.

Chou Paste.

1 cupful milk.
1 cupful flour.
4 tablespoonfuls crisco.
4 eggs.

When milk is boiling add crisco. When melted, add flour all at once, stir until paste leaves the side of the pan. Add eggs, unbeaten, one at a time.

Mulligan.

Grouse, squirrel or rabbit preferred; any kind of meat is good. Onions, carrots, corn, potatoes.

Cleanse and wash thoroughly the meat to be used. Dry by patting with a towel or piece of clean cloth. Rub with salt and melted crisco. Sear the surface quickly by open flame. (Under a gas flame answers the purpose). Place pieces in the bottom of a deep pot, laying them so there is plenty of space between the pieces, sprinkle with pepper. On top of the meat lay large potatoes that have been cleansed and pared and cut into halves, salt and pepper again. Then add the carrots, cleansed and cut into inch pieces, then the corn, cut from the cob or canned; and last, add onions peeled and sliced. Now pour over the whole sufficient water to cover the meat well. Salt the onions, dot the top generously with crisco. Cover tightly and simmer slowly until the meat is very tender.

Butterless—Eggless—Milkless Cake

2 cupfuls brown sugar.
2 cupfuls water.
1 cupful seeded raisins.
1 teaspoonful salt
4 cupfuls flour.
½ cupful chopped nut meat
1½ teaspoonful powdered cinnamon
1 teaspoonful powdered cloves
½ teaspoonful nutmeg
½ teaspoonful powdered mace
2 teaspoonfuls baking soda.
1 teaspoonful baking powder
3 tablespoonfuls warm water.

Put the crisco in a saucepan, add sugar, water, salt, raisins and spices and boil for three minutes. Cool. When cold, add the flour, baking powder, soda dissolved in warm water and nut meats. Mix and turn into criscoed and floured cake tins. Bake in a slow oven for one and a half hours.

Letter From Gunner McGregor on "Metagama"

Capt. Gordon Hall, formerly of No. 1 Company of the 57th Regiment and now second in command of "B" company of the 93rd Overseas Battalion, has received the following note from Gunner George McGregor of the 93rd Battery, who was a sergeant in No. 1 company of the 57th.

R.M.S. Metagama.
Oct. 24, 1915

Dear Gordon,—As you will notice by above date this is Sunday and, I may add, about eight p.m. I have just been up on deck watching the occasional signal from the two destroyers that are accompanying us, and it makes you think that you are on the way to the real thing. Our port holes have been closed and carded up, light proof, "safety first," and it is just a little warm. Billy and I are in the same berth with two other boys. We are in the pink of condition now. Billy was sick for two or three days but he himself now.

We got a splendid send-off at Kingston from the citizens. The young ladies provided us with lunches and cans of coffee to use while on the train.

Say, Gordon, we heard the Toronto papers had some report about the Metagama being sunk. I trust that they have not for it would cause a lot of uneasiness to those who have friends and relatives on board.

You will have to pardon the jumpers, but I better as I am writing the first thing that comes to my mind and the boat is rocking a little. We have not had any rough weather so far and I guess we will not now as we intend to dock to-morrow morning some time.

Gunner McGregor's brothers, Private Jack McGregor is in the 93rd Battalion.

SOME 39th MEN ALREADY BACK FROM THE TRENCHES

Pte. Herb. Edwards of the Machine Gun Section Says Boys From the Draft of His Battalion Have Returned From France Wounded.

PTE. HERB. EDWARDS

ANOTHER DRAFT GOING

Mrs. J. W. Edwards, 185 Sherbrooke street, has received an interesting letter from her son, Pte. Herb Edwards, of the Machine Gun Section of the 39th Battalion, and son of Pioneer Sergt. J. W. Edwards of the same battalion.

Pte. Edwards says: "They have called for 33 men, qualified machine gun men, from brigade headquarters, and our whole section have put their names in, so we may be called upon any day now to go to the front, and I am ready any time they call on me, but don't worry. If I go I will watch myself and keep my head down. There is a draft going from the 39th to-morrow of 100 men and also the men that were left from the 21st and 24th. They have all been equipped with the Webb equipment. Some of the men of the 21st Battalion that went over are back from the front wounded, also some of the 39th draft. They can tell you some exciting tales, let me tell you. We have got twenty-four men in the section also a new officer. We are getting lectures now every day, and we old men are having a good time. We are teaching the new fellows all we know and perhaps some things we don't know.

WOMAN TELLS HOW GERMANS RULE BELGIUM

Civilians Not Permitted to Speak in French—Punished on the Least Pretext.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Nov. 9.—After 19 months' separation, Jan Bouckhout and his family, Belgians, have been reunited. His wife and four young children reached here only a few days ago from Ghent.

Bouckhout left Belgium for the United States before the Germans had entered Ghent, which was over a year ago. Since then he had heard but seldom from his wife and children, and it was only after extreme difficulty that he arranged with the American Consul for departure of his family. The family has taken a dairy near Fort Worth and will return to Belgium.

Mrs. Bouckhout is bitter against the Germans.

"They are tyrants," she declared. "They punish civilians on the least pretext. If one goes out with a dog, the dog must be muzzled and leashed. Once, because a dog broke away from a man he was imprisoned. The Germans forbid speaking of French and no French signs are permitted. Only Flemish and German are allowed to be used.

"If a Belgian policeman fails to arrest one for speaking French, the policeman is put in jail. Until last February the Germans paid for everything they took in war tickets and these tickets were to be cashed after the war. Now they pay for nothing and take everything they want.

"One night," she says, "a few thousand soldiers will march into town, only to leave the next day toward Germany. The big guns also are being transferred to Germany, and it is declared in Ghent that the German forces are evacuating all of Flanders except the firing front. Proving that they are short of ammunition, the Germans do not fire at aeroplanes flying over Ghent any more and do not waste bullets in reckless firing as they did at first. Formerly thousands of automobiles were seen in Ghent. Now the Germans are using only about a dozen, as they have no gasoline."

When asked if she thought Germany would annex Belgium the little Flemish woman grew rather excited.

"Oh, non, non, non!" she exclaimed. "Listen! The war has made all Belgians brothers and sisters. Rich and poor alike gather at each other's houses to exchange food and views on the war. We are willing to give the Allies time to drive the Germans out, but annexation, Never!"

An aeroplane propeller invented in Germany is built up of leather on a nickle steel frame and is said to be indestructible.

BRITON AND TEUTON IN COURT OVER WAR

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., Nov. 9.—S. D. French Author Tells of British Military Supply of Marmalade

Mr. Maurice Barres, who is making a study of conditions in England, on the invitation of the British government, is writing his impressions for the Echo de Paris. In a recent article he has some interesting comments regarding the food supplied to the troops.

"It is well known," says Mr. Barres, "that the English soldiers will fight best on a full stomach. In the Transvaal it was one of Lord Roberts' most important tasks to see that his men received food in plenty. When the soldiers had their roast beef they fought like demons. Unlike the French soldiers, their horses must be well fed or they will become listless and indifferent. Then again they have their own peculiar habits and traditions, which must be catered to.

"I have just accompanied a general on his tour of inspection.

"'How are the men?' he asked an officer.

"'They want more vegetables and less meat,' he replied.

"'Good! What else?'

"'They complain that they always get the same kind of marmalade.'

"'Certainly, give them some other kind occasionally. You see,' said the general, 'the men have their daily ration of marmalade, but it should be changed regularly, so that they will have cherry marmalade one day, plum marmalade the next, orange marmalade following, etc., etc. We must guard against monotony in food. This we are careful to look after. Consequently, you will agree, I think, that the English soldier is well taken care of.'"

The GRESSMAN Company Limited

Calls British Blockade Illegal; To Contest Seizure of Vessels

The three outstanding features of the American note of protest to Great Britain against interference with neutral sea-borne commerce are set forth in the following excerpts from the note:

"It is incumbent upon the United States Government to give the British Government notice that the blockade which they claim to have instituted under the Order-in-Council of March 11 can not be recognized as a legal blockade by the United States."

"The United States Government feels that it can not reasonably be expected to advise its citizens to seek redress before tribunals (British prize and appellate courts) which are, in its opinion, unauthorized by the unrestricted application of international law to grant reparation, nor to refrain from presenting their claims directly to the British Government through diplomatic channels."

"The United States has no other course but to contest seizures of vessels at sea upon conjectural suspicion and the practice of bringing them into port for the purpose, by search or otherwise, of obtaining evidence, for the purpose of justifying prize proceedings, of the carriage of contraband or of breaches of the Order-in-Council of March 11."

Having stated and supported with argument and evidence these three propositions, Mr. Lansing, the Secretary of State, concludes his note as follows:

"I believe it has been conclusively shown that the methods sought to be employed by Great Britain to obtain and use evidence of enemy destination of cargoes bound for neutral ports and to impose a contraband character upon such cargoes are without justification; that the blockade upon which such methods are partly founded is ineffective, illegal and indefensible; that the judicial procedure offered as a means of reparation for an international injury is inherently defective for the purpose, and that in many cases jurisdiction is asserted in violation of the law of nations. The United States cannot with complacence suffer further subordination of its rights and interests to the plea that the exceptional geographic position of the enemies of Great Britain requires or justifies oppressive and illegal practices.

"The Government of the United States desires, therefore, to impress most earnestly upon His Majesty's Government that it must insist that the relations between it and His Majesty's Government be governed not by a policy of expediency but by those established rules of international conduct upon which Great Britain in the past has held the United States to account when the latter was a nation engaged in a struggle for national existence. It is of the highest importance to neutrals not only of the present day but of the future that the principles of international right be maintained unimpaired."

A Concentration of Misstatements

In Regard to the Attitude and Relation of the Otonabee Power Company to the City

The following appeared in the Review of Saturday, November 6:

A clash between the city and the Otonabee Power Company, rivalling in liveliness the struggle between the city and the Peterborough Light & Power Company, is due very soon. The franchise of the Otonabee Power Company, allowing them the use of the city streets for their poles and wires expired last January. Since that time the Company have been notified by the city to remove their distributing plant, but have entirely ignored the demand.

At last night's meeting of the Finance Committee of the City Council it was decided to enter into legal proceedings immediately to force the company to remove their poles and wires from the streets. This will not be done, however, until some assurance is received that the Utilities Commission can give light and power at once to all those who would be deprived of it through the removal of the Otonabee Company's wires and poles. To come to some arrangement in this regard the Finance Committee and the Utilities Commission will hold joint session in the very near future. In the meantime no effort will be made to collect rent from the company.

Aside from the animus apparent in the above article it is a garland of misstatements from beginning to end. Every sentence is a misstatement or a misrepresentation. It unnecessarily adds to the muddle in which the lighting interests of the city seems to be involved.

In the first place there is no "clash" between the Otonabee Power Company and the city. On the contrary, the relations between the city as represented by the Utilities Commission and the Company, are of the most friendly nature. The Otonabee Power Company has assisted the Commission in every possible way. The two have worked, and as far as known, still work happily together. When the Commission wanted use of the Company's poles to supply light to the Commission's customers it was freely given.

The street franchise of the Otonabee Power Company did not, as stated by the Review, expire last January. It expired a year ago last January—but coming within a year of the truth seems to be as near as our contemporary can come when it has an object to gain by deviation from the facts.

The Company claims that it has not been notified to remove its poles and therefore could not have "ignored the demand."

It is stated that the Finance Committee decided to "take legal proceedings immediately" to force removal of poles. This is inconsistent with the next statement that this will not be done till the Utilities Commission "can give light and power that would be cut off by the removal of the Otonabee Company's wires and poles." This shows that the city is still dependent upon the good graces of the Otonabee Company, which the Mayor says with such choice metaphor, must be "got off the perch."

As to the payment of rental, this has been paid as regularly since the franchise lapsed as before it had been paid. The bill for the last quarter was asked for three times and refused—the Company being desirous in that, as in other things, to pay its bills. The Company claims that it is acted fairly by the city and has not followed precedent by trying to get customers from the Hydro-Electric and has helped the Utilities Commission in any way desired or in its power.

It is recognized that the Otonabee Power Company has given cheap lighting, and it has the credit of having forced substantial reduction, from which the users of electricity for light have had the benefit for several years. There is no good object to be gained by complicating the electric light and power situation, or stirring up bad blood.

Will Provide Entertainment For the Soldiers

Otonabee Chapter I. O. D. E. Will Furnish Music, Games and Refreshments One Evening in Each Week

At the monthly meeting of the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., held on Saturday, it was resolved to help the Club now being formed for the use of the soldiers by providing music, games, refreshments, etc., for one evening in the week if so desired by the committee in charge.

Miss Jean Harstone reported that upwards of six hundred essays on "Why the British Empire is at War" have been written by the children of the Public Schools. This number is now reduced to 37, and the final decision will be announced soon, when the winner will be allowed to choose between a silver medallion or a five-dollar gold piece as a prize. Mr. Mowat and Mr. Stubbs are kindly assisting Miss Harstone in judging the essays. The Chapter is greatly pleased at the interest this competition has evoked among the school children of the city. The secretary was instructed to pay the sum of $25 to the Peterborough Red Cross Society, this being the amount promised monthly to the society by the Otonabee Chapter.

After other business had been transacted Mrs. Huycke read a portion of an address compiled by Miss Arnoldi, telling of her experiences and work among the Canadian soldiers. The remainder of the address will be read at the next meeting.

The Junior Chapter, in connection with the "Otonabee" is providing Christmas gifts for the children at the Shelter. The members are also assisting Mrs. Brown-Lewers at the Conservatory Hall this week. They also do Red Cross work under the direction of Miss Harstone. New members will be welcome.

When Peterboro' Was Young"

Subject of Ald. Dobbin's Address Before A. Y. P. A. of All Saints' Church

The first meeting of the A. Y. P. A. of All Saints' Church was held last evening in the Parish Hall. The President, Mr. J. W. Worth, briefly outlined the intentions of the Association for the coming winter and then a most enjoyable programme was gone through. Ald. Dobbin gave an address on "When Peterborough was Young," which proved very entertaining. The soloists, also Mr. John and Mr. Carte added zest and success to the evening's enjoyment.

The President thanked Ald Dobbin and the artists on behalf of the association, after which refreshments were served. About forty enrolled last night and it is expected that this number will be appreciably increased. The committee intends to keep up the high class shown at last night's gathering.

SHAKSPERIAN NAMES FOR NEW STATIONS

The problem of finding new names for stations has been solved by the Kettle Valley Railway on its section through the Hope Mountains, construction of which is almost completed. Well known characters from Shakespeare have been selected, their melodious names having a romantic character in keeping with the picturesque nature of the country. One station just north of the Coquahalla River Canyon is called Othello, another Lear, a third Jessica, a fourth Portia, followed by Iago, Romeo, another station, is eternally separated from Juliet by Coquahalla Summit, which is 3,300 feet above sea level and not likely to be removed by anything short of an earthquake.

Received Parcel of War Souvenirs

Mr. Chas. Perry, proprietor of the American Hotel, received a parcel of war souvenirs this morning from his nephew, Gordon Dalby, who enlisted in Toronto and is now with the Army Service Corps. It includes a chatelaine from a nurse's body, a rosary picked up in a graveyard, pieces of steel piping from a German aeroplane that was brought down behind the British lines, a silver-mounted cigarette holder, and other articles. But of most interest is a German belt taken from a dead soldier, and decorated with buttons, clasps, bars and other metal trimmings of uniforms. Fred Hopkins, of Port Hope, a friend of Dalby's, assisted in adorning the belt, the centre of which shows the elaborate design of a Prussian Guard's helmet. There are articles from French, British, Austrian and German uniforms on dead soldiers.

BEFORE THE VERDICT.

"Why, Sharpe, I'm glad to see you so lively again. You were quite lame when I last met you."

"Oh, yes; I was awfully lame then. But that was before I got a verdict of $1,000 against the railway company."

FRUIT OF TORY ALLIANCE IN 1911 ELECTION

Colonel Lavergne Repeating Now What the Nationalists Spread Through Quebec To Help In the Defeat of Laurier

A FINE SPECTACLE, NO

OTTAWA, Nov. 8.—The statement made in the report sent out by the Canadian Press last night that the St. Stanislas, Que., meeting addressed by Armand Lavergne and other Nationalists, was held under Liberal auspices, is indignantly denied at the Liberal headquarters here. The meeting was purely a Nationalist one and not a single Liberal was invited to attend or speak.

The campaign of the Nationalists against Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Liberal party now is as vicious and determined now as it was in 1911, when the Conservative-Nationalist alliance was in full and undisguised effect. Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, who has been especially active in stimulating recruiting in the Province of Quebec, and who has addressed scores of patriotic meetings, has been subjected to the most bitter abuse of late from the Nationalist press and speakers because of his Imperialism.

Col. Lavergne's frank statement yesterday that both he and Mr. Bourassa were offered portfolios in the Borden Government when the ministry was being formed, is naturally decidedly disconcerting to the Prime Minister now.

Col. Lavergne's statement is, however unrefuted, nor has his recent anti-recruiting letter to Sir Sam Hughes brought forth any ministerial criticism.

FIGHT BETWEEN "INS AND OUTS."

Montreal, November 8.—"It is a family quarrel pure and simple, a struggle between the ins and outs," declared Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, when asked about the report sent out that the meeting held by Armand Lavergne yesterday at St. Stanislas was under the auspices of the Liberal Association of Champlain county.

"The Liberals and the Nationalists are as far apart as the two poles. The Liberal Association of the Province of Quebec has had absolutely nothing to do with the Nationalists. The meeting held yesterday was held by the Nationalist wing of the Conservative party but the Conservatives can take very little comfort out of Lavergne's attack on Blondin, because it is well known that the whole Nationalist campaign in 1911 in which Lavergne, Blondin, Bourassa and Patenaude were combined, was actually financed by the Conservative organization in Montreal. Le Devoir, the organ of the Nationalists, was circulated in the French-Canadian centres of Ontario and the west by the Tory leaders of Montreal. In 1911, Pelletier, Blondin, Patenaude, Lavergne, Bourassa, and other Nationalists, combined in opposition to both Laurier and Borden. After the 21st of September the faint-hearted among the Nationalists accepted portfolios and patronage from Borden. Bourassa and Lavergne, however, stood by their guns, and they to-day are denouncing the other who stood side by side with them on the public platforms of this country four short years ago. The present struggle is a family quarrel pure and simple. The Liberal party is as far removed from the Nationalists as it was in 1911."

LIBERAL POLICY ONE FOR ALL CANADA

Continuing, Mr. Lemieux said: "The Liberal party has but one language and one attitude for the whole of Canada. What we say in Quebec can be said in Toronto or Winnipeg without the change of a single syllable. We are a unit in favour of Canadian participation, we are loyal to Great Britain, and believe that when our mother country is at war Canada is at war. The French-Canadian Liberals in the House of Commons have in this respect followed the lead of their venerable chief, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and at all the different recruiting meetings held throughout the province have appealed to their fellow-citizens to stand by the mother country in her hour of trial. Not a Tory speaker except the Hon. Mr. Casgrain, has spoken in favor of Canada's participation. We have yet to hear the voice of Hon. Mr. Blondin, who wanted to shoot holes in the British flag in order to breathe the air of freedom, and of the other Tory Nationalists who were opposed to the navy and to the Liberal policy."

QUARREL IS A FAMILY ONE

Mr. Lemieux also gave the lie direct to the reports that the Liberals had opposed the Nationalist Ministers who were recently taken into the Borden Cabinet as good conservatives. "The Hon. Louis Coderre," said he, "was opposed by Tancrede Marcil a Nationalist leader, a man who ran against Hon. Charles Marcil in 1911. Doucet, who spoke yesterday at St. Stanislas was a Nationalist candidate against Pat Lenaude. I have to repeat that the quarrel. It is a row between those who swallowed what principles they possessed four years ago and those who stuck to their guns. The Tory-Nationalist party in the province are washing their dirty linen in public."

LEMIEUX vs NATIONALISTS

Mr. Lemieux is in a good position to speak in regard to the resentment of the Nationalists, as he has been in all parts of the province holding meetings. He has addressed upwards of twenty-five recruiting meetings, telling his fellow countrymen that their duty is to go to the defence of their King and Country, and that Canada's first line of defence is in France and Flanders. In contrast to his appeals the Nationalists are preaching the doctrines which were responsible for Borden's victory in 1911, when Tory and Nationalist united here to denounce the Laurier naval policy and everything relating to our participation in the struggles of the mother land.

GERMAN CASUALTIES AVERAGE 8,500 A DAY

61,955 In One Week—Germany Like a Feverish Patient to Whom the Leech Has Been Applied—The War Maniac Whose Blood Has Been Drained

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Germany's enormous losses in the fighting—chiefly on the Russian front—toward the close of September, losses since doubled, if not trebled, by the offensives on the western front and in the campaign against Serbia, are the subject of comment in a letter published yesterday from Horace Green special correspondent of the Evening Post, written from Berlin on Oct. 3. Mr. Green writes:

To-day Germany is like a feverish patient to whom the leech has been applied—the war maniac whose blood has been drained. I worked for some time trying to get the proper figures of this blood-letting.

I found the answer on the walls and corridors and written in the titles of the War Office just around the corner from the Neue Wilhelmstrasse. Here the casualty lists have been complied up to Oct. 2. By the newspapers, which are not much more than official bulletins, there is little said about the extent of losses, and the War Office neither calculates nor encourages their calculations. In fact, copying and republishing the lists in German papers is strictly forbidden. But for the benefit of friends and relatives the names of individual dead, wounded, and missing are systematically and honestly posted each day during severe fighting.

The German casualties for the single week ended Oct. 1 were 61,955.

In other words, 61,955 German citizens, or more than 8,850 a day, have been killed, wounded, or taken prisoner during the last seven days of Russian warfare. Since it takes a week or more to compile the reports from the front these figures can have no connection with the great fight of this week along the western front, where, during the renewed English-French offensive it is said that the losses were three times greater than any similar period of the war.

The seven days from Sept. 23 to 30, inclusive, were not above the average of the past two months. I took the figures because they were the latest and the most easily available. On each column were 120 names, thus: Johann Schmidt, Carl Broshuer, Rudolph Haenker; and after each name, "slightly wounded, (severely wounded), missing, dead." On Sept. 30 there were seventy-two columns of names, making a total of 8,640 losses. On Sept. 29 there were sixty columns giving 7,200 names; and the losses for the other days of the week, figured in the same way, were as follows: Sept. 28, 9,000; Sept. 27, 8,625; Sept. 26, no list posted; Sept. 25, 11,080; Sept. 24, 8,810; Sept. 23, 8,700.

By far the greatest number of losses were sustained by the Prussians. It is reported that the Prussians alone have lot more than 2,000,000 men up to this date. In all cases the Prussian, Saxon, and Bavarian losses were grouped separately. In certain instances companies and even entire regiments were wiped out. A random example is the Third Company of the Sixty-third Prussian Reserve Infantry, which lost 246 men. A company's war footing is 250. Of these 84 were "gefallen" (killed outright), 49 severely wounded, the remainder lightly wounded. Not a man was captured.

FINEST OF MOVIES TO AID RECRUITING

The Militia Department Will "Show" Films in All Dominion Centres

OTTAWA, Nov. 8.—A most excellent series of moving picture films showing the Canadian troops in training in Canada and in England has been secured by the Militia Department. They will be exhibited throughout the country and will undoubtedly be of material assistance in the present recruiting campaign. This morning the Duke of Connaught, some of the Cabinet Ministers and their wives, members of the Militia Headquarters Staff and others, accepted an invitation of General Sir Sam Hughes to view the pictures at a local theatre. Among the films is one showing a regiment in training at Victoria, then travelling across Canada and across the Atlantic to England.

Sir Robert Borden and Gen. Sir S. Hughes are seen reviewing the troops at Shornciffe. The Prime Minister is also seen addressing the troops and visiting the wounded Canadians in the hospitals and convalescent homes. One of the most interesting and striking films of the whole series is that showing a chart of the famous battle of St. Julien, with the lines of the Germans and Canadians moving backward and forward as the terrible fight progressed.

TURNBULLS

By Just Two Days, Truant Case In Police Court Missed Its Aim

David Fowler's Son Was 14 on Sunday and Had Just Passed the Age at Which He Is Privileged to Remain Home From School—Magistrate Annoyed at Father

A peculiar coincident arose out of a police court case this morning when David Fowler was being heard on a charge of not sending his son, Harold Fowler, to school. Mr. Geo. Cochrane, truant officer, stated that Inspector Mowat informed him that the boy was thirteen years old, according to what he had told his teacher some time ago. Mr. Fowler, rather densely, remarked that he took the boy to be 14; he was not sure and all that, but just the same he had a paper in his pocket received from the City Clerk's office showing that his son was fourteen years old on November 7th, just two days ago. Fowler's methods riled the Magistrate who, believing the boy was 18, had given the father friendly counsel as to his duty. But when the man groped through his pockets and produced the slip of paper, Mr. Dumble's tone changed to this sharp parting shot—"We can't touch him. You'll have the satisfaction of knowing, if he goes to the devil, that you were responsible."

Mr. Fowler had previously remarked that he would rather see the boy going to school, but he had never cared about going.

Mr. Dumble—And he has a father who never cares whether he goes to school or not.

Mr. Fowler said that he was off to work long before school time.

Mr. Dumble replied that it was well worth Mr. Fowler's staying home from work now and then in order to make sure that his son was attending school.

He replied that he could not afford to do so.

However, the court washed its hands of the case.

HIS BROTHER DIED IN A BLOODY ENCOUNTER

Mr. G. Rowberry, George Street, Receives Details of How His Brother Gave His Life

The following is an extract from a letter to the father of Mr. G. Rowberry, 408 1-2 George street, and tells of the death in action of his brother, Joseph Rowberry, who went from Toronto to join the 9th Worcestershires. The deceased soldier had a number of friends in town, and besides his brother, his sister, Mrs. R. J. Edwards, resides at 576 Charlotte street:

I am more than sorry to say I can tell you about poor Joe Rowberry. He was killed in the hill fight where I lost all my pals the 10th of August. He died fighting beside his officer, Major Moss. He was servant to him. The Major was killed with a bomb and poor Joe a second after was shot through the heart. I saw him drop but could not get near him on account of the dead and wounded, as they were four and five feet high. It was hell. Tell his friends he was very brave, but careless. I am sure he killed the bomber who killed his officer, as he was the only one left near that spot after the bomb had fallen. He died a soldier and a brave one."

GERMAN GOVERNMENT MAKES HUGE PURCHASES IN HOLLAND

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 9.—The presence in Holland of larger numbers of Germans than have been seen for a long time past is causing much curious speculation. The Germans are buying very large quantities of goods both eatables and other merchandise, but most of such commodities as are not allowed by the Dutch Government to be exported. The German buyers seem to show no inclination as hitherto to try to get purchases over the frontier. They instead are making arrangements for the goods to remain in Dutch warehouses for the time being. Many Netherlands regard these proceedings as indicating the approach of some sort of an armistice, during which the export problems might be temporarily removed. Others even suggest the enterprise may mean that peace is looked for and that preparations already are being made to cope with the tremendous rush to buy foodstuffs which in such an event would arise.

In any case, the circumstances are unusual and the Dutch are convinced that something is in the wind. Other and more sinister deductions are possible.

German Attacks to Improve The Spirit of the Troops

PARIS, Nov. 9.—In place of the usual afternoon communique yesterday the French War Office gave out an official summary of the operations on the western front during the week ended Sunday, the feature of this resume being the assertion that the morale of the Kaiser's troops on the west is shaken. The prestige of their commanders also is said to be sorely impaired.

It is to improve the spirit of the troops, the War Office declares, that is the main reason for the persistent, though thus far fruitless, German attacks in the Artois and Champagne. The statement adds the Kaiser hoped to serve the same purpose by sending troops from the Russian front to the west, the veterans of the eastern theatre supposedly being imbued with a more victorious spirit. In this the German general staff also failed, it is asserted, the Teutonic offensive having nowhere at any time assumed a more than local character.

As for the French, the statement points to steady gains made in Champagne. The War Office adds that many of the German soldiers fighting now in the west are young and uninstructed landstrum.

With regard to the actual operations, it was stated that there is nothing to add to the preceding communique. The regular night communique was issued, however. It chronicled violent artillery combats during the day in several sections of the front, notably in the Artois, in the Loos sections and around the forest of Givenchy, as well as north of L'Avre, in the environs of Andechy and in Champagne east of Tahure and north of Massiges. French batteries destroyed north of Saint Mihiel a German anti-craft gun. In the Vosges the battle featured by the use of hand grenades and bombs was again very lively in the environs of Chapelotte.

TAX BACHELORS IS HAMILTON'S PLAN

Alderman Will Ask Council to Move In This Direction

HAMILTON, Nov. 9.—Alderman Hodgson stated yesterday, following a conference with the city solicitor, that he intended moving at the next meeting of the council to-night, that the legislation committee be asked to consider his suggestion of a general taxation on all those whose names do not figure on the assessment rolls. The committee will be asked to apply to the provincial legislature for an act imposing a war tax on every male inhabitant between the ages of 21 and 60 years who are not already assessed, and also to consider the advisability of taking steps to interest other provinces and British dominions in the scheme.

The alderman has received many congratulatory letters since he broached his suggestion, and is confident that the tax will go into effect in the near future. He originally planned to have single men only assessed, but now believes that married men who do not pay taxes should be lined up also.

CHARLIE STEVENS WAS COMMITTED

Preliminary Hearing In Police Court This Morning On Serious Charge

Charles Stevens was committed for trial in the police court this morning on a charge of attempted rape. In the hearing it was stated that the offence was committed on July 30th, 1913, on the old London street bridge, but the young woman, since married, protected herself so effectively that the young man beat a retreat. The police apprehended him in Chatham a few weeks ago, where he was preparing to join the colours. He will likely appear at the next assizes.

Cholera is Now Added to Burdens of Armenians

NEW YORK, Nov. 9. — Cholera has added its terrors to the burdens of Armenian refugees who flee the Tigris and Euphrates Colleys to Tabriz, according to meagre advices received here by the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions and made public yesterday. One hundred a day is now the average mortality from the scourge in Tabriz alone, these advices state.

Urumiah, too, the recent fighting ground of Kurds and native Christians, is afflicted by cholera, the board announced. Forty deaths have already occurred there from the disease. All the deaths, both in Tabriz and Urumiah, it is said, have occurred among the natives. The missionaries stationed at both places are relieving the sick as best they can with inadequate facilities.

Tiflis, Russia, which lies south of the Caucasus Mountains not a great distance from Tabriz and Urumiah, is similarly in the grip of an epidemic which has already caused 700 deaths, according to the board's advices. It is thought likely that these deaths were due to cholera, also, although the nature of the disease is not designated in advices.

"Who Dies if England Lives" His Farewell To His Captain

Messrs. Trebilcock Bros have received the announcement of the death in action of Lieut. W. D. Deas, the representative of McFarlane, Son and Hodgson Ltd., stationers, Montreal, who was a monthly caller to the Peterborough Bookstore.

The formal announcement read as follows:

With great regret we announce the death in action of Lieut. William Darling Deas, 11th Battalion Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, only son of Mr. William Deas, Victoria Villa, Kircaldy, Scotland.

Lieut. Deas was wounded in the capture of Loos, on the 26th September, 1915, but in spite of this wound, continued to lead his men and was instantly killed later in the day.

His farewell to his captain on going into action was:

"Who dies if England lives."

Yours faithfully,

McFarlane, Son & Hodgson, Ltd.,
Montreal, 29th Oct., 1915.

WHY HE FELT JUST SEW SEW.

It was several days after arriving home from the Front that the soldier with two broken ribs was sitting up and smoking a cigar when the doctor came in.

"Well, how are you feeling now?" asked the latter.

"I've had a stitch in my side all day," replied the wounded soldier.

"That's all right," said the doctor. "It shows that the bone are knitting."

Prominent Men in Great Britain Give Their Views in Regard To Peace Negotiations

LONDON, Nov. 9. In view of the insistence of the neutral press that peace negotiations are being carried on, a correspondent requested statements from some of the most prominent men in Great Britain. The replies received to date are given below.

SIR EDWARD GREY. I can add nothing to what was recently said in Parliament by Lloyd George. We should not think of entering into any peace negotiations except in common with our allies, in accordance with the agreement of Sept. 5, 1914. This has always been made perfectly clear.

SIR EDWARD CARSON. If there has been a report current abroad that even an inconclusive peace would be welcome at the present moment I can only say that any statesman in this country who was directly or indirectly a party to such a home would find it impossible ever again to hold up his head among his fellow-countrymen, not merely at home, but throughout the British Empire. An inconclusive peace. The very words would stink in the nostrils of all honest people. Whatever our sacrifices may have to be and they will be great we realize that they may be drastic and terrible, we will meet them with strong and courageous hearts, and it will be time enough to talk peace when the resurrection of barbarism has been finally vanquished and freedom and liberty have been forever assured ourselves our allies and the whole civilized world.

H. G. WELLS. What feeling is there nobody in England has the remotest disposition to make peace until enemy is thoroughly beaten.

CONAN DOYLE. I have heard no such report as to premature peace, and if there ever has been such rumor it is certainly of German origin. Such a thought is inconceivable to any Briton. The war will certainly go on until each of its objects defined by the Prime Minister has been attained. The freeing of the French provinces and of Belgium, the clearing of Russia and Serbia, and the curbing of Prussian militarism and to these to be added the punishment of all murderers and criminals, however high placed.

Sir Hiram Maxim.

The only dissenting view comes from Sir Hiram Maxim, who claims for his machine gun that it has killed all the people who have fallen in the present war. He says: "I am in a position to meet a good many prominent persons and read a lot of news and I am very strongly of the opinion that all the nations that are in the war would be very glad to get out of it. The Germans expected a walk over. They expected to be in Paris in ten days, but more than 100 days have passed and there is not the slightest chance of there ever being a peace. Germany has struck her blow and as far as the Government is concerned, it has been a failure. I see the Germans would be very glad if they could find some way to get out of the war. If they keep on they will be at the end of their tether. Austria practically in the same position but not quite so bad. I feel that however that the Russians would never accept any terms of peace that would deprive them of any of their territory. It is quite possible, however, that all the nations now engaged would be glad to get out of it, providing they could get out without paying any indemnities to each other, that is each one pay its own expenses each nation to look after its own wounded and bury its own dead. I think it is quite certain that Germany started with a little chance of success of winning and if it loses the odds will be very much against it ever getting another chance. The cause of the war was the determination of Germany to pay for the Spanish American war and the very fact that the cause of the war was the determination of France and England to have it paid for by Germany would be a sufficient reason why it should not be paid."

THE WORLD OF SPORT

BIG WAR GAME DESCRIBED IN GRIDIRON LINGO

Northrup Gives Details of the Great Battle; Wire Trouble Delays Finish

The Allies won the toss and got the better side with whatever favouring winds from neutral quarters. The Teutons kicked off to Albert, the star Belgian tackle, who was so close pressed by the opposing forwards that he had to punt.

The Teutons had the ball in the middle of the field and at the first line-up sent Von Kluck, the Prussian half-back, through Albert by a hard plunge that nearly put the latter out of the game. His colleagues were so slow coming to the defence that Von Kluck never stopped till he had carried the ball across the field for a touchdown goal.

By hard drives at the line where Capt. Joffre was playing centre, the visitors forced the ball into the French captain's territory till it was almost near enough for a goal from the field. Then the home team took a brace of points and by a sudden and fierce offensive at the Marne yard line, supported by god interference, brought the ball back to a safe distance from their goal. Here both elevens struggled in close play and old time tactics till the whistle blew.

SCORE, FIRST QUARTER: ALLIES, 0; TEUTONS, 7.

"Awful Turk" in Game.

Beginning the second quarter, the Teutons put in "Awful Turk," who had been reported sick, at full back. Von Hindenburg was given the ball, and by a surprising run without any interference circled left end for seventy yards and a touch-down. No goal.

Now it started to rain and the rest of this period was played in the wet. The Teutons put in a "Sub" specially trained for sloppy weather, a North Sea sailor boy from Tirpitz, who had his spurs yet to win. He used a low, gliding, worming method of advancing; he would keep the ball almost hidden and appear with it unexpectedly. The Allies were kept guessing to follow the ball and lost considerable ground before they studied out an effective method of tackling him.

There were many points of his play protested and the umpire and referee had several consultations with the Teuton captain, who promised not to repeat it. Before the period ended Bull made a touchdown and two goals from field.

SCORE SECOND QUARTER: ALLIES, 12; TEUTONS, 13.

Italy Goes In in Second Half.

The Allies' sympathizers set up a cheer as Italy entered at left half back in the beginning of the second half. They certainly looked stronger than the Teutons. Now the visitors changed fields and faced the east goal. "Russky," the Allies' right half back, had made good gains by breaking through tackle and then he made a long run from the Galician yard line almost to a touchdown.

The Teutons determined to concentrate their attack on this husky player and, if possible, put him out of the game. After some hard plunging by Hun, a forward pass was made to Von Mackensen, who broke through all opposition in a long run for a touchdown, and Prince Leopold, the Bavarian star, kicked the ball over the Warsaw goal. They drove the ball deeper and deeper in the Allies' field, and the latter's goal was constantly in danger. But the defence gradually grew stronger and the Allies took the ball on downs.

Then began the fiercest offensive work of the game thus far. Joffre and French in a quick succession of hard drives at either side of centre, with splendid intefference, "Belg" and "Canuck" assisting, shattered the opposing line. Prince Fred, the Prussian promise, was badly crippled but stayed in the game. Joffre registered his gains by a touchdown before this period ended.

SCORE THIRD QUARTER: ALLIES, 18; TEUTONS, 20.

Wire Trouble Delays Result.

The fourth and last quarter has begun. The great contest on Europe's gridiron for the international championship starts with the double surprise of a new line of attack and a new player. Ford, the Bulgarian with a brilliant "prep" record, has been placed at the Teuton right end.

By a double pass Von Mackensen, the powerful Prussian back, gets the ball and is sweeping right end, the Bulgar leading the interference. Serb, the Allies' active quarter, reaches him first but can hardly stop his plunge. The French captain makes a dash for him, but the Bulgar interference is holding him off. Full Back Bull is hurrying to strike him farther down the field, but Turk is trying to block him. It looks like a long run and perhaps, a touchdown.

Johnnie Currie Dead.

INFANT DAYS OF FOOTBALL

Soldiers Played Brutal Game to Keep in Physical Condition

Some studious highbrow, with plenty of time on his hands, has been delving into the archives of the deep, dead past and has discovered a lot of things about the infant days of the game of football. The earliest inclination to play the game is found among the ancient Spartans. They were at war most of the time, and between battles they played football to keep in training.

They called the game "harpaston," and it was played on a rectangular field with goal lines. The object of the game was to get the football over the goal line, regardless of how it was done. "Fair means or foul" was their motto, and there were no rules. It was a bone-breaking game, but it kept the Spartan soldiers in the pink of condition.

As soon as the soldiers get their morning bulletin and learned that there was no battle on that day they chose sides and had a game of football. This not only kept the soldiers in fine fettle, but it also kept the hospital corps of the Spartan army in practice. As there were no rules, naturally no time was taken out for broken heads or broken legs. There were plenty of eager substitutes in those days, anyway.

Later, among the wild Germanic tribes there was a primitive game of football. They had a big, baglike ball, which they could kick and punch to their heart's delight. Even the Eskimo had a game where they kicked a ball of skin filled with moss among the icefloes.

The earliest white men who went to the South Sea Islands found that the natives played a football game with a ball made of bamboo fibre, and Cortez tells of the Aztecs playing a football game.

The first inkling of football in English literature is found where William Fitzstephen tells about the game. He writes that "after dinner all the youth of the hamlet go into the fields in the suburbs and address themselves to the game of football." Legislation against the game came as early as the fourteenth century, when Edward II. proclaimed that, "Forasmuch as there is great noise in the city, caused by hustling over large footballs, we forbid such a game to be played in the future."

Henry VI. was equally opposed, and said: "The King forbides that na' man play futball." It was so rough that many were killed, and not only that, but fdotball had taken the place of archery in popular favour, and the result was that the youth who joined the army were poor marksmen with the bow and arrow.

The game grew rapidly in England and Scotland, and in the Highlands, when a spirited game resulted in a tie at sundown, it was the custom to cut the football in two and give each team half. About this time a Frenchman visiting Scotland saw the game, and he wrote: "Well, if this is play, then, take me back to France when they begin to fight."

The game was first taken up by the secondary schools in England before it reached the universities. At Rugby School one of the first codes of rules was formulated. The first intercollegiate match was held between Oxford and Cambridge in 1872.

Football was known in America in the early days, being transplanted from the other side. As early as 1609 in the book, "Relation of Virginia," it is stated that "they used to play football. They make the gooles like ours," wrote an Englishman, "only they never fight nor pull another down." So it can readily be seen that the game as introduced here was not as savage a pastime as it afterward developed.

Football was first introduced at Harvard in 1838, when they played with a black rubber ball which was so light that it could be batted about in the air by the fists. It was something like a toy balloon. Later this ball was abandoned and the students played with a ball "filled with grass, rags, and paper." The best man on the teams then was the one who could do the most damage to his adversaries' shins.

THE RULING PASSION.

Host (proudly): And this is a masterpiece of Rembrandt!!!

Visitor: Great Scott, man! What is that unsightly hole in the corner? It spoils the whole picture.

Host: Well, you see, my wife is an autograph collector, and she wouldn't rest until she cut the signature out and pasted it in her album.

FIGHT PROMOTER RAPS MANAGERS

Snowy Baker Declares Boxers Would Be Better Off Without Them

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Australian fight promoters, or rather Snowy Baker, who has a corner in that industry in the island continent, is very much opposed to dealing with the manager of a boxer. Says the promoter:

"American boxers make a mistake when in coming to Australia they think it necessary to tie managers around their necks. The manager is a heavy burden to carry. He costs more than a wife and fifteen children, and he usually embroils the boxer in all sorts of tangles which mean the loss of big money. A team of boxers may find it useful to have a managing agent to look after their affairs, but the parasite on the individual boxer is usually a pest to him as well as to others."

TWO SIDES TO QUESTION.

While Baker is hardly in a position to discuss this matter without prejudice, there is much to be said on both sides of the question. No doubt there are some boxers who really need a guardian to look after their interests, but crack boxers of such limited intelligence are comparatively few in these enlightened days. The average boxer splits his earnings with a manager not from choice but from necessity.

Without a manager who has the inside track with the promoters he would be frozen out and never get a match. So far as the second-raters are concerned, it is a hold-up game pure and simple, for there is an unwritten law among the men who live on the earnings of fighters that the independent ones must be suppressed.

ONLY STARS GET MATCHES.

It is not until a boxer has become so prominent that there is a big demand for his services that he can afford to dispense with a manager and make his own matches. By that time he really needs a man to look after the enormous details conected with a big match.

From the public's point of view the manager is usually a pest. For the most part it is the manager who is responsible for sidestepping logical but dangerous opponents. The manager has no sporting blood. His one thought is money. Often the boxer's pride would not permit him to dodge the issue if it were not for his manager's excuses. Fighters as a rule are the best of sportsmen, and if not burdened by bad advice their performances would be a great deal more satisfactory.

"SHAG" FOR BASEBALL AND HOCKEY IN TORONTO

May Lead Shamrock Hockey Club and International League Team.

MONTREAL, Nov. 8.—The latest rumour on "the street" is to the effect that Ottawa may lose Frank Shaughnessy entirely, and that under the new arrangement in hockey whereby Messrs. McCaffery and Solman will acquire the Toronto Shamrock franchise Shaughnessy will be engaged to manage both the Toronto Baseball Club and the Shamrock hockey team.

PEROXIDE CLEANSES.

But it does not Heal Wounds, Says Dental Professor.

"It would be well for people to understand what peroxide of hydrogen will do and what it will not do," remarked a dentist just after extracting two old roots on which a large abscess had formed. "It is one of the best, if not the very best, antiseptics we have, but it has no healing qualities. Many people imagine that it will heal a sore place in the mouth, yet that is just what it will not do.

"I have just injected peroxide and water into the cavaties in the gums from which I extracted those roots. I did that to destroy the pus that had been left behind by the abscess. For that is the use of peroxide. It unites chemically with the pus and kills the germs that make it. But this is all that it does. And if you continue to use it you will retard the healing instead of hastening it. Peroxide, improperly used, has injured almost as many mouths as it has benefited. The sore place in your mouth is clean now and all it needs is something to keep it clean while nature heals it. Peroxide will not do that—in fact it will retard it."

WEIRD NAVAL CRAFT WHICH PUZZLED TURKS

British Introduce New Ships That Render the Enemy Torpedoes Ineffective and That Carry Big Guns With Which to Bombard the Turks' Positions

No stronger proof of British sea power and shipbuilding resources can be found than in the way he circumvented the submarines of the enemy at the Dardanelles. Every type of warship from the mighty Queen Elizabeth downwards was represented in the great Armada which attacked the Turkish defences in April. But the Turks looked exultantly when, after the sinking of the riumph and the Majestic the fleet had to retire to sheltered harbours protected by nets and booms. In their ignorance the Turks imagined they were going to enjoy a respite from big gun fire until the end of the war. They forgot, however, the time-honoured old axiom that the Anglo-Saxon race is always surprised but never beaten.

The Turk, says Mr. Ashmead Bartlett, had some real reason to feel elated. For the next two months he saw but little off his coast except an occasional battleship, some small cruisers, and tireless destroyers. Meanwhile, what was happening? The brains at home were working out a scheme to get back command of the surface of the Mediterranean. They set to work to design craft which could carry the guns of battleships without having their vulnerability to submarine attack. Only a nation with absolute command of the sea and with unlimited shipbuilding resources could have set to work to substitute one fleet with another of an entirely different type at a few hours' notice, in the middle of a great war, while at the same time blockading the German fleet and holding all the world's trade routes.

Rumours came rippling down the sunny Mediterranean of strange craft having been sighted on their way out, the like of which had never been seen in Eastern waters before. The rumours about craft of strange shape became more and more definite. One fine day in July the first of them arrived. She was unlike any other vessel ever seen in these parts, having a low freeboard, almost flush with the water, a 9.2 gun in her bows, and a long 6in. astern. She than a ship, but she talked like one all right, as the Turks found a few days later when she went out and tried a few shots at Asia for practice. She was followed by another little bird of passage, even smaller, armed with two brand new, beautiful 6in. guns, "the same as the Lizzie's," as the crew delight to tell you. She was so small and so young that no one had ever taken the trouble to baptise her, so she carried a number in lieu of a name. Her crew of 70 can hardly be said to live on her; there is no room for that—they apparently hang on anywhere they can.

This little craft came all the way from Britain under her own steam. "Yes, we had quite a comfortable passage, for the sea was fine, but what she'd do in a gale God only knows, for the smallest seas come right over her decks." This in answer to my inquiry. The Turks must have regarded her arrival with mingled contempt and amusement after their experience of the mighty Queen Elizabeth and others, but they sang a different tune when one fine day she went outside to calibrate, and they found that this baby of the deep could throw 100 pounds of high explosive 12 miles without over-reaching herself.

The next arrival caused somewhat of a sensation, not only to the enemy, but to our own troops. One afternoon there appeared at the entrance of Kephalos Harbour an amazing-looking object. She could hardly be said to steam up, but rather wobbled into port, like a huge goose, primed for Michaelmas. It was impossible to tell at a distance whether she was broadside on or showing her bows or her stern, for she seemed to be quite round. Her high sides held aloft an absolutely flat deck, on which nothing showed except an enormous turret, from which projected two guns of enormous girth and length, whilst rising up from her centre, like the giant of some Californian forest, was a huge striped tripod, bearing aloft a kind of oblong jewel-box, the exact replica, on a huge scale, of that in which the Dalai Lama bears about with him the ashes of his first embodiment.

With great difficulty, steering vilely, she made her way through the crowded harbour and dropped her anchor with the eyes of thousands riveted on her. No one had ever seen the like of her before. Sensation, in fact, followed sensation. Her crew began to bathe. Apparently all possessed the divine power of walking on the water, for, on descending the ladder, instead of plunging into the waves, they walked along them by the side of her, and, having thus distributed themselves, proceeded to dive in, only to climb out again a few minutes later at their will.

We set off in boats to investigate this strange phenomenon, and then found that just below the surface her sides bulge out some 10 feet, and then curve under, forming a platform just washed by the waves. This is the secret and

THE MYSTERY OF THESE CRAFT.

In that bulge man has concentrated his ingenuity to defeat the submarine. If a torpedo strikes her side it will explode amidst a variety of substances which I must not mention, and the hull of the vessel will escape injury. These huge monitors carry naught but two 14inch guns and some anti-aircraft armament. They are roomy and comfortable, unlike their smaller neighbours. Their speed is, however, very slow, on account of their strange shape, and they steer badly, but at present their development is only in its infancy, and they are interesting because in them you see the germ of what will probably be the battleship of the future. They can hardly be described as graceful, and alongside of the neat destroyers and elegant cruisers, with a stern-on view, they resemble a fat old dowager chaperoning some young and graceful friends at a ball.

The first time one of these monitors went to the mouth of the Dardanelles to calibrate she gave the poor old Turk a horrid shock of surprise. Her guns go off with a terrible roar, and carry over three-quarters of a ton of metal 15 miles. They recalled to the Turks the early days of May, when the Queen Elizabeth was still around. Later on three more of these monsters arrived, giving us eight 14in. guns with which to bombard the enemy's positions, in addition to a large number of smaller monitors of all shapes and sizes, some with names and some without, but each armed with the very latest weapons of precision. Then the new Fleet began to settle to its work, sallying forth day by day and bombarding the enemy's positions, being spotted for by balloon ships and aeroplanes. The Turks and the Huns then began to grasp the sad fact that we had once more regained command of the surface of the seas, and that the great effort which had led to the retirement of our High Seas Fleet had been wasted after all.

Later on two other strange vessels, the Endymion and Theseus, cruisers, 25 years old, also protected by a formidable waistbelt similar to that worn by the monitors, turned up. It has not improved their appearance, for the protection is hung from their sides by steel stanchions and wire ropes. They look as if they had just survived a terrible gale, in which most of their fittings had been washed away. These old cruisers of the Sir William White epoch have been born again. They and the monitors fear no submarine, and their fat, round sides give them an appearance of solidity and security. The big at sea, but they are no bed of roses to live in, for the coal dust penetrates everywhere, and they are almost impossible to keep clean. When they fire their big guns the concussion blows great clouds of smoke and flame from the funnels, smothering everything astern. They are not really ships at all, but floating gun platforms. Nevertheless, they serve their purpose well, and as an experiment have proved a great success.

Thus gradually, throughout July, our new Fleet assembled ready to cover the landing of new armies and to assist its efforts to break through the Turkish lines by the fire of its guns. The new fleet of monitors played an important role on the occasion of the new landing at Suvla Bay on 6th August, and in the various operations which followed. They covered with their fire the advance of our infantry, both at Anzac, Suvla, and Helles. Scattered along the coast, they commanded every vantage point and kept the Turks from showing themselves near the cliffs and checked their attempts to counter-attack. The scenes during these days were strongly reminiscent of the days of the first landing. Only the ships differed.

Her Five Sons Are Killed

Sapper Geo. Perks Tells of Pitiful Incident "Somewhere in Belgium"

A letter received by a local friend from Sapper Geo. Perks of the 6th Field Company, Canadian Engineers, 2nd Canadian Contingent, contains some interesting comment. The Peterborough boy writes, in part, as follows:

"We are going through such a terrible time that one hardly knows what to expect and the nearer one comes to the front the more one realizes what a fool thing war is. The best brains of a dozen countries trying to invent means to kill their fellow men in the most scientific way seems so absurd. We hear the big guns booming all the time and can imagine the destruction that is wrought going through some of the towns behind the firing line, it is heart rending to see the places that have been shattered to pieces.

I was going through one of these towns not long ago when I saw an old woman who was too poor to move out. It was just dark and I was on a road that was not allowed to be used during the day because it was in full view of the German trenches. She was carrying a big bag of wood or something and was labouring along to a battered house. I of course offered to help her and carried her bundle home and she began to sob out her troubles to me. In badly-broken English she told me she had lost five sons and pointed out places in the vicinity where three of them had been killed. It was really very sad and it is certainly a shame that such a terrible war is being fought in this little country and demoralizing everything.

I have been for the past couple of weeks in the Headquarters' Office, about five miles behind the firing line doing some draughting, so am not much more than just within hearing of the guns which really is close enough for comfort.

PRINCE SHOT BY GIRL WHO KILLS HERSELF

LONDON, Nov. 9.—Details of the love tragedy of Prince Leopold Coburg, nephew of King Ferdinand of Bulgaria, and the beautiful Lottie Rybichka in Vienna are given by the correspondent of Budapest. Report of the girl's death is confirmed, while the Prince is still living.

The Prince, who is thirty-seven years old, and the girl, who was eighteen, met two years ago at a high social function. Their meeting was a case of love at first sight. The Prince convinced the girl that he would be able to overcome the inexorable rules preventing the marriage of royalty with commoners.

Despite the opposition of the girl's father, who is a high official of the Austrian state police, and her mother Miss. Rybichka gave up her home and traveled with the prince throughout the country.

Girl Sets Death Stage.

Finally the couple took apartments in Vienna. On October 14 the girl ordered the servants not to return until 8 o'clock, saying that she expected the prince at 5. The prince, arriving, ordered his chaffeur to return at 7.

At 6 o'clock a soldier passing the house heard revolver shots. With the porter he hurried into the flat. They heard a faint voice cry, "Fetch the locksmith the keys are missing."

The men forced an entrance and found the girl lying in a big armchair with her head thrown back, dead. The prince was lying on the floor with four bullet wounds, one of which had pierced a lung. He held a handkerchief to his face, shouting, "I am blind; I am blind!"

Prince Leopold was hurried to a hospital, where it was found that he was suffering from vitriol thrown into his face. One eye was removed and the other is dangerously injured. He may die.

Story of the Tragedy.

The reconstructed story is that the girl, learning that the prince was ordered to the front, urged their marriage before his departure. The prince futilely endeavored to obtain his father's consent. His efforts in this direction failing, the prince offered the girl $100,000 as a recompense. She decided to accept it.

The prince then pointed out that marriage was impossible and tried to break off relations with the girl in obedience with his father's orders. Seeing the hopelessness of her plight, the girl threw vitriol in the prince's face and followed the acid with shots from a revolver which she had kept concealed. Then she turned the weapon on herself.

WOMEN TELL OF ASSOCIATIONS WITH SLAYER OF MATE

After Wife's Testimony Texan, Who Killed Another, is Denied Bail.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Nov. 9.—After Mrs. C. T. Thompson, widow of the man who was shot and killed by J. H. Sanford, testified that she had been conducting a clandestine correspondence with her husband's slayer, Judge Terell refused to allow Sanford bond in the habeas corpus proceedings brought on his behalf.

Sandford's attorneys gave notice of their intention to appeal from this ruling to the Court of Criminal Appeals.

Mrs. Thompson was called by the defense to testify regarding the time about five days before the killing, when her husband borrowed a shotgun from a neighbor and was asked if he did not make threats against Sanford at that time. She testified he said when he got the gun he was going to kill Sandford and then himself.

On cross-examination she admitted that Thompson said later in the same day that he did not mean to harm anyone but himself, but that he "couldn't live that way any longer." Pressed for a further explanation she admitted that her husband had found out about the correspondence between Sanford and herself and that was why he said what he did. Thompson returned the gun the same day he borrowed it, she said.

According to her testimony, the correspondence had been going on for probably two or three weeks. She had written four or five letters to Sanford and received probably a dozen from him. All of them had been delivered in person, she testified, either at her home or Sanford's, and she burned the ones she received as soon as she read them.

"Were they love letters?" asked Judge Terell, and the witness answered in the affirmative.

"Well, tell some of the things he said," persisted the Judge, but Mrs. Thompson professed to be unable to remember any of them.

Sanford went to Thompson's home immediately after the shooting and she said when she saw him coming she told the children she "guessed something had happened." Asked if she did not say: "I guess he done it," she said she could not remember. She went back into the house after she first saw Sanford. He stopped at the gate and told one of the children he wanted to talk to her. She went out to where he was, she said, and he told her he had shot Thompson, but said he was not dead and that he was able to walk around when Sanford left.

At first she denied having any further conversation with Sanford after she went to where her husband was, but later admitted talking to him near the house. She testified he said he didn't want her to think hard of him and she told him he couldn't blame anybody but himself.

PREDICTS AGE OF WIRELESS STREET CARS

Expert Says Next Step in Railway Progress Will Be Transmission of Power Through the Air

PASADENA, Cal., Nov. 9.—Dr. Bion J. Arnold, chief of the Board of Supervising Engineers of the Chicago traction system, who is considered one of the foremost authorities in the world on matters pertaining to street cars, in an address before the students at Throop College of Technology made two predictions of great moment.

One prediction was the soonest or later electric street cars may come to be run on the principle of wireless telegraphy; that is, that the electrical current will be transmitted without the use of wires. This, he says, is the perfect end of the development of the electric railway system.

The other was that it will be a comparatively short time until the much-talked-of jitney bus withdraws from the field of competition. Dr. Arnold said:

"The jitney bus cannot last. It costs more to run on rubber tires than on steel rails, and the gasoline engine has a far higher cost of maintenance than electric motor horsepower. While the bus drivers have new machines they must operate at an apparent profit, but, like street car men when they change from horse power to electricity, they haven't figured on the depreciation. When it comes to purchasing new machines, as old automobiles are worn out, it is probable that the jitney buses will begin to drop out of the business.

"A far more serious menace to the interurban electric lines comes from the privately owned automobiles. The farmer no longer walks half a mile to the interurban line, but jumps into his automobile and goes to the city in it."

As to wireless transmission of electricity, Dr. Arnold said:

"The worst feature of electrical railways is that the power is transmitted from sub-stations to the cars by mean of wires. The next step will be to transmit the power without wires. It now seems impossible, of course, but it would be the final step in the efficiency of the electrical car.

"Of course, getting electrical energy out of the atmosphere to run cars would make the electrical railways absolutely perfect; but we can't even think of that as a practical thing."

King of Greece to Dissolve Parliament and a General Election Will Follow

Impossible to Transact Any Business With the Followers of M. Venizelos Opposing—Not Certain That Venizelos Would Gain Upper Hand in an Election.

ATHENS, Nov. 10.—King Constantine will issue a royal decree dissolving Parliament, according to reports current here.

A general election will follow.

This indicates that the Skouloudis Cabinet has decided it is impossible to transact any business with the followers of M. Venizelos opposing.

Dr. Dillon, the special correspondent of the London Telegraph, who is regarded as an authority, writing from Rome says that the Greeks idolize King Constantine as a warrior. He proceeds: "The conflict between Greece's statesman and her Soverengn, who is deeply sensible of the power of Germany; secondly, Constantine and the Kaiser have powerful friends in Ministers Theotokis, Gounaris and Streit, as well as the military staff, court dignitaries and Baron Schenk's pensioners. Hence it is nowise certain that Venizelos would gain the upper hand in new elections which would involve several months of autocratic, kingly government, during which Greece would cease to exist as a factor in the European conflict."

DISSOLUTION LOOKS PROBABLE.

ATHENS, Nov. 9, via Paris, Nov. 10.—A prediction that the Chamber of Deputies will be dissolved is credited to Premier Skouloudis by the Patrie, which asserts that he replied when asked whether the ministry would appear before the Chamber: "The question is not formally settled yet but will be voted upon at a meeting of the Cabinet this afternoon. I can say now, however, that the Cabinet will not appear unless assured of a majority. If a guarantee of this is not given, the Chamber will be dissolved, unless a majority agree to support the Cabinet."

The section of the press which supports M. Venizelos is unanimous in declaring that the presence of General Yanakitsas in the new ministry makes it quite impossible for the parliamentary majority to give even a vote of tolerance to the government.

VENIZELOS' PROPOSALS.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—A Reuter despatch from Athens, filed Monday, says: "A Cabinet meeting was held to-day, but nothing transpired as to whether the government will accept the proposals of M. Venizelos with a view to avoiding the dissolution of parliament. These proposals consist either of Minister Yanakitsas' expressing regret for the incident which resulted in the overthrow of the Zaimis Ministry or all the followers of Venizelos absenting themselves from the sessions of the chamber, giving a free hand to the other deputies who will constitute a quorum. It is understood a majority of the ministers favour dissolution."

LOAN SOUGHT FROM ALLIES.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—The Greek government is reported to have appealed to the allies for further financial assistance.

A despatch from Athens to the Havas News Agency says that the government desires to obtain an additional advance of 40,000,000 francs ($8,000,000), and that this request is being considered sympathetically.

MAY SEND PROTEST.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—Britain, France and Russia are expected to protest to Greece against the presence there of German army officers. Despatches state that within the past 48 hours a number of German officers in mufti have arrived at Athens and are fraternising with Greek military men.

That Roumania, Greece, Serbia and Montenegro are bound by a secret covenant to stand against Bulgaria is the tenor of a despatch from Bucharest. This protocol was signed at the same time as the treaty of Bucharest, it is said.

A despatch from Athens says Prince George has reviewed 30,000 Greek troops at Salonika, in commemoration of the acquisition of that port three years ago.

AUSTRIA CALLS MEN OF FIFTY

Human Material is Almost Exhausted When 18 Year Old Boys Are Summoned

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Newspapers from Austria which reached this country yesterday display prominently on their front page the imperial decree calling to the colours boys of eighteen and men from forty-three to fifty years of age by November 15. That this order is not very popular is shown by articles telling the story of a gendarme who was sent to bring a man who had refused to comply with the order. The man resisted and a fight followed, in which the gendarme was almost killed. It is estimated that this order will add another 500,000 men to the Austrian armies in the field, but it will practically exhaust the supply of human material in that country. Some time ago it was stated that there would be no necessity for calling the youth and men of this age, but the heavy losses in the Teutonic armies show in what great need they are of these additional forces. Most of them will be sent to the Italian front.

"Young men in Austria-Hungary born in 1897 are hereby summoned to the colours; also those of Bosnia and Hersegovina. Furthermore, those born in 1873 and 1877 and those born in 1891, 1895 and 1899 will also report for military duty. On November 15 all males between the ages of forty-three and fifty years will report for examination to the military commanders of their respective districts and be made ready for military duty."

CAIRO CONSPIRACY ENDS IN DISASTER

Forty Persons of New Sultan's Court Were Arrested

BERLIN (by wireless telegraph to Sayville, L. I.), Nov. 10.—The Overseas News Agency gives out the following despatch from Constantinople:

"Reports received from Cairo state that a great conspiracy has been discovered there, headed by persons in the entourage of the new Sultan, the conspirators to remove the ruler and his Ministers and liberate Egypt from the British yoke. Forty persons from the court were arrested and twenty-five already have been executed."

QUEEN INSPECTED BRITISH TROOPS

Replacing the King Who is Ill —Queen Delights Troops

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The Queen, accompanied by Princess Mary, acting for the King, inspected a division of troops ready to go to the front, to the great delight of the soldiers. The inspection was made in as thorough fashion as though by the King himself. After she had expressed to the officers her appreciation of the bearing and smartness of the men, Queen Mary was heartily cheered as she rode from the field.

Berlin Says British Fleet Scared Greece Into Action

BERLIN, Nov 6.—The press of Berlin makes no attempt to minimize the victory of former Premier Venizelos of Greece over the Zaimis Ministry, and asserts it brings a sharp crisis in the affairs of Greece. An exception is the Vossiche Zeitung, which declares the Grecian Cabinet crisis "is of no significance in connection with the foreign policy."

The Tageblatt devotes a column to comment on this situation, although news of the defeat of Premier Zaimis was not received until late Thursday evening. It says a new and grave political crisis has been created by the vote of the chamber of Deputies, and believes financial difficulties or "the chicanery practiced by the British fleet" may have been the cause.

"But the fact cannot be denied," it continues, "that a majority of the Chamber has taken the standpoint that it is to go through thick and thin with the entente, as its true vassal and with its financial support, according to the wishes of Venizelos, and to entrust the nation's future to a daring adventure rather than to assume the burden of temporary sacrifices and hardships which the country's persistence in its neutrality would entail."

The Tageblatt points out, however, that the decision as to the nation's future course is dependent not on secret treaties of the Opposition leader, but on the provisions of the constitution, which give King Constantine free rein to appeal to the people. The King can adjourn the Chamber for some time and then order new elections, following which there may be a delay of several weeks between assembling of the new Chamber.

During this long period the King would be able to place the nation's affairs in the hands of men of his own choice. There is no present reason, the Tageblatt concludes, to expect an immediate reversal of the policy of Greece.

The Taigheach Rundschae, under the head "Greece facing a decision," says:

"And so the personal ambition of a Venizelos has succeeded in the last hour in endangering the continuity of Grecian policy. Thus King Constantine is again called on to make a grave decision. Only two ways are open to him. One leads back to Venizelos; the second must be dissolution of the Chamber. In any event, several weeks would elapse before a new election. Before that time our weapons and those of our allies will speak even plainer language in the Balkans than heretofore. Our victories would be the best means of influencing the Greek Parliamentary elections in closest interests of Greece herself."

The Lokal Anzeiger says it was known that Venizelos had a majority and that it was to be expected he would take the first opportunity to unseat the Cabinet. The question is whether it will avail him anything. It continues: "After the happenings of the last week it is not to be supposed King Constantine will now suddenly bow to the will of the statesman who twice had to go because he put himself in open opposition to the views of the Crown. King Constantine has proved himself, in the great difficulties of the last months, to be a calm and decided politician, and he will continue, in harmony with the will of his people to guard the interests of Greece in the same positive fashion."

The Post, speaks in a similar vein.

It declares the Greek Government will not permit itself to be misled, but will follow the aims it considers to be for the well-being of the country.

The Boersen Zeitung says:

"We can await calmly the developments from the new Ministerial crisis. So long as King Constantine remains firm—and we have no reason to expect anything else — even the agents of the quadruple entente will not be able to precipitate the country into the adventure of war."

PORK REDUCED 10 CENTS A POUND IN BERLIN

BERLIN, (by wireless telegraph to Sayville, L.I.), Nov. 10. — There has been a decline in the retail prices of pork in Berlin of ten cents a pound. It was due to the drop in wholesale prices last week on account of large shipments of hogs to Berlin stock yards for sale before the enforcement of the maximum price regulations made by the Federal Council.

DISEASE DISMEMBERS BODY

Twenty Victims of "Renaud's Disease" in the United States.

LA PORTE, Ind., Nov. 9. — Mrs. Paul Cole, of this city, is one of the twenty victims of Renaud's disease in the United States and has just passed through her fifteenth operation. Mrs. Cole's case began with the swelling of the small toe of one foot, then the toes of her other foot began to swell. Physicians began to operate in the hope of arresting the progress of the disease until now both of her feet have been removed above the ankle.

It is said that in the twenty cases which have been reported the disease progresses until the body frequently becomes almost dismembered, legs and arms being amputated until death finally results.

HOW YOU MAY THROW AWAY YOUR GLASSES

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not really need them. If you are one of these unfortunates, then these glasses may be ruining your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can dispense with glasses if they will get the following prescription filled at once. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets; fill a two-ounce bottle with warm water and drop in one Bon Opto tablet. With this harmless liquid solution bathe the eyes two to four times daily, and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astigmatism, eye-strain, cataract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, conjunctivitis and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefits from the use of this prescription. Get this prescription filled and use it; you may so strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Thousands who are blind or nearly so, or who wear glasses, might never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late. Do not become one of these victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only like crutches, and every few years they must be changed to fit the ever-increasing weakened condition, so better see if you can, like many others, get clear, healthy strong magnetic eyes through the prescription here given. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

130 SABLE PELTS IN A COAT WORTH $35,000

Fur Trade Indicates No Lack of Money in United States.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9 — A Russian sable coat, which cost $35,000 and contains 130 perfect sable pelts, has been sent to Washington to the wife of a diplomat representative. A French actress here shortly will receive from the same American firm a sable coat costing $30,000 and containing 120 pelts. According to furriers these coats represent the extreme activity in furs this season, an activity not equalled in twenty years.

NEW BRITISH EXPEDITION STARTS AGAINST TURKS

A Flying Column of Three Regiments Off From Aden Into the Arabian Hinterland

SINGAPORE, Sept. 25 (Letter) — A new and relatively big movement against the Turks is on foot, with Aden as the base. The Malay States Guides (Sikhs) left on a British India Steam Navigation Co. transport today, full strength, for Aden. Two Punjabi regiments are reported to be proceeding to the same place from India.

It is understood here that the three regiments are to form a flying column, which will radiate from Aden to subjugate Arab tribes and Turkish forces in that vicinity, and that it will probably eventually strike to the north and place as much of the surrounding country under British sovereignty as possible. Turkish reinforcements have been reported in that vicinity, and every one expects the force to have a lively time of it. A camel corps from Egypt is to join them. The Guides are under the command of Lieut.-Col. Borton. There is some speculation as to what Indian officer will be made commanding officer.

With the Guides out of the Straits Settlements, the last Regular has left. Military matters hereafter will be entirely in the hands of the volunteer corps, which are mobilized now at all points. A conscription (ordinance law) has been passed, and every male British citizen of pure European descent is forced to serve.

Arrangements are made so as to permit business being carried on by allowing only part of the office staff of any firm to be on active duty at the same time. However, business has become more or less of a hodge-podge affair as a result.

WHAT CAUSES COLDS?

This question is asked every day. A cold is really a fever, not always caused by the weather but often due to disordered blood or lack of important food-elements. In changing seasons fat-foods are essential because they distribute heat by enriching the blood and so render the system better able to withstand the varying elements. This is the important reason why Scott's Emulsion should always be taken for colds, and it does more—builds strength to prevent sickness.

Scott's Emulsion contains Nature's rare strength-building fats, so skillfully blended that the blood profits from every drop. It is free from harmful drugs. Sold at drug stores—always get the genuine.

Dandruff Soon Ruins the Hair

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon, apply it at night when retiring, use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging on the scalp will stop and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get the liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

ALL WAR ORDERS PLACED

Last of $80,000,000 Contract Now in Hands of Manufacturers.

OTTAWA, Nov 9 — The last of the new orders for munitions, aggregating $80,000,000, were sent out by wire to-day to manufacturing firms in various parts of the Dominion. The munition committee has been advised as to the capacity of all of them, and orders relative to capacity have been awarded. Every factory, large and small, capable of manufacturing munitions of war, is receiving orders.

So fewer than 151 cities and towns of the Dominion are now working on these munitions, and for several months from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 has been paid out each month. With the new orders and the increased output, however, the payment will increase at once to $20,000,000 per month.

Gordon Craig

Soldier of Fortune — by Randall Parrish

Copyright, 1912, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

"Yes, and we cannot afford to be conventional, can we? . . . Miss Viola Bernard, and I must tell my story to some one. I can fight fate alone no longer. Perhaps I may not confess everything, for I do not know you well enough for that, but enough at least so you will no longer suspect that I am a bad woman."

"I could never really believe that."

"Oh, yes, you could. I have read in your face that my character puzzles you. You invited me to drink a cocktail to try me. Don't protest, for really I do not wonder at it or blame you in the least. How could you think otherwise? There is a home I could return to, and a mother, but they are more than a thousand miles from here. But I cannot go, even if I possessed the means, because of my pride—my false pride possibly. I have chosen my course and must abide by it to the end."

She drew a long breath, speaking very slowly.

"It is a hard story to tell, for the wound is still fresh and hurts. I was upon the stage—not long, but with sufficient success so that I had become leading woman with one of the best stock companies. It was against my mother's wish I entered the profession, and she has never become reconciled to it, although our relationship remained pleasant. A few months ago while playing in Omaha I met Fred Bernard. I knew little of him, but he appeared gentlemanly and well to do and was presented to me by one in whom I had confidence. He was pleasant and apparently in love with me. I liked him, was flattered by his attentions and discouraged in my ambition. When he asked me to marry him conditions were such that I accepted, even consented under his urging to an immediate ceremony. We came to this city, were quietly married here and occupied a flat on the north side. My husband did no work, but received remittances from home and apparently had plenty of means. He told me little about himself or his condition, but promised to take me to his people in a little while. He said his father was wealthy, but eccentric; that he had told him of our marriage, but there had been a quarrel between them, and he could not take me there without an apology. . . . [illegible] down the letters, but they bore southern postmarks."

She paused, hesitating, her eyes full of pain.

"I—I was afraid to question, for—for he proved so different after our marriage. He was a drunkard, abusive and quarrelsome. I had never before been in intimate contact with any one like that, and I was afraid of him. Whatever of love I might have felt died within me under abuse. He struck me the second day, and from that moment I dreaded his homecoming. For weeks I scarcely saw him sober, and his treatment of me was brutal."

Tears were in her eyes, but she held them back, forcing herself to go on.

"Then he was gone two days and nights, leaving me alone. He reappeared the third evening in the worst condition I had ever seen him. He acted like a veritable savage, cursing and striking at me and finally drove me from the house, flourishing a revolver in my face and locking the door behind me. I—I sat there on the steps an hour and endeavored to go back, but there was no response. I walked the streets and then—having a little money with me—found a place to lodge. The next day I went back, but the flat was locked still, and neighbors said my husband had left with a traveling bag. I—I was actually thrown out upon the streets to starve."

Her voice lowered so that I was compelled to lean closer to catch the rapidly spoken words.

"At first I—I was not altogether sorry. I thought it would be easy to find work. I was not afraid of that, but—but it was not easy. Oh, how hard I tried! I faced open insult, cowardly insinuation, brutal coarseness. If I had been skilled in any business line my reception might have been different; if I possessed recommendations or could have frankly confessed the truth perhaps I might have been given a chance. I endeavored so hard to discover some opening; I even sought domestic service and was examined as though I was a horse on sale. I walked the streets; I refused to despair or permit myself to believe failure possible. I went home at night, tired out, to a little rented room in Forty-ninth street, prayed as I used to when a child, cried myself to sleep, only to wake up the next morning determined to continue. I was not weak then; I was as strong as any girl could be. I—I fought it out to the very last"—her head suddenly drooping—"but—but the end came just the same. Perhaps I should never have hung on so long; perhaps it would have been better to have sent word to my mother and asked help to go home. But—but I kept hoping to succeed until it was too late. I spent all the little money I had and pawned my rings. I had married against my mother's wish. I could not turn to her for help. Oh, I was tempted; I think you must know what I mean! You realize what temptation is—how it weakens and conquers the soul?"

I closed my hand firmly over hers.

"Yes, I know."

Her sensitive face brightened, her eyes clearing of mist.

"It is a comfort to speak with a gentleman again. I—I had almost begun to believe there were none left in the world. You give me courage to go on, to acknowledge everything. Mr Craig, I was a scout tottering on the brink when I met you out yonder—a desperate, disheartened girl, tempted to the point of surrender."

My fingers closed yet more tightly over the small hand, but her face remained rigid the lines deep about the mouth.

"The landlady had turned me out," speaking now bitterly and swiftly, "retaining my few belongings. I had nothing left—nothing. For a week I had listened to no kind word, met with no kind act. I was upon the street alone at night, purposeless, homeless, wandering aimlessly from place to place, weakened by hunger, stupefied by despair.

"I found myself out among the residences, where everything was still and lonely, walking, walking, walking, every shadow appearing like a ghost. I sat down to rest on the curbing, but a policeman drove me away. Once I crept into a darkened vestibule in a big apartment building, but another discovered me there and threatened to take me to the station. The night grew misty and damp, but I found no shelter. I had no will power left, no womanhood, no remorse. It was thus I came there to that corner. I heard the policeman approaching along the side street and terrified, sprang into the yard to escape, then—then I met you."

"Tell me," I questioned earnestly, "what caused you to interfere between me and the officer?"

"What! Oh, I hardly know," a touch of hysteria in the nervous exclamation. "I was compelled to choose instantly between his mercy and yours. The—the difference seemed small enough then, but—but I realized you were frightened also, and—and so I preferred to trust you. That was all. It was my fate, and—and, well I didn't care much how it ended."

"But you endeavored to escape from me. You sought to compel my leaving you?"

She lifted her face again, flushing, saddened, slightly indignant, the brown eyes widening.

"Perhaps the soul was not all dead," she returned gravely. "Perhaps womanhood was not all gone. I did not know you. I was in terror. But now I am not afraid. I believe I have found a man—and a friend."

I was conscious of a sudden wild throb of the heart, a swift rush of blood through my veins.

"I might have doubted that myself awhile ago," I acknowledged almost bitterly, "but now I am going to make good. Lord, how a fellow can run to seed when he lets himself go! Don't you know you are helping me as much as I am you? You didn't find much out there—only a drunken discharged soldier, an ex-hobo with a laborer's job. I've wasted my chance in life and been an infernal fool. I can see that plain enough and despise myself for it. I knew it before you came. The difference was then I didn't care, while now I do. You have made me care. Yes, you have, girl," as she glanced up again, plainly startled by this unexpected avowal. "You see, you belong to my class, little girl, and—and you are the first of them to speak a kind word to me in five years. It's—it's a bit tough to be cut dead by your own class."

It was her hand, white and slender, which reached shyly across the table and touched mine, but her eyes alone made answer.

"That is all right," I continued, my voice shaking. "I understand how you feel. But this is no fit place for your kind. You better go home to your mother."

She shook her head with decision.

"Why not? Is she hard?"

"Yes. She would be very hard with me."

"Do you mean you would rather risk it here with—with me than go back and face her?"

"Yes, even that," she replied soberly. "I have courage to fight it out here, but not there. I know what it will mean if I go back—reproaches, gossip, ostracism, all the petty meannesses of a small town. I loathe the very thought. I am strong again, and I will not go. It is between God and me, this decision—between God and me." She drooped her head, hiding her face upon her arms, her shoulders trembling. "You—you may despise me. You may think me the lowest of the low, but I—I am going to stay here."

I sat in silence, amazed, puzzled, gazing across at her, my hands clinched.

"You actually mean you dare risk yourself here—with me?"

"With your help, with you as a friend to talk to—yes."

"But stop and think what I am," I urged recklessly. "A mere hobo."

"No," she said earnestly. "You are not that. You are a man."

For a long minute I did not answer, unable to determine what to do, how to act. We had both finished our meal, and there was no excuse for lingering longer at the table.

"You will go with me, then?"

"Yes."

CHAPTER IV.
We Go South.

I PUSHED back my chair, and she arose also, following me without question as I passed across to the door. The cashier nodded to my good night, and I opened the door for her passage to the street. The mist of the cloudy night had blown away by an increasing breeze. The air was warm and the sky brightening in the east. I glanced aside into her face and led the way into a nearby park. the two of us trudging along a well kept gravel path until I discovered a bench hidden from observation amid surrounding shrubbery.

"I've simply got to think this whole matter out," I explained simply. "It's happened so unexpectedly I'm stumped as to what had better be done."

She remained standing, resting one hand on the back of the settee, a slender figure, neatly enough dressed, yet exhibiting evidence of her long night's wandering.

"You mean I am a problem? You—you do not know what to do with me?"

I glanced at her, surprised by the change in her voice.

"Naturally a young woman is usually a problem, isn't she? This particular one has come with a suddenness sufficient to jar anybody's nerves. Three hours ago I was without responsibility, a mere log adrift on the current. I've hardly wakened up yet to the change in conditions. Here I am a fellow so utterly worthless that I haven't even been able to take decent care of myself alone, yet all at once the duty fronts me to double my responsibilities."

Her cheeks reddened

TORTURED BY RHEUMATISM

Sunday School Supt. Tells How "Fruit-a-tives" Relieved

TORONTO, ONT., Oct. 1st, 1913.

"I have lived in this city for more than 12 years and am well known. I suffered from Rheumatism, especially in my hands. I spent a lot of money without any good results. I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" for 18 months now and am pleased to tell you that I am well. All the enlargement has not left my hands, and perhaps never will, but the soreness is all gone and I can do any kind of work. I have gained 35 pounds in eighteen months."

Japanese in Foreign Countries.

Recent figures of the Japanese foreign office show that 853,000 Japanese subjects are living abroad. In the United States are 80,000; Hawaii, 80,000; Philippine Islands, 5,000; China, 110,000; Australia, 6,000; Canada, 12,000; France, 129; Great Britain, 478, and Germany, 434.

Cancer From Pitch.

The use of pitch in making fuel briquettes in England is said to cause a form of cancer among workers.

Not of That Denomination.

While a sergeant of a certain regiment was engaged with a company of the National Reservists a short time ago in physical drill—a drill that demands, to say the least of it, a small amount of agility—a private, who looked as if he had been younger in his day, complained to the non-commissioned officer in charge that he was too old for that sort of practice.

"How old are you?" said the instructor.

"Fifty-three," said the private.

"Why," exclaimed the instructor, "the Romans used to do this sort of thing at the age of sixty."

"That may be," said the private, "but I'm not a Roman; I'm a Wesleyan."

"VORWAERTS" SUPPRESSED.

Outspoken Berlin Newspaper Runs Foul of Authorities.

LONDON, Nov 9 The Evening Post publishes a despatch from The Hague saying that the Berlin Vorwaerts has been suppressed temporarily.

The Vorwaerts is one of the leading Socialist newspapers of Germany, and is the organ of the Social-Democrat party. It has been in collision with the government on several occasions, and twice previously during the war was suspended temporarily. Last week it published a Socialistic pronouncement of criticizing adversely government measures for regulation of the supply and distribution of food.

Paying Sandy Back.

Sandy loved Jeanie, but loved his "bawbees" a little more. He took her to town one market day, and after expending half a crown on admission to the fair, refused to part with any more money. As a result when Jeanie reached her mother at night she was faint with hunger.

"Did Sandy no buy you something to eat?" the mother asked.

"Not a bite all day," replied the girl.

Her mother hoping to humiliate Sandy, gave her half a crown to take to him, with her compliments. Jeanie wrapped at Sandy's door and when he appeared, said:

"Here, Sandy, is the half crown ye spent on me the day."

Sandy promptly pocketed the coin saying: "It would hae dune just as weel in the mornin'."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

In the Nick of Time

An Old Fashioned Story of the Western Plains

By John Thorndike

Copyright by American Press Association

There are oceans of land just as there are oceans of water. At least beyond the Mississippi river there are regions which, viewed from the tops of the mountains looking eastward, have the appearance of great seas. Descending, one finds a vast level plain through which run few streams, and those that exist, having no foliage on their banks, are without beauty. The ground, which is often rolling, is usually covered with no flora except cactus, whose spears are like bayonets.

One afternoon a young man wearing trousers of buffalo skin, a woolen shirt and a sombrero sat on his horse, shading his eyes from the sun with his hand, peering at something in the distance. He was on the crest of one of the land rollers and managed to make out, a couple of miles away, the white top of a plains schooner.

A little puff of smoke appeared near it, followed by a faint crack, then another and another at intervals. He heard responsive cracks, but the land lay so that he could not see from whom they came. But he knew that he was in the country of the Apache, and persons firing from behind a wagon meant white men defending themselves from the most savage tribe of Indians. The picture told him more than this. One wagon did not indicate many whites, whereas there were plenty of Indians about. Again, a wagon was almost surely indicative of a moving family in which there were likely to be women and children.

These conclusions did not require reasoning process. They came to Jim

THREW THEIR ARMS ABOUT EACH OTHER.

Buckers like a flash. Had he been especially interested in his own welfare he would have beaten a retreat, for the picture that he could see, taken with what he could not see, told him that the travelers' bones would soon be whitening on the plain and if he should go to their assistance his own bones would whiten with them.

But, in the first place, Buckers put no great value on his own life, and, in the second, he was not the man to run away from such a responsibility. He was like a rudderless boat tossed about upon the waters. Plains life is not conducive to homemaking, especially when there is little to do except punch cows, and there are few women to tame the men who make homes. Indeed, the prospect of a fight even in a losing cause, was not unwelcome to Buckers. Quickly descending into the hollow between two rollers, he rode with all haste toward the wagon till he knew by the loud cracking of rifles that those firing were near by on the other side of one of the rollers. Dismounting, he ascended the slope crawling as he neared the summit, and lying flat, he surveyed the scene on the other side through cacti.

A family consisting of father, mother, several boys ranging from twelve to eighteen years old and a girl of twenty were using the wagon as a rampart by which to protect themselves against three or four times their number of Indians, who were approaching from comparatively level ground, the redskins being widely scattered with a view to preventing their enemies concentrating their fire and that they might take the party on the flanks as well as the center.

That the whites had sufficient arms was evident from the fact that every one of them, including the two women, held a breechloading rifle, a comparatively new gun in those days. He who was evidently the father of the family was giving his little army orders as to the direction of their fire so that it would be properly distributed. They were doing their best to pick off the redskins, but the latter were so wary in exposing themselves that it was difficult to hit them.

Buckers returned to his horse, unhooked his rifle and, removing all the ammunition he had in his saddlebags, placed it in his hat. Besides this ammunition, his belt was full of cartridges. Taking his load up to the crest, he shoved the muzzle of his gun out between the cactus and was ready to commence operations.

Meanwhile the Indians had changed their tactics. They were concentrating on their center preparatory to charging the wagon. It was plain to the whites that they were lost. In a quick dash of the Indians some of them might be killed or disabled, but there would be plenty left to tomahawk their enemies. The father's voice trembled as he said:

"Let us die hard."

But at that moment a surprise occurred to both whites and redskins. The former heard a crack behind them, and the latter saw a puff of smoke on the crest. One of the Indians fell dead. Buckers instead of firing again from the same spot scrambled to a point a few yards to his right and from there sent another bullet. Without waiting to see what damage he had done he moved and fired again.

The Indians paused in their advance. Buckers had produced already the impression that there were at least several persons on the crest, and since he kept up a fire from different points it was impossible for the savages to tell how many there were in this re-enforcement.

Equally interested in Buckers were the party directly beneath him. They were casting quick glances over their shoulders, hoping to see a party of armed whites come over the crest to their assistance. But when Buckers called to them to keep up their fire, that he was alone, there was disappointment. But there was hope. The father, seeing the advantage of Buckers' strategy, encouraged his family, at the same time admonishing them not to fire except at an especial redskin.
